MISCELLANY.

SHINGLING THE STATE HOUSE.

What a deal of curiosity there is in the world! How curious is man, and how curious is the world itself! Examination makes everything appear curious. Now, in a large and beautiful city like our own, where there is so much to admire, where change is the order of the day, and it is the law of nature, it is natural that there should be a great deal of curiosity in a particular inquisitive sense. For instance, if a man takes it into his head to pull down his old house, and build anew, it is requisite that he should give the why and the wherefore, fully and explicitly to the community. A partial explanation will not answer—it must reach from the foundation to the roof, and this, too, to each member of society. The hour appointed for the completion of the enterprise—the force employed—cost—object—whether it is being built with cash or on time, are all essential points. Fault is found with our plans, and an incredible amount of advice is freely proffered, which you are a great fool if you reject. If the house is to have three stories, it will be a matter of wonder that a fourth floor is not added. Alterations in the plan will be suggested with a freedom which is curious to one who may have contracted the queer habit of minding your own business. Our population of over three hundred thousand, must be relieved of their curiosity, even where the subject is of no greater consequence than the shingling of a house. Impertinent as it may appear, this is nothing but curiosity after all!

Mention has been made of shingling—as we write the State House has been honored in this respect. While the workmen were erecting the scaffolding, Mr. Wm. Eckel, the polite superintendent of the building, was fearfully annoyed by the questions of a curious public.

What are they going to do here? said a little fat man, with green specs, one day.

Shingle the house, replied the keeper, for the one thousandth time that morning.

What nonsense! exclaimed specs, why don't they pull the old rookery down, and put up a handsome marble building, with green blinds to the windows, and a magnificent observatory on the top? We have a great set of fools in our city government. They'll go and patch this State House up, and what will it all amount to—why just nothing? I wouldn't continue the indignant and emphatic specs.

I wouldn't give the loss of a copper for such legislation. No! the father of the federal constitution would never have acted in this way.

Believed, but indignant still, specs walked down street. In a minute, a tall, thin-faced man, with a heavy watch chain dangling from his fob, made his appearance.

What's the meaning of all this scaffolding? he inquired.

About to shingle, sir.

Ah, that indeed.

Yes, sir.

Why, bless my soul, it will be attended with considerable expense, won't it?

Well, yes, sir, I expect it will cost something.

How much do you suppose?

I can't say, indeed.

You can't say!

No sir.

this elevated undertaking. It is the drollest thing in life.

The tall gentleman had hardly turned on his heel, when an old man with a cane stepped up.

What are you at here?

Shingling, sir.

Oh, ho, ahem!

Yes, sir.

Roof leak?

In one or two places.

How often has the building been shingled since it was built?

I don't know, sir.

Will it take long to do the job?

That will depend upon circumstances.

Ah, yes, of course, but it is a curious time of the year to shingle—right in the rainy season.

If it had been me, now, I'd have gone to work in May, or June, or July, or August, at any rate—somewhere about there, not far from that any way as the old woman said when she was telling the time of day. September is the last month I'd have chosen.

The old gentleman sauntered into the square. An elderly countrywoman came next.

Is this the State House? she inquired.

Yes, ma'am.

Well, what on airth are you a doing to it? Why it looks just for all the world as if you'd a baricaded it?

We're putting on a new roof, ma'am.

Do tell. Why, that will be quite a smart job, won't it?

Yes, ma'am, its pretty much of an undertaking.

Well, now, I want you to tell me whether this is the identical spot where the Fourth of July was first set out as the day of independence.

Yes, ma'am, it is.

And so they're roofin it at last.

Roofin what, ma'am?

The house, to be sure.

Did you ever see the man what writ the Declaration?

No, ma'am.

Don't he ever come here now?

No, ma'am.

Well, that is curious.

He's dead, ma'am.

You don't tell me! Of all things! Well that is news. It was only last week that me and my old man was talking of him, and now to hear that he is dead. It couldn't a come truer if I'd a dreamt it. Of all things! Won't my old man be surprised when he hears it?

The old lady was interrupted by a little military man with a long nose and a voice between a squeak and a whine.

I say, he squeaked, 'what's all this?'

Shingling.

What's that for?

To keep the rain out.

Why, the rain don't come in does it?

Yes, sir.

How is that?

The roof leaks.

How long has it leaked?

Some time.

Why wasn't it done before?

I can't say.

The fact is, this building is unproductive as applied to its present uses. They ought to put up an entirely new building, and make a military academy out of this. Its a purty position, and I'd subscribe something towards the plan. True, echelon movements could only be taught in theory, and cavalry would find some difficulty in reducing their drill to practice—still the position is admirable, and the associations are of the most refreshing and patriotic character. Don't you understand? whined the little fellow, preparing to make a still stronger demonstration, as an exquisitely dressed young man inquired:

Will you have the goodness, aw, to explain, aw, the meaning of this disfiguring array, aw, of timber?

Shingling.

Weally.

Yes, sir.

Which of the great parties, aw, are intertwined in this movement?

I can't answer, sir.

Ah, positively. I suppose it must, aw, be those gwawians.

Perhaps so.

It's an infraction, sir, aw, on our wights! Quite so! The reflection, is a howible one, that those rough, aw, unlettered planks, aw, can be put, aw, in Chesnut street, aw, where gentlemen, aw, are accustomed to walk, aw!

This settled the matter. Afraid of further infliction, the keeper ran to his room, but soon appeared, with a half sheet of letter paper, on which was written in a bold, round hand, the following words:

SHINGLING THE STATE HOUSE.

ASK NO QUESTIONS!

He posted this notice against one of the upright supporters of the scaffolding, and it has answered a very good purpose. About five out of every ten take the hint, and pass on without inquiry. Verrily, we are a curious people.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

CANDID. Mr. Gough, the temperance lecturer, said, in a lecture recently, that he had so little confidence in his own power to resist temptation, and so fearful, lest at any time he should again fall, that no sum of money, however large, no prospect of worldly advantage, would induce him to pass a night in a room, with no companion but a bottle of brandy.

UNHAPPY MARRIAGES.

There is a common understanding, that for a woman to seek a husband, either by force or by fraud, is both a violation of good manners, and a risk of moral virtue.

And yet that this is sometimes done, and with woful effect, is not to be disputed. This is not unfrequently the result of the most infamous practice of match-making, which obtains in some sections of country. A scheme is devised by one or more minds, which shall in its progressive development, ensnare an old or young man as the case may be, and place him in such a situation that his conduct or conversation may be an implied promise of marriage, a thing which he never could have hoped for, and which, because he never thought of it, he never feared. But no sooner are the plans fairly adjusted, and in efficient operation, than incidental disclosures advise him of the real state of things. Most gladly would this unsuspecting victim of a combination now hasten his escape from the windy storm and tempest; but it is too late, he is threatened with the penalties of the law, and the anathemas of religion. The state is invoked to unsheathe the sword of civil power, and the church is called upon to fulminate her thunders, and all to satisfy the pure love of some venerable widow, or still more venerable virgin. Terrified by such an array, the party most deeply interested consents to be persecuted into a married life. The parties have a special meeting in the presence of select friends, a marriage contract is formed, (shame, where is thy blush!) writings are drawn, and an agreement entered into; it is signed, sealed, and delivered. And what is its import? Why, that the parties will live together as man and wife, but have no part or interest in each other's property; these are, by previous stipulations, as separate as before the marriage, and are watched over with increased solicitude and jealousy proportioned to the increase of danger. I submit it to any one to say whether there is not here a most shameless exhibition of two of the most unseemly passions of human nature grappling with each other, licentiousness and avarice. In this case, the woman declares in the presence of God and man, that she does love, and will love, a man whom she has taken as her husband for better or worse, and to whom she actually commits the keeping of her person, but still she would not trust him with even a few hundred dollars.

Can it be said, in truth, of any two persons after such an arrangement, that they are no more twain, but one flesh? Are they not two in every sense but one? It is admitted that they live in the same house, and form a part of the same family compact, but they have two separate hearts, interests, and agencies; we may excuse—

The wild herd of nymphs and swains,
That thoughtless fly into the chains,
As custom leads the way.

The weakness and thoughtlessness of youth are their apology, but there is no apology for persons of this class, who, with the coolness of philosophy, and the cupidity of avarice, take upon themselves the vows of a married life, after having entered into such stipulations, as, to a great extent, divest it of half its interest, and neutralize the ends of the appointment.

THOUGHTS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS.

We have just religion enough to make us hate, but not enough to make us love one another.

When we desire or solicit anything, our minds run wholly on the good side or circumstances of it; when it is obtained, our mind runs only on the bad ones.

I am apt to think that, in the day of judgment, there will be small allowance given to the wise for their want of morals, or to the ignorant for their want of faith, because both are without excuse. This renders the advantages equal of ignorance and knowledge. But some scruples in the wise, and some vices in the ignorant, will perhaps be forgiven upon the strength of temptation to each.

I have known some men possessed of good qualities, which were very serviceable to others, but useless to themselves; like the sundial on the front of the house, to inform the neighbors and passengers, but not the owner within.

The social scheme of supplying our wants by lopping off our desires, is like cutting off our feet when we want shoes.

The power of fortune is confessed only by the miserable, for the unhappy impute all their success to prudence and merit.

Censure is the tax a man payeth to the public for being eminent.

An idle reason lessons the weight of the good ones you gave before.

Complaint is the largest tribute heaven receives, and the sincerest part of our devotion.

The common fluency of speech in many men and most women, is owing to a scarcity of matter and scarcity of words; for whoever is a master of language, and hath a mind full of ideas, will be apt, in speaking, to hesitate upon the choice of both; whereas common speakers have only one set of ideas, and one set of words to clothe them in, and these are always ready at the mouth. Some people come faster out of a church when it is almost empty, than when a crowd is at the door.

To be vain is rather a mark of humility than pride. Vain men delight in telling what honors have been done them, what great company they have kept, and the like; by which they plainly confess that these honors were more than their due, and such as their friends would not believe if they had not been told; whereas a man truly proud thinks the greatest honors below his merit, and consequently scorns to boast. I therefore deliver it as a maxim, that whoever desires the character of a proud man, ought to conceal his vanity.

If a man maketh me keep my distance, the comfort is, he keepeth his at the same time.

Very few men, properly speaking, live at present, but are providing to live another time.—Swift.

HINTS

To People of Moderate Fortune.

Luxuries are cheaper now than necessities were a few years since; yet it is a lamentable fact, that it costs more to live now, than it did formerly. When silk was nine shillings per yard, seven or eight yards sufficed for a dress; now it is four or five shillings, sixteen or twenty yards will hardly satisfy the mantuamaker.

If this extravagance was confined to the wealthiest classes, it would be productive of more good than evil. But if the rich have a new dress every fortnight, people of a moderate fortune will have one every month. In this way finery becomes the standard of respectability; a man's cloth is of more consequence than his character.

Men of fixed salaries spend every cent of their income, and then leave their children to depend on the precarious charity and reluctant friendship of a world they have wasted their substance to please. Men who rush into enterprise and speculation keep up their credit by splendor, and should they sink, they and their families carry with them extravagant habits to corrode their spirits with discontent, perchance to tempt them into crime. I know we are extravagant, said one of my acquaintance, the other day; but how can I help it? My husband does not like to see his wife and daughters dress more meanly than those with whom they associate. Then, my dear lady, your husband has not as much moral dignity, and moral courage, as I thought he had. He should be content to see his wife and daughters respected for neatness, good taste, and attractive manners. This sounds very well in talk, replied the lady; but say what you will about pleasing and intelligent girls nobody will attend to them unless they dress in the fashion, neat style you recommend, they would see all their acquaintance asked to dance more frequently than themselves, and not a gentleman would join them in Cornhill.

I do not believe this in so extensive a sense as you do. Girls may appear genteelly without being extravagant; and though some fops may know the approved color for a ribbon, or the newest arrangement for trimming, I believe gentlemen of real character merely notice whether a lady's dress is generally in good taste, or not. But granting your statement to be true in its widest sense, of what consequence is it? How much will the whole happiness of your daughter's life be affected by her dancing some fifty times less than her companions, or wasting some few hours less in the empty conversation of foxcombs? A man often admires a style of dress, which he would not venture to support in a wife. Extravagance has prevented many marriages, and rendered still more unhappy. And should your daughters fail in forming good connexions, what have you to leave them, save extravagant habits too deeply rooted to be eradicated. Think you those who now laugh at them for a soiled glove, or an unfashionable ribbon, will assist their poverty or cheer their neglected old age? No; they would find them as cold and selfish as they are vain. A few thousands in the bank are worth all the fashionable friends in Christendom.

Whether my friend was convinced or not, I cannot say; but I saw her daughters in Cornhill the next week with new French hats and blonde veils.

It is really melancholy to see how this fever of extravagance rages, and how it is sapping the strength of our happy country. It has no bounds—it pervades all ranks, and characterizes all ages.

These things ought not to be. Every man and woman should lay up some portion of their income, whether that income be large or small.—Lydia M. Child.

NEWSPAPER BORROWERS.

I want you to go over to Mr. Mason's, and borrow me his newspaper, said a man well to do in the world, to his son Robert, a lad of thirteen.

But, father, he can't have had it more than an hour, remonstrated Robert.

All the better for that, my son; I like to see the news before it is old.

But I don't think Mr. Mason has had time to read it himself. The last time I went to borrow it for you, he said he had hardly looked into it, and he seemed as if he did not wish to lend it.

He is very disobliging, then, to be unwilling to lend a newspaper to a neighbor.

Why, he pays for it, and shouldn't he have the first reading of it?

Don't talk about what you don't understand, Robert, but go to Mr. Mason, and ask for the paper.

Robert slowly and reluctantly obeyed, and in a few minutes returned with the borrowed paper, which the owner had not yet found opportunity to open.

And this is but one among a multitude of incidents of similar character, which are constantly occurring, to the great annoyance, and sometimes to the serious disadvantage of those who subscribe and pay regularly for the newspapers which they read. Numerous instances of constant and indiscriminate borrowing, in which the lender has been exposed to much inconvenience, and vexation, have come within my own personal observation. Quite recently, I heard a gentleman remark, that when he commenced taking a certain newspaper, he resolved that he would never lend it, until he had first read it himself. He persisted in this determination, notwithstanding considerable importunity on the part of some of his neighbors, until about three months after his subscription, the paper was regularly missing for several hours after it should have made its appearance. The paper-carrier was accustomed to leave it on a table in an outer entry of the house. The gentleman ascertained that a near neighbor, who took no newspaper in the regular and honest way, and whose property was more than three times as much as his own, was in the habit of watching the carrier, and possessing himself of the paper as soon as it was left. After reading it to his satisfaction, he returned and replaced it.

In view of such cases—and they are by far more numerous than is generally supposed—we have but one word of advice for the newspaper borrowers—Subscribe, and pay regularly for your papers.—Traveller.

SOUND TRUTH AND GOOD ADVICE. My young friends—I wish to impress it upon your minds, that others don't care so much for you as you imagine. They no doubt, would like to see you do well in the world; but they are not going five miles out of the way to do you a good turn. So if you wish to obtain the summit of honor, wealth and distinction, you must spit on your hands, stick in your toe-nails and climb away, without waiting for somebody to give you a boost.—Don, Jr.

MRS. PARTINGTON ON SLANDERERS. "If there is any body under the canopy of heaven that I have in utter exorcism," said Mrs. Partington, "it is a tale-bearer and slanderer, going about like a vile boat-constructor, circulating his calumnies about honest folks."

PERPETUITY OF MORAL INFLUENCE. We see not in this life, the end of human actions. Their influence never dies. In ever-widening circles it reaches beyond the grave. Death removes us from this to another world—time determines what shall be our condition in that world. Every morning when we go forth, we lay the moulding hand on our destiny, and evening when we have done, we have left a deathless impression upon our character. We touch not a wire but vibrates in eternity—not a voice but reports at the throne of God. Let youth, especially, think of these things.

HOW TO EAT FRUIT. When you eat a peach, never brush away the down that adheres to the skin as it is a corrective against any evil quality in the fruit. This is from an old and intelligent physician. In eating apples, too, great care is taken by most persons, to reject the core. That contains influence that counteracts the causes of summer complaint, etc. These facts, not generally known, may be serviceable in preserving health.

ELOQUENCE. An Illinois lawyer, defending a thief, wound up his speech to the jury in behalf of his injured client with the following rousing appeal: "True, he was rude—so air our bears. True, he was rough—so air our buffaloes. But he was a child of freedom, and his answer to the despot and tyrant was, that his home was on the bright setting sun."

TEA. The exports of tea from Canton to the United States, from the 1st of July, 1846, to the 20th of May, 1847, was as follows: 4,968,555 pounds black, and 14,579,718 pounds green—total, 19,548,273. The total exports during the same period in 1845-6, was 16,377,543 pounds.

COMPLIMENTARY DESCRIPTION. The Mexican soldier, regular or volunteer, seems to like the excitement of a rapid retreat. When his position begins to look dangerous, he takes to flight, disappears, and preserves his life for a more fortunate occasion. In a day or two he is in the field again, with buttons newly polished, looking as war-like as ever, and ready for a fight or a flight, as the case may be.

AMERICAN ART. The exhibition of the "Greek Slave" of Powers in New York city, has proved to be eminently successful. It has been opened to the public but little more than two weeks, and Mr. Kellogg is already enabled to make a remittance of two thousand dollars by the Boston steamer, to his friend Powers.

RATHER A QUEER HEART. At the public dinner given in Cork on the arrival of the Macedonian, "Father Taylor" described Commodore DeKay as having "a heart as large as the moon, and as open as the sun-flower."

Pretty considerable of a heart that, as well as pretty tolerably exposed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MONTREAL, Aug. 10th, 1847.

FRIEND GREEN—The longer I stay here the more I like the city; every thing is so neat and well regulated. The streets, many of them are wide, straight, well paved and kept exceedingly clean. A well organized police is stationed throughout the city, both day and night, and the disgraceful and noisy disturbances, seen and heard in many cities, are here almost unknown.

To-day, I have been up to the Champ d' Mars, to see the parade of all the troops stationed in the city, the parade ground is ample and was surrounded with a large collection of people, who, notwithstanding most of them witness the same every week, yet they assemble in large crowds. Never did I see a finer looking set of men, or a more thoroughly drilled regiment of soldiers, than this royal regiment. Each one knows his place and was sure to be there. Every order was obeyed promptly and each movement made with precision. The royal band discoursed some delightful music. The parade generally lasts about two hours.

Prominent among the finest buildings in the city, stands the French Catholic Cathedral, more commonly called Notre Dame Cathedral. It stands on Notre Dame Street, on one of the highest points in the city, and has a most noble and commanding appearance when viewed in front, from the street, being built of rough granite, and surmounted in front by two towers, each two hundred and thirty feet in height. The roof is covered with tin, as are most of the buildings in the city, which gives it a very rich appearance when the sun is shining. The interior is not very handsomely furnished, yet many of the paintings that decorate the walls are finely executed and rich in illustration of many scenes in the life of Jesus and the saints. The altar is richly carved, and ornamented with gold and silver. Fifteen thousand people can easily be accommodated within these walls. From the top of the towers, which are ascended by about two hundred and fifty wooden steps, is a grand view of the city which will richly compensate one for the tediousness of the ascent. Here is spread out before you the whole city; every public building is easily distinguished, all the streets and parks are distinctly visible. Before you in the distance rises up to the height of a thousand feet the Montreal Mountain, while behind and on your right the mighty St. Lawrence rolls its waters onward to the sea.

The Montreal Market is a fine new building, not yet entirely completed, built of granite, in the same style as the Quincy Market in Boston, although not as large; yet it affords accommodation for the population of the city. This building is situated near the river, and shows finely as you approach the city.

The Nunneries are very large and commodious and many of the black nuns are prostrate with the ship fever, brought on by their untiring and praiseworthy attentions to the sick emigrants at the Sheds. Here they have been since the commencement of the season, spending their time and sacrificing their health in efforts to alleviate the suffering of the poor, sick and dying emigrant. Many of their number have died, but the remaining ones are no less attentive, and seem reckless of their own lives while administering blessings and comforts to the needy. This indeed is an example worthy to be followed by many who are bitterly crying out against this institution and its supporters.

In my next I will give you a description of the people, country, etc. Yours truly,

AMERICUS.

THE NOMINATION OF CALEB CUSHING.

It is a long time, Mr. Editor, since I have paid much attention to the political movements of the day, as I have been of the opinion that by the virulence with which some measures have been urged some of the parties which have agitated this Commonwealth have been wholly free from the taint of self. But the late nomination of Caleb Cushing has aroused me from a lethargy which has overtaken thousands about us. I am surprised as well as gratified, that this gentleman has been selected by one of the great political parties of the day to rule over the Commonwealth. I rejoice in it, because it is not so much a party nomination as a national one,—one in which every true American cordially unite. The question at issue in this contest is not tariff or no tariff—sub-treasury or bank—or any other of the many questions that have agitated the country in 1842, when the issue was whether our country should be sustained in war or whether that of an enemy should receive our countenance and support. In that day there was a party plotting treason against the country, and the same internal enemies are about us now.

It is well known that General Cushing took active part in gathering our Massachusetts regiment and aiding them to equip and prepare for battle in a foreign and dangerous climate—that with his eloquence he endeavored to persuade our Legislature to grant to the volunteers means to go forth becoming the citizen soldiery of Massachusetts in answer to their country's call, and when, to the disgrace of our Commonwealth be it said, they bid their citizens depart uncomfited and unaided, he with a spirit of liberality and manly devotion to his country's cause, aided largely in supplying the regiment with every means of comfort; and still more, with patriotic ardor quitting the delights and luxuries of home, flew to the field of battle to offer up his life, if such should be the fortune of war, upon the altar of his country's glory.

For these reasons it is to be hoped that every friend of this union will aid his election by every honorable means. I know there are some in this town from whom we have nothing to expect in the way of assistance—men who had they not been cowards, would have long since enrolled themselves under the banners of Mexico—such men, for instance, as he who hoped every G-d-d volunteer would be shot—from him and such as him we expect nothing and we ask nothing. From the summer soldier and the sunshine warrior we have little to anticipate—but from the true hearted

American who loves the soil that gave him birth or who has adopted him as a son, whose bosom swells with pride and gratitude at the thought that this is "his own, his native land," we have the right to expect and I trust we shall not be disappointed that the nomination of Caleb Cushing to the Executive chair of the old Bay State will meet with a cordial response.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 2, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO. It now appears that the peace propositions of the United States have been rejected by unfortunate Mexico. Hostilities have been recommenced, and the American forces have gained possession of a part of the city of Mexico, at a great loss of life, but were still pressing for a complete victory. They will obtain it. Gen. Worth has been, though not dangerously, wounded. The next news will be of thrilling importance.

THE UNION MAGAZINE of Literature and Art—Edited by Mrs. Kirkland—Published by Israel Post, 140 Nassau St., New York. The October number of "The Union" is even more than usually abundant in literary and pictorial merit. There are seven engravings:—first a mezzotint (very rich) by Sadel, from an original drawing by Matteson, entitled "The Unwilling Bride"; secondly, another and a still finer mezzotint—indeed one of the finest we ever saw—by Doney, called "Innocence and Fidelity"; thirdly, a colored plate, on steel, of Parisian fashions. These are followed by four admirable wood engravings in illustration of articles by contributors, and forming headings to various chapters—an excellent and telling idea. In the way of literature, there are poems and prose papers from a great variety of celebrated American authors—among whom we may specify the editor herself, Mrs. Sigourney, Mrs. Child, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Dana, Mrs. Elliot, Miss Gould, Rev. Orville Dewey, W. A. Jones, and W. Gilmore Simms. Mr. Dana's "Swamp-Ghost at Christmas" is particularly good. The editorial criticisms are precisely to our taste. Miss Augusta Browne furnishes two pages of very sweet original music.

LAWRENCE. This town stands on the Merrimack river, nine miles below Lowell. It is two and a half miles from Andover which bounds it on the east, south and west, and two and a half also from Methuen which bounds it on the north and west; twenty-three miles north-west from Boston, twenty-three from Salem, twenty-three from Newburyport, and twenty-three from Manchester, (N. H.). It stands on the Boston and Maine Railroad, and is to be intersected by a branch road leading to DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE. An error occurred in the list of names published last week. The following is the Committee for the ensuing year:—Wyman Abercrombie, Jacob P. Eaton, William Torrey, Nathan H. White, Jonathan Baxter, Jonathan Jameson, Dudley Fulson, Joseph W. Sanborn, James M. Glover, George Baxter, James Lovell, Charles Swift, Nahaman B. Holmes.

ENGINE TRIAL. We understand that another trial between the Hydrant and Fountain Engines of Milton, will take place next Thursday afternoon, on the road leading from Milton Hill to the Milton Meeting-houses.

WHIG NOMINATIONS. At the late Whig Convention, the present incumbents of the offices, George N. Briggs and John Reed, were re-nominated. Messrs. Rufus Choate and William G. Bates were selected, at large, as the Delegates to the National Convention.

THE PLAYMATE. The second number of this attractive little work for young people has been published. The wood cuts are remarkably clever. Subscriptions received at the Quincy Bookstore.

CHINESE JUNK. This vessel remains in the keeping of the United States Marshal of the New York district, in consequence of the libel placed on her by the Chinese crew. The native crew are going home soon in a merchant vessel.

SHIPWRECK. A schooner from Waldoboro', (Me.) with a cargo of wood and bark, together with six hundred dozen eggs, anchored off Strawberry Hill, (Nantasket), last Sunday morning, and soon after, the gale increasing, dragged her anchors and went ashore on Long Beach, and soon after became a total wreck. The officers and crew and four passengers were taken from the wreck by the life boat from Hull.

Change of hours on Old Colony Railroad. See advertisement.

Kentucky has twenty-six millions of acres of land, estimated to be worth two hundred and fifty millions of dollars.

The wheat crop of Michigan for the present year, as estimated by a gentleman now preparing statistics for the Patent Office in Washington, will not fall short of 8,000,000 bushels.

A man in Litchfield, (Ct.) was fined fifty dollars for imprisonment, recently, for shearing the tail of a horse; a judgment richly deserved, every one will be ready to say.

The city of Boston proper originally contained but six hundred acres of land, it now embraces thirteen hundred; so that seven hundred acres have been artificially added by the spade, and most of this within comparatively a very few years.

Three large distinct veins of iron ore have been lately discovered in the town of Hawley, Franklin county, (Mass.) which are said to yield sixty-three per cent of pure metal, and to be very easy to access. Arrangements are in progress for the erection of a furnace.

The trial of Harris, for poisoning his wife, was assigned for the present term of the Court sitting at Keene, N. H. The indictment, with other papers, was stolen from the Clerk's office, the night before the court met. The counsel for the prisoner wished to proceed with the trial, and the court ordered it to go on, a copy having been substituted for the original indictment.

A serious accident occurred at Springfield last week, by which three men were badly injured. Four house painters were at work upon an insufficient stinging, when it broke, and three of them were precipitated fifty or sixty feet to the ground. All limbs broken. The fourth man caught a window sill and escaped.

Males and females bathe indiscriminately in the Seine at Paris, perfectly nude!

Hon. S. G. Goodrich (Peter Parley) has again gone to England to join his family.

Mr. Thomas, the inventor of the "wind-wagon," has returned to Independence, (Mo.) from a trip of twelve days sail on the prairies, and says his ship works well.

The Hon. Henry Clay returned to Ashland on Saturday week. His many friends will hear with pleasure that he was in the enjoyment of excellent health.

William Lloyd Garrison, who, it has been stated, has been seriously ill at Cleveland, Ohio, is pronounced to have been out of danger at the last accounts. He was to start on his journey homeward this week.

An American merchant at the Cape of Good Hope, has within twelve years sold a hundred thousand Yankee ploughs, chiefly to the Dutch for the use of their vineyards.

A woman residing at Sand Lake, in New York, cut out the tongue of her step son, a short time since, because she said he was given to lying.

Randolph, (Mass.) is rapidly increasing in population. The manufacture of boots and shoes is the principal occupation of the inhabitants. One third, if not more, of the population are Catholics.

Three men were arrested in Dover, (N. H.) Monday evening, for passing counterfeit money there. A large amount of counterfeit money was found upon them, mostly upon the Eastern Bank, Bangor, and the Marblehead Bank, Marblehead.

An Irish laborer upon the Fall River Railroad, was run over by a gravel train at Bridgewater, Monday afternoon, and one of his legs badly crushed.

On Saturday evening, as the Providence train was coming into Boston just at the crossing of the Tremont Road, in Roxbury, it ran into a flock of sheep, and made mutton of twenty-eight of them.

Hon. Samuel Wells of Portland, has been nominated by the Governor, Judge of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine.

A farmer's wife in New Connecticut, (Ohio) is preparing a cheese for a present to Queen Victoria. By joining with some few of her neighbors, she has procured the milk of five hundred cows for one day. The production is a cheese weighing six hundred pounds.

Frederick Douglass has issued proposals to publish in Cleveland, (Ohio) a weekly Anti-Slavery paper, which will be "devoted to all its forms; exalt the standard of Public Morality; promote the Moral and Intellectual Improvement of the Colored People; and hasten the day of Freedom to Three Millions of our Enslaved Fellow Countrymen."

Major William Poplam, a man whose services during the revolutionary war acknowledged by a whole people, died in the city of New York last week at the venerable age of ninety-six.

The epidemic, which is now raging with such appalling fatality in New Orleans, is said to be a complication of the vomito of Vera Cruz, the yellow fever peculiar to New Orleans, and the ship fever imported from Europe. It is no wonder, that so few recover from an attack of such a fell destroyer.

The police of Cincinnati have succeeded in arresting three expert counterfeiters, named Harrison, Wyatt, and Bullard.

Three unfinished dwelling houses, situated in Malden, near the edge of Chelsea, were burnt last week. The fire was an incendiary one.

Twenty persons were killed by eating boiled custards at a wedding in Green County, N. C.

Letters from Nova Scotia say that both the wheat and potatoes have failed there. The potatoes, after looking well through the season, turned suddenly worthless.

A plan is now in contemplation in Canada to connect Montreal with Lake Champlain, by a canal which, leaving the St. Lawrence at Cananawaga, would lead through a level country over a distance of only nineteen miles to St. Johns—the present head of the Steamboat navigation of Lake Champlain.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE SEASONS.

WINTER.

Now Winter comes—wild Boreas's blast—
Boreas with a fearful sound—
Spreads wide his veil, earth overcast,
And fetters still the ground.

Stern Winter still maintains his sway,
Bound, with an iron hand,
To northern seas, where icebergs lay,
On Greenland's frozen strand.

The fruitful year, to mortal eyes,
Is shrouded in its tomb,
Until fair Spring with Winter vies,
And cause the earth to bloom.

SPRING.

Now Spring begins her gentle reign,
But still does Winter frown;
But soon she melts his icy chain,
And breaks his power down.

For southern gales sweep o'er the plain,
Unchaining all the rills,
And swift descends refreshing rain,
Green-robing all the hills.

The songsters greet the brightsome day,
And flowers deck the scene;
Dame Nature dons on lovely May,
And freely disports herself.

SUMMER.

But June has come, the yearly queen,
Dazzling in rich attire;
She's crowned fairy of the realm
And May abashed retires.

Old Sol now mounts his upper throne,
Pours down his burning fire;
To earth he makes his glory known,
And shines but never tires.

The Earth is full, and dressed sublime,
Black clouds and vapors rise,
Sharp lightning flies, loud thunders chime,
Which light and send the skies.

AUTUMN.

Now Autumn shows her smiling face,
With plenty in her store,
The fruits of Summer do her grace—
Both hands are running o'er.

But chilly time soon strips the trees,
While polished is the ground;
With every breeze swift flies the leaves,
Deep gloom prevails around.

For Autumn grows morose and cross,
Throws off her robe of green;
When wedded to old hoar frost,
Then yellow leaves are seen.

W. T.

THE OLD GREY CAT.

I love her, I love her, why wonder at that!
Why blame me for loving my old grey cat?
I've loved her for years, and treasure her yet,
As a being of fancy, a beautiful pet.
Such an elegant coat, of fine glossy hair,
Is seldom the lot of Grimskin to share;
And then her plump form so full and so fat,
Doth cement to my heart my old grey cat.

How oft in my youth did I use to sit,
And hold in my lap my frolicsome kit;
On memory's page I read over those days,
When I used to join in her blithesome plays;
Recall with joy, when I first saw her mouse
From out of the pantry her first caught mouse;
Which, with true feline pride, she lay down where I sat,
Then I'd not exchange'd worlds for this old grey cat.

Now, tho' I turn from the past's pleasant page,
See childhood supplanted by manhood's full age;
See the kitten submerged in the matronly cat,
Who not only eats mice, but feasts on the rat,
Still she holds in my heart a much higher place
Than the loftiest language can ever trace;
O! I love her, I love her, no wonder at My undying passion for my old grey cat!

ANECDOTES.

"Your frequent elections are excellent things for the country, remarked a foreigner, laying down a newspaper. Being asked why he thought so, he replied:—"Why, I see that every stone in Georgia has been turned by both parties; this must be equal to subverting ploughing, at least, and will produce a heavy crop next year."

An Irishman who was removing mud with a rickety wheelbarrow, had the misfortune to have his barrow upset. Looking up to his employer he sung out:—"An faith an' by Jesus and place to send down another wheelbarrow here, for this one is crooked enough so that a man can't wale it straight."

A certain person was accustomed to drive the best horse and the coolest buggy in the neighborhood—the crack of whose whip was as alarming as the whistle of a steam boiler. But steam failed for want of fuel—and so did "whip." Chancery, chancery. No remedy but in chancery. Horse stopped—buggy stopped—payment stopped. But soon, oh, how soon—"whip" was seen again by his old friends driving his own horse and buggy—the identical team that he had driven before. "How now," said an old acquaintance, the same horse and buggy again! I thought you had been through Chancery." "So I have—but my horse and buggy went round."

A Dutchman once wanted to wed a widow, and his manner of making known his intention was as follows:—"If you wish content to get a better for a worse, to be happy for miserable, and if you smoke and drink ale, I shall take you for no better and much worse." Upon which the lady said "Yaw."

A man much addicted to drinking, being extremely ill with a fever a consultation was held in his bed-chamber by three physicians, how to "cure the fever, and abate the thirst." "Gentlemen," said he, "I will take half the trouble off your hands; you cure the fever and I will abate the thirst myself."

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled far superior to the far famed Bogle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to the scalp, and quickens the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern's Building, Quincy.

Public Notice.

THE proprietors of the "Quincy Bookstore" present their most sincere acknowledgments to the community, for the patronage that has been bestowed upon their establishment, and respectfully solicit its continuance in proportion to their attention to business and to the wants of their customers, which they are confident can here be supplied as satisfactorily, in every respect, as at any other place.

To the purchasers of SCHOOL BOOKS, we say, that our list comprises all that are used in the various public and private schools in this and the neighboring towns, and that we will sell them singly to individuals, to Teachers for the supply of their schools, or to Traders for their own customers, at the lowest market cash prices.

Those in want of BLANK BOOKS are informed, that we can supply them with any style or quality at prices varying according to the quality, but all as low as any person can afford to sell them.

Our stock of STATIONERY is ample sufficient for the supply of this market, well selected, and will be sold at fair prices.

We invite all in want of MISCELLANEOUS, JUVENILE or TOY BOOKS, to examine our assortment before looking elsewhere, as we are sure that selections can be made that will be suitable.

We have also a great variety of Pocket Books, Wallets, Pocket and Pen Knives, Scissors, Thermometers, Combs, Brushes, with a general assortment of Fancy Goods which cannot be enumerated, but which we shall be happy to exhibit to all who may call upon us.

We again call your attention to our CIRCULATING LIBRARY, from which at a moderate charge by the single volume, or year, we can furnish reading of a popular character.

We also receive subscriptions for, and supply all Periodicals, free of postage.

In the BINDERY connected with the Store the most careful attention will be given to binding Periodicals, old Books, Music, &c.

To all we say "encourage home manufacture; and patronize home enterprise and industry in preference to foreign."

MISCELLANY.

THE SUMMER IS ENDED.

Yes, "the Summer is ended." Autumn has already commenced. The season of decay and death are here. The leaf begins to fall. The verdure of the fields and forest begin to fade. The trees are prepared to lay aside their foliage. Ere long the forest will be arrayed in its coat of many colors, and then be divested of all its clothing. The sun is casting a longer shadow. The night encroaches upon the day. We hear no more of burning heats. There is a refreshing coolness in the morning air. It is pleasant now to labor. Work does not weary as it did. Ah! yes, it is even so; "the Summer is ended."

"The Summer is ended." Then let us be thankful for its mercies. Every season brings blessings in its train, and bears witness to the goodness of a gracious God. Every season, therefore, as it passes away, demands our tribute of praise to the Great Author of all good. The Summer of 1847 has been one of peculiar blessing. A kind Providence has watched over the earth, and with timely rain and sun has matured, or brought near maturity, such an abundance of agricultural riches as the earth probably never saw. Never, at least, on these Western shores, has the eye rested on such extensive fields of grain, such noble corn, and such a prospect of esculents. What charming pastures clothed with flocks; what smiling valleys covered with corn! "They shout for joy, they also sing." Let us eat, and give God thanks.

"The Summer is ended." And we are still alive. No desolating plague, no destructive pestilence, no wasting fever, has visited our shores. The immigrant, it is true, has suffered as tongue can never tell, but it has not come nigh us. It has been a season of general health. Death, it is true, has not paused in his work. The disease of the season have not been idle. Nor have they been more diligent than ordinarily. It has been a Summer of much health, and consequent happiness. God be praised!

"The Summer is ended." But its sun has not gone down in gloom. It has set in radiance. Our farmers, our merchants, our tradesmen, our artisans, our laborers, have all been fully occupied, and amply rewarded for their labors. Our ships and small craft have whitened the sea, and brought home a rich return to their owners. Seldom have we witnessed a Summer of such great prosperity. The lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places. We have been blessed in basket and store. The God of Summer let us praise.

"The Summer is ended." And with it are ended the lives of many a friend, and lovely companion, and fellow pilgrim. Many who began the bright season with us are now sleeping their last sleep. The whistling winds and howling tempests of the season of storm, will not disturb the deep repose into which they have fallen. The rustling of the withered leaf, and the chill Autumnal blast will fall upon their ear no more. Man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets. We all do fade as a leaf. All flesh is grass, and the goodness thereof as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth. The grave is our common home.

"Princes! this clay must be your bed,
In spite of all your towers;
The tall, the wise, the reverend head,
Must lie as low as ours."

Where are the venerable forms of O'Connell and Chalmers now? Where the wealthy Staygates? Where the honored Wright, so recently a sanguine candidate for the people's highest gift? Gone—all gone! And so must we. We must all stand before God. "Prepare," my soul to meet him.

"The Summer is ended." Ah! to how many in the world of spirits is this a thought of anguish! They had a summer season once, but it is gone; a harvest day, but they slept it away. And now their unavailing cry is heard: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved!" Our summer is not yet gone. We have a harvest yet to reap. Let us work while it is day. The night cometh. The Winter is at hand.—N. Y. Evangelist.

TO NULLIFY A BAD LEASE.

There is a shrewd and wealthy old Yankee landlord away down in Maine, who is noted for driving his "sharp bargains"—by which he has amassed a large amount of property. He is the owner of a great number of dwelling houses, and it is said of him that he is not over scrupulous in his rental charges, whenever he can find a customer whom he knows to be responsible. His object is always to lease his house for a term of years, to the best tenants, and get the utmost farthing in the shape of rent.

A diminutive Frenchman called on him, last winter, to hire a dwelling he owned in Portland, and which had long remained empty. References were given, and the Yankee landlord ascertained that his applicant was a man "after his own heart" for a tenant, immediately commenced to "jerk" him. He found that the tenement appeared to suite the little Frenchman, and he placed an exorbitant price upon it; but the lease was drawn and duly executed, and the tenant moved into his new quarters.

Upon the kindling of fires in the house, it was found, that the chimneys "wouldn't draw," and the building was filled with smoke. The window sashes rattled in the wind at night, and the cold air rushed through a hundred crevices about the house, until now unnoticed. The snow melted upon the roof, and the eaves were drenched from leaking. The rain pelted, and our Frenchman found a "natural" bath room upon the cellar floor—but the lease was signed, and the landlord chuckled.

"I have vat you sal call 'suck in,' vis zis dam maison!"—muttered our victim to himself, a week afterwards—but "n'importe"—va se see, vo sal see!

Next morning he rose bright and early, and passing down town, he encountered the landlord.

"A ha!—Bon jour monsieur," said he, in his happiest manner.

"Good day, sir. How do you like your house?"

"Ah! Monsieur—elegant, beautiful, magnificent! Eh, bine Monsieur, I have butze one regret—"

"Ah! What is that?"

"Monsieur—I sal live in zat house but tree little year."

"I have find, by vot yon sal call ze lease, zat you have giv me ze house for but tree year, an' I have very mooch sorrow for zat."

"But you can have it longer, if you wish—"

"Ah, Monsieur—I sal be ver' mooch glad if I can have zat house so long as I please—eh, Monsieur?"

"Oh, certainly—certainly, sir."

"Tres bien, Monsieur! I sal vauk rite to your office—an' you sal giv me vot you call ze lease for zat maison jes so long as I sal want ze house. Eh, Monsieur?"

"Certainly, sir. You shall stay there you life time, if you like."

"Ah, Monsieur—I have ver' mooch tanks for zis accommodation."

The old leases were destroyed, and a new one was delivered in form to the French gentleman, giving him possession of the premises, for "such period as the lessee may desire the same, he paying the rent therefor promptly," etc., etc.

The next morning, our crafty landlord was passing the house just as the Frenchman's last load of furniture was being started from the door; and an hour afterwards, a messenger called on him with a "legal tender" for the rent for eight days, accompanied with a note as follows:—

"Monsieur—I have bin shmoke—I have bin drowned, I have bin fress to death, in ze house vot I have hire of you, for ze period os I may desire." I have stay in ze dam house 'jet so long as I please,' an' ze bearer of zis vil giv you ze key! Bon jour, Monsieur."

It is needless to add that our Yankee landlord has never since been known to give up "a bird in the hand for one in the bush!"

THE MARRIED MAN'S SOLILOQUY.

Blast the women! They are always fretting about something or other! Yesterday the coal wouldn't burn; and the grate must be set; and the furnace must be repaired; and mercy knows what all; and to-day it's as hot as—! Save us from the wants of an inconsiderate woman! Only let her get the upper hand and she'll drive like blazes! But I won't be driven! Not I! If she wants the doors fixed, or wood dried, or water brought, or the leach set, or tubs hooped, she may do herself! Confound it! I can't go into the house, but something is wanting! If it isn't one thing it is another. I'll leave my boots in the parlor every night if I have a mind, and she may help herself! See if I don't! We'll see who'll be master. Before we were married it was—

"If you please, my dear!"—but crackly! if her tone hasn't changed. She shall and shall from week's end to week's end, and if I venture to put in a word edgewise, I'm shut up by an infernal clatter! Talk about late hours and extravagance! Wonder what she calls late hours! I could stay out once until broad daylight and she too, if the party was agreeable. But if I chance to tend the club once a week, there is a pretty sum directly. And don't never think of her! Gracious me! I wish I could forget her five minutes, just to see how it would seem. If young men only knew! But no! If a man says a word, he is set down for a nunny. He must grin and bear it, if it cuts ever so close. And oyster suppers. Wonder if she don't like oysters! Tell me about the propriety of setting down to the breakfast table with her hair uncombed! Once she was all curls and smiles! Now she's slatternly as a washerwoman! Blast the race! They ought to be indicted for obtaining husbands under false pretences! If they'd only show out, the men wouldn't be such gudgeons! But no; they'll smile and smirk and twitter until a fellow is fairly caught, and then, by Jupiter, if they don't haul down their colors! And then the baby-tending! It's worth a fortune to be compelled to hear the squalling brats night after night! Croup or cholera is the eternal complaint. If I had my way, I'd shake the cholic out of 'em in a hurry! But no; they must be dosed with pink and annis, onions and the deuce only knows what, and trotted till their gizzards are fairly shaken out; and then if any one is to be kept up, why, Slocum can set up, it won't hurt him! But I've done with it; I won't that's a fact. What's that you say? Mended my pants? And four new shirts and a neckcloth? Well, I declare, Mrs. Slocum is clever after all! If she didn't scold so like—, but no matter, I know I provoked her, or she wouldn't do it. I'll give in, I'll own up— The remainder was lost in something like a kiss.

SPLENDID ESTABLISHMENT.

One of the most extensive and best found Dental Establishments in the country, is that of Dr. HITCHCOCK, at 127 Court street, Boston. The Doctor, finding that his former office, where the public have so long found him, and which he has occupied since 1838, was every day becoming too small, by reason of his constantly increasing practice, has removed opposite his old stand, into a large and spacious building, which he has fitted up in the most perfect and beautiful style, with every modern improvement and convenience that long years of observation and experience could suggest. His principle room is a curiosity, from the great number of instruments of the most costly and elaborate nature, which are used for the accomplishment of the nice performances of his profession. Neither labor nor expense has been spared in the fitting up and furnishing of his rooms, where the patient is almost induced to forget the pain and trouble he experiences, from the actual comfort with which he is accommodated. The operating chairs, the attending conveniences, and even the instruments themselves, are all manufactured under the direction and after the original plan of the Dr. himself; so that he has succeeded in producing one of the finest sets of operating rooms, doubtless, in the world. The most important and necessary art has been brought to the highest degree of perfection by the Doctor, who manufactures in his own laboratory every article used in his profession. Aside from the fact that he is thus enabled to produce much better results, he is also enabled to warrant his work with confidence and security.

With the great conveniences this possesses, he is also enabled to make his charges at a lower rate than can be afforded by those who are obliged to pay one or two profits to manufacturers and retailers, on the material employed in the profession. This, of itself, is a fact worthy of the consideration of those who have occasion to resort to the Dental Art for relief and comfort; for with every convenience of the wholesale manufacture of teeth, the Doctor can afford more time to perfect the number he himself uses, as well as save the large expense of profits to the trade.

It is often complained of by individuals, that dentists charge so much for the work, that they have not the power to resort to them, however much they may be suffering for want of their assistance. The fact is, most dentists are obliged to charge high prices, to pay their actual expenses for the materials they use. But aside from the considerations of economy, which are not beneath the notice of even the rich, we recommend our readers to Dr. Hitchcock's establishment, because we know the excellence of his work; its complete and artistic finish and beauty, all combined with the greatest durability and serviceable adaptation. Completely possessed with a desire to render his patients at the head of his profession, the Doctor spares no means to accomplish his laudable design, and always gives his constant personal attention to his numerous patients.

In the reception room, the impressions of the mouths are taken, preparatory to the making of the teeth. This is done with soft and pure wax. The mouth cups of Dr. H. are beautifully burnished, and of solid gold; and the mouth mirrors are set in pure gold. In the model room, are to be seen the various moulds of different mouths for which teeth have been prepared. And from the great number which are there collected, we could at once account for the oft-repeated remark, that the Bostonians have beautiful teeth. In the laboratory and work-shop, where the teeth are made and secured to gold plates, are to be found teeth in the different stages of manufacture. Parts and whole sets are there partially completed, and the explanation of the process, as we heard it from the Doctor, was very interesting.

The extensive and beautiful dental establishment of Dr. H. shows conclusively the high estimation in which his professional services are held by the public; for we think we hazard nothing in stating, that aside from his magnificent and extended offices, he has undoubtedly the largest business of any operator in this country; for the Doctor's patients can be found in almost every State in the Union. The public always appreciate faithful, thorough, and honest men, of whatever profession; and we are glad to know that our friends in the country are appreciating and availing themselves of the advantages which are to be found in such an establishment; for the money which they have heretofore paid to inexperienced or travelling dentists, was worse than thrown away.—Oliver Branch.

STEPHEN GIRARD. The following capital story is illustrative of the peculiarities of the late Stephen Girard of Philadelphia. Mr. Girard had a favorite clerk, who every way pleased him, and who, at the age of twenty-one years, expected Mr. G. to say something to him in relation to his future prospects, and perhaps lend him a helping hand in starting in the world. Mr. G. said nothing, carefully avoiding the subject of his escape from minority. At length, after the lapse of some few weeks, the clerk mustered courage enough to address Mr. G. on the subject.

"I suppose, Sir," said the clerk, "I am now free; and I thought I would say something to you about my future course. What do you think I had better do?"

"Yes, yes, I know you are free," said Mr. G., "and my advice to you is, that you go and learn the cooper's trade."

This announcement well nigh threw the clerk off the track, but, recovering his equilibrium, he said that if Mr. G. was in earnest, he would do so.

"I am in earnest," said Mr. G.; and the clerk, rather hesitatingly sought one of the best coopers, agreed upon the terms of apprenticeship, and went at it in earnest. "In process of time," the young cooper became master of his trade, and could make as good a barrel as any other cooper. He went and told Mr. G. that he had graduated with all the honors of the craft, and was ready to set up his business; at which the old gentleman appeared much gratified, and told him to make three of the best barrels he could get up. The young cooper selected the choicest materials, and soon put in shape and finished his three barrels, and wheeled them to the old gentleman's counting-room. Mr. G. said the barrels were first rate, and demanded the price.

"One dollar," replied the clerk, "is as low as I can live by."

"Cheep enough," said his employer; "make out your bill and present it."

And now comes the cream of the whole.

Mr. G. drew a check for $20,000, and handing it to the clerk-cooper, closed with these words:

"There, take that, and invest it the best possible way, and if you are unfortunate and lose it, you have a good trade to fall back upon, which will afford you a good living at all times."

THE HORSE. A horse that is driven on hard roads is liable to get stiff in the joints. In 1833 I had an animal, which after driving three or four days, got quite lame. An old Baltimore teamster told me to wash the mare's legs in tolerable salt brine, which was done accordingly, three times a day for the balance of the journey. The stiffness disappeared in a few days, and I drove the mare fourteen hundred miles afterward, and there was no more trouble on that account. What pleased me most was, the mare had a very poor foot to hold a shoe, when I started. It was very brittle and hard. It would break out when a nail was put in. But it grew together at every shoeing. A blacksmith in New England remarked to me that her foot had a singular appearance; where he pared it was soft and tough. I account for it in this way: salt will attract moisture from the atmosphere, which keeps the foot moist all the time; and salt has nearly the same effect that grease has on the foot or a piece of timber. The drippings from salt on a floor if continued long, cannot be got off; the wood becomes moist and tough, and so with the horse's foot. After washing the legs, turn the horse's foot, clean the bottom, pour the hollow full of brine and hold for a few minutes to soak the bottom. The practice of rasping the foot all over to toughen it is abominable.—Farmer and Gardener.

TIME LOST. One of the sands in the hourglass of time is, beyond comparison, more precious than gold. In nothing is waste more ruinous, or more sure to bring unavailing regrets. Better to throw away money than moments; for time is much more than money.

As we lose our days, we incur an increasing risk of losing our souls. "The life-blood of the soul runs out in wasted time." The years which have winged their flight have to be receding angels; and what is the report they have borne to heaven? Will the record testify for us or against us, when the throne of the Son of Man shall be set, and the books shall be opened?

THE GOOD WIFE AT SANDY RIVER. The characteristics of a portion of the population of Virginia is illustrated by an anecdote told by a Methodist circuit preacher, who not long since called at a house near the head waters of Sandy river, to stay all night. Everybody knows the character of the citizens of this region of country, and that it has been, and for years to come will continue to be, on account of its mountain fastness, the home of the most ignorant and debased population. One parson, a man of great simplicity of character, on entering found four men seated on the floor playing cards. These men seemed scarcely to notice his arrival, and he passed to where the wife of the proprietor was, who very soon engaged him in conversation. Among other questions, she asked:

"What might be your business in these parts, stranger?"

"I am hunting for the lost sheep of the House of Israel," replied the parson.

"Old man! old man!" cried the woman to her husband, "old man, I say, I'll bet anything that old man that was here t'other day belongs to this here man."

The minister was forced to explain, whereupon, gazing upon him with an air of curiosity and astonishment, she rose to her feet and exclaimed:

"A preacher! Well, ye're the first crier of that sort ever seen in these parts afore; but may be you'd like a drink, stranger."

"No, madam, I never drink!"

"Never drink! Well, rally, 's'it of someb!"

The men during the dialogue continued their game at cards; but, as if struck with the impropriety of such conduct before a minister of the gospel (a species which she had heard of, but not seen,) the woman addressed the card players with the air of one accustomed to command.

"Look here men! Aint you a nice set to let a preacher come here and catch you playing cards? Move, every one of you, or I'll break this pine not over your heads."

It is hardly necessary to add that the room was speedily cleared.

The above as related, is literally true, and a sample of the character of the settlers of Sandy river.

HABITS OF ANIMALS. You cannot alter the nature of an animal by changing its food. It will still belong to the family. In this particular, we, as men, are better instructed. When they lose their queen bee—which is an entirely different animal from the working bee—if you present another within twenty-four hours they will not accept her nor obey her. They prefer taking an ordinary grub, before he becomes a flier, and feeding it with a particular food and treating it in a particular way, and when it leaves the grub state, it becomes a queen bee, and they always suffer themselves to be governed by her.

The habits of ants are extremely curious. We all have heard of ant holes, sometimes twenty feet in diameter, filled with halls and rooms of great strength. These and beaver dams are constructed upon strictly mechanical principles.

In some insect species, the males have wings while the females have none. This is the case with the glow worm, and the female has the property of emitting a phosphorescent light, and were it not for this, the gentleman glow worm would not find his way to his lady's chamber. The ostrich, unlike other birds, is not provided with means of sitting down. She cannot, therefore, hatch her eggs, but buries them in hot sand, and leaves nature to hatch them for her. Some birds build no nests, like the cuckoo, which deposits her eggs in the nests of other birds—but she knows enough always to select the nests of birds that have bills shaped like her own, for then she is assured her young will have the same kind of food as she will procure.

CEREMONY OF A MOLDAVIAN MARRIAGE. The young women are concealed from the eyes of men, till the very moment when the ceremony of their marriage is concluded, and they are laid on the nuptial couch. Before that time, they have no other employment but to sigh for the husband that providence shall please to designate them; till then, they enjoy only in imagination the pleasures of love.

The civil contract of marriage is made before witnesses; it is signed by the parents or relations of the parties, without any other formality among the nobles, than the signature of the prince or of the metropolitan. The marriages of the people are made without contract and without other ceremony than the benediction of the priest. When the day of the marriage ceremony arrives, the young woman is covered with a veil of gold or silver tissue, which descends on all sides in large folds, from the top of the head to the waist. Her head is adorned with a plume of black feathers. And in this dress she is led by four women, with slow step, to the church, like a criminal to punishment. There the priest makes her promise, love and fidelity to her future spouse; he joins their hands; makes them both kiss; and then a hymn is chanted which lasts two hours. After which, the young couple are conducted home with a quicker pace and in a less solemn procession. The feast immediately succeeds, the company get drunk; the dance lasts the whole night; and the bride and bridegroom for the first time see one another, and are then put to bed.

SATURDAY, OCT. 9, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MONTREAL, Aug. 12th, 1847.

FRIEND GREEN—To be acquainted with the people of Canada, you must know some of their predominant characteristics. The one you would first notice would be contentment. This is found equally among all classes, the high and low. The wealthy lord in his splendid mansion, surrounded with all the luxuries of life which wealth will procure, and the humble peasant in his 'lowly thatched cottage' with the frugal fare his means affords, seems alike cheerful and happy.

Hospitality is another prevailing quality. The door of a peasant's cottage is always open to receive the stranger, and the worthy peasant will share his last meal with the needy traveler. The amusements here are mostly private. Dancing and social parties, take the place of Theatres and other public amusements. There is but one theatre in the city, and that is meanly patronized. Judging from the two evenings that I have attended, it would be more profitable to the proprietors to close it altogether, there not being more than twenty-five in both tiers of boxes. Dancing is the favorite amusement with the lower classes, both summer and winter. Often as I have passed through many of the streets in the suburbs of the city where most of the lower class reside, in the evening, my ears have been regaled with the merry notes of the bag-pipe, the happy laugh and noisy shuffle, proceeding from many of the low and humble cottages.

The peasants generally keep their cottages with great neatness, and while riding through the country in the afternoon, one will see in front of almost every cottage, the women at work sewing or knitting, the door of the house open while within an air of cleanliness pervades the whole. The inhabitants are principally Catholics, and the lower classes are ignorant and superstitious. Putting the utmost confidence in the sayings and doings of the clergy, they are sometimes the dupes of unprincipled priests.

Unlike Boston, there is but one pleasant road in the vicinity of the city. This is around the mountain, and, in point of pleasantness and variety of scenery, it is not surpassed by any near Boston. It extends entirely around the base of the mountain, a distance of about nine miles. In large and magnificent mansions, on either side of this road, live many of the wealthy merchants of the city, during the summer months, but who generally return at the approach of winter; yet many retired merchants and gentlemen live here during the whole year, preferring the quiet of a country residence to the noise and bustle of a life in the city. The houses being chiefly built of stone and brick, are devoid of the appearance of cheerfulness which the mansions in the vicinity of Boston possess, yet their gardens and grounds are as highly cultivated and richly ornamented as any I have ever seen.

On the western slope of the mountain, is the residence of the Earl of Elgin, Governor General of Canada. It is a large and superbly finished mansion in the midst of a fine grove, and approached from the main road by two long avenues, lined on both sides with rows of trees, whose branches meet and form a perfect arch most of the way. From the summit of the mountains which is about nine hundred feet high is a grand view of the whole country for miles around Montreal. As far as the eye can reach stretches out one vast extended, uninterrupted plain of cultivated land, divided into farms of equal size, each three acres in width and thirty in length. Generally speaking, however, they are poorly cultivated. The Canadians are commonly miserable farmers, caring little about the improvement of their land, frequently cultivating just enough to gain for themselves a comfortable living, providing the crop is good. Should it fail, they are often reduced to want, thus proving, what is literally true, that they are possessed of little energy and foresight, taking care of the present and letting the future take care of itself.

To-morrow I leave for Quebec. In my next I will give you a sketch of my trip, etc.

Yours truly,

AMERICUS.

As weeds, since the curse, grow even in fields sown with the best wheat; so vice, since the fall, grows in the midst of the best examples; and the most excellent education.

Many Dutch artisans have been engaged to proceed to Russia, for the purpose of establishing an iron ship-building yard on the banks of the river Volga.

A story is told of a man in London, who determined to spend all he made the first year in advertising; he soon found that it was impossible, for the simple reason that the more he advertised the more he made; after a strenuous effort to get rid of his money in advertising, he had to give it up.

The gifts that circumstances make in our character, we are apt to regard as its native fruit.

Carreña, the Dictator of the States of Central America, was a native Indian, wild and wholly untutored. He captured the city of Guatemala, and made himself Dictator. He afterwards devoted himself to study, and the acquisition of knowledge. He is now said to be a good scholar and an excellent ruler.

Two Ex-Presidents received their friends in the drawing room of the United States Hotel, at Saratoga Springs, on the 14th ult.—Mr. Van Buren and Mr. Tyler.

Life is an ordinary, at which those who wish to be helped must help themselves.

The Jews have an old saying, "Bring a boy up to a trade, or you bring him up for the gallows."

Laws are like cobwebs: they catch small flies, but wasps and hornets break through.

MEXICO. The United States forces, under Maj. Gen. Scott, have taken the city of Mexico, after several days of hard fighting. The American loss in killed and wounded will probably exceed one thousand men, while that of the Mexicans will not fall short of four thousand. A large number of Mexican officers were made prisoners, and Gen. Bravo and others killed. The reported deaths of Gens. Worth, Pillow and Smith of the Americans, have not been confirmed.

The United States government will now send an additional force to Mexico, tax the people of that country for the support of the army, and adopt every other measure to entirely subdue the nation, and probably annex her entirely to this country.

ENGINE AFFAIRS. Another attempt was made for a trial, on Thursday last, between the Hydrant and Fountain Engines. The hose of the Fountain twice broke on the last trial, which prevented a regular decision being made by the judges.

A collation was afterwards provided in an open field for all who participated; and the Hydrant company in addition had an excellent and bountiful supply of substantial fare at the engine house upon their return.

ACCIDENT. Mr. Richard Cole of this town met with a severe accident on Monday last, at one of the stone quarries, by the falling of the shears, which broke one of his legs at the thigh.

WELL DESERVED. A gratuity of ten dollars has been voted; and paid by the Directors of the Norfolk Mutual Fire Insurance Company, to Mr. James Edwards of this town, for his exertions in extinguishing the fire in Mr. Albert Pratt's house.

QUINCY LYCEUM. At a meeting of this institution on Wednesday evening last, the following Officers were elected for the year ensuing:

President—George Baxter.

Vice-President—Josiah Adams.

Secretary—James M. Wade.

Treasurer—Jonathan Baxter.

Clerks—Dr. George Newcomb, George Follett, J. Mayhew Marsh.

NORFOLK COUNTY NOMINATIONS. The democrats at their convention on Tuesday last, at Dedham, nominated for State Senators, Messrs. Edgar K. Whittaker of Needham, Isaac Tower of Randolph, and Asa Pickering of Bellingham.

The whigs held their convention, on Wednesday last, and selected for State Senators, Messrs. Thomas Clark of Woburn, David A. Shaw of Roxbury, and James C. Doane of Colchester.

THANKSGIVING. The Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council, has appointed Thursday, the 25th day of November, as the day for the Annual Thanksgiving in Massachusetts.

FIRE IN DORCHESTER. The steam planing mill in Dorchester, owned by Messrs. Frazier & Glover, and situated on Pope & Son's lumber wharf, was totally destroyed by fire on Monday last, together with a large quantity of stock and machinery. Loss between $5000 and $6000. No insurance.

"THE EUREKA." This is the title of a monthly publication of scientific matter, which we have received from New York. It contains engraved illustrations, a list of all new patents, and much information of importance to the inventor and intelligent mechanic. Published by Kingsley & Pirsou, at one dollar per annum.

MAINE. The clause of the new Constitution limiting the amount of State credit was carried at the late election in the State of Maine by a large majority. The clauses making a plurality of votes sufficient for the election of Governor, Senators, and Representatives, are also carried, though the vote was very close, particularly in respect to Governor. By a law of the Legislature a plurality is sufficient in the case of Congressmen also. In short, a plurality will hereafter be the governing principle in all elections in the State of Maine.

GUN COTTON. Too much precaution cannot be taken in the use of Gun Cotton by sportsmen. A distinguished rifle manufacturer of New York city, says the Sun, lately had a fine rifle blown to fragments in his hands by a charge of cotton, less than would fill an ordinary tumbler. He thinks gun cotton unsafe to use except in blasting, there being so much inequality and uncertainty in its strength. Even for blasting it should be used with great care.

MAGIC AND VENTRILOQUISM. Attention is directed to the advertisement of Mr. Bird, who proposes to amuse our citizens next Tuesday evening.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. Our readers will see by the advertisement, that another change has been made in the hours for the cars starting. A freight train with passenger car attached, now leaves the Quincy station at eight minutes before one P. M.

FUR GOODS. All persons in want of fur goods should visit the establishment of Mr. Shute in Boston, where they can find a rich and varied assortment. Readers will see by his advertisement that he is prepared for customers, and now is the time to prepare to bid old Boreas defiance.

Neal's Gazette is hereafter to be edited by his widow. During the lifetime of her husband, she contributed to the paper under the name of "Clara Cushman," and she is known to the Magazines as Alice C. Lee.

All the chartered steamers on the Rio Grande have been discharged from the services of government.

A law has been passed in Maryland, making it a penal offence for minors to have anything to do with fire apparatus.

A bust of President Quincy, executed by Crawford, has been lying in the Custom House in New York, for more than a year, owing to the loss containing it, having been marked wrong by the Italian workmen. It is said to be a highly successful work; the academic costume of the president is preserved, but managed with good effect. The bust was made for the students of the University, and is to be placed in the library.

The wife of Mr. Trist, the Mexican Commissioner, is a grand-daughter of the illustrious Jefferson.

Modesty to the female character is like salt-petre to beef; imparting a blush while it preserves its purity.

The Legislature of New York has passed a bill to supply by election, this fall, the vacancy in the office of Lieutenant Governor, occasioned by the resignation of Judge Gardiner.

It appears from the statement of the United States Treasurer, that the amount of cash in the several depositories in the United States, on the 20th of September, was $10,989,835, on which drafts had been made to the amount of $6,728,000. The net amount subject to draft after adding transfers, difference between suspense account, &c., is $3,328,907. The amount in the sub-treasury at Boston, on the 20th ult, was $364,592, on which drafts to the amount of $583,664, had been drawn, leaving a balance of $125,927 subject to draft.

A young lady was found dead in her bed, in France, recently—her death being occasioned by sleeping in tight stays to preserve her shape.

In Hingham (Mass.) they have the oldest inhabitable church in North America. There are the ruins of one in Jamestown (Va.) which is older than this; but this is the oldest now occupied in the country. It was built one hundred and sixty years ago, and in it is some of the timber of the church built by the first settlers in 1635 or 1636. It is perfectly sound, and almost as hard as iron.

Colonel Wilson, who recently died of yellow fever at Vera Cruz, willed $40,000 to be applied to the support of the poor in Edgecomb county, North Carolina.

Sergeant Riley, the deserter, was recruiting sergeant for some time, and kept the rendezvous in New York. He was a man of very large frame, more than six feet high, and was formerly a sergeant in the 6th regiment of the British army, stationed in Canada, from which he deserted, and came to this country. Shortly after, he joined the United States army, and being well skilled in his profession, was sent to West Point, where he acted as drill sergeant for some time.

The number of steamboats owned in New York, and registered in New York Custom House, is 183 and the amount of tonnage is 56,618. The largest is the Isaac Newton running between New York and Albany, which is 1,332. The Bay State is a larger boat, being 1,551, but is owned elsewhere.

The Mast and Lantern erected on the dome of the Capitol at Washington, relieves the heavy appearance of the inverted "wash basin" as the dome has been styled, and seems determined to withstand all assaults of wind and weather, in spite of the many predictions to the contrary.

Every man of intelligence and common sense is a subscriber to a newspaper, and if he is honest he pays his subscription punctually, as a matter of course.

Com. Perry has required the alcalde of Alvarado to pay $2000 for the lives of two sailors who were killed on shore by the Mexicans, and has transmitted the money to their families. Fifty bales of cotton having been taken by the Mexicans out of the United States stores, and carried off the Commodore threatened to destroy the town if it was not restored. The cotton was soon produced.

The Directors of the Boston Athenaeum, have offered to Mr. Kellogg the free use of their rooms for the exhibition of the Greek Slave. Such a compliment must be very gratifying to Mr. Powers and his numerous friends.

Gen. Scott was born June 13, 1786, and will therefore be sixty-two years old next June.

NOTICES.

Gentlemen of Quincy, old and young, in favor of having a Village Ball on Thanksgiving Evening next, at which the citizens of the town may alone participate, are requested to meet at the Hancock House, next TUESDAY EVENING, at seven o'clock.

A meeting of the Quincy Lyceum will be held at the Lyceum Hall, on THURSDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION.

What constitutes a good Lyceum? Is it the natural tendency of war to produce in the world as much good as evil?

Are the poor more dependant upon the rich than the rich upon the poor?

All who feel an interest in the Lyceum are invited to be present and take part in the discussion.

JAMES M. WADE, Secretary.

COAL. It has been stated that the price of coal the present season, particularly the latter part, would be extremely high, and consequently purchasers should buy without delay. This is all moonshine, and we are glad that our friend of the Hingham Patriot has correctly informed his readers of this base design of speculators. He truly says, "The receipts, thus far, the present year, of all kinds of coal, have far exceeded those of last year up to the present time, and what evidence therefore is there that the quantity of this necessary article will be very scarce and the price be enormously high?"

MISCELLANY.

THE WILL.

The old lady who related the outline of the following singular story, heard it told, in her youth, by no means as a fiction, but as a real occurrence. She even once knew the name of the old northern family concerned in it, but that, with the exact dates she has now forgotten, if she ever knew the latter; and having never written down the story, she has no means of recovering them. However, from her express mention of a tight wig, worn by the benevolent old hero of the tale, we have fixed the story's occurrence not earlier than the last century.

Towards the end of a gusty October day, about the year 1730, a barrister of the temple was sitting reading, when the opening of the door and the servant's announcement of a gentleman interrupted him. He rose to receive his visitor, who proved to be a perfect stranger, a person of very gentlemanly, but extremely old-fashioned appearance. He was dressed in a grave-colored suit, of antique cut; a neat, tight gray wig surrounded his serious, and even solemn, physiognomy; silk stockings rolled at the knee; enormous shoe buckles of gold; a cane, headed with the same metal, and a broad-brimmed and uncorked hat completed his equipment; which was in the fashion of the last years of William the Third, or the first of his successor. Having stiffly bowed, in the exact way prescribed by the etiquette of the era to which he seemed to belong, he took possession of the chair offered him by his host; and, after a preparatory ahem, thus began, in a slow and serious manner.

'I think, sir, you are the lawyer employed by the S— family, whose property in Yorkshire you are, therefore, aware is about to be sold.'

'I have, sir,' answered the barrister, 'full instructions and powers to complete the disposal of it, which, though a painful duty to me, must be performed.'

'It is a duty you may dispense with,' said the visitor, waving his hand, 'the property need not be sold.'

'May I presume to ask, sir, whether you are any relation to the family? If so, you must be acquainted with the absolute necessity of selling it, in consequence of the claim of another branch of the family, just returned from beyond the sea, who, as heir at law, is naturally possessor of the estate, in default of a will to the contrary; and who desires its value in money, instead of the land. The present possessor is unable to buy it, and must therefore depart.'

'You are mistaken,' replied the old gentleman, rather testily; 'you seem not to know of the will of Mr. S—'s great grandfather, and by which he not only left that, his estate, to his favorite grandson, this gentleman's father, but even entailed it on his great-grand-son.'

'Such a will, sir,' said the barrister, 'was, indeed, for many years, supposed to exist; and in virtue of it, Mr. S— has, until now, peaceably enjoyed the property; but, on the claimant's application, a renewed search having been made for it, either the belief proved unfounded, or it has been lost or destroyed. Cabinets, chests, every room, inhabited and uninhabited, have been ransacked in vain. Mr. S— has now given up all hope of finding it; the sale is to be completed in the course of next week, and the fine old place must pass into the hands of strangers.'

'You are mistaken once again, young man,' said the stranger, striking his cane on the floor. 'I say, sir, the will exists. Go, immediately, continued he, in an authoritative tone, 'travel day and night. You may save an old family from disgrace and ruin. In the end room of the left wing, now uninhabited, is a closet in the wall.'

'We have looked there,' interrupted the barrister.

'Silence, sir; there is a closet, I say. In that closet is a large chest; that chest has a false bottom, and underneath that is the deed. I am certain of what I say. I saw the paper deposited there; no matter when, or by whom. Go; you will find it worth your trouble. My name, sir, is Haze S—. I am not now personally known to the proprietor of S— Hall; but I am his relation and have his welfare at heart. Neglect not to follow my advice.'

So saying, the old gentleman arose, again bowed, and at the door put on his hat, in a fashion which would have enchanted an elegant Queen Anne's day; and sliding the silken string of his cane on the little finger of his right hand, on which the lawyer had remarked a very fine brilliant ring, he descended the stairs and departed leaving the barrister in the utmost astonishment. At first he felt inclined to consider the whole as a hoax; then again, when he thought of the old gentleman's grave manner, and the intimate knowledge he must have possessed of the house, to be able to describe the room so exactly in which the chest was, he could not but believe him to be sincere.

At length, after much deliberation, he decided upon immediate departure; and arrived, on the evening of the fourth day at S— Hall. The sale had been the only theme of conversation at every place he had passed through, with in twenty miles of his destination, and much and loudly was it lamented, that the squire should be leaving his house forever, and that poor Mr. John would never enjoy his 'rights,' as they persisted in calling the possession of the estate. On his entrance in the mansion, signs of approaching removal every where met his eye. Packages filled the hall; servants, with sorrowful countenances, were hurrying about; and the family were lingering sadly over the last dinner they were ever to partake of in their regretted home.

Mr. S— greeted his friend with a surprise which changed to incredulity, when the barrister, requesting his private ear, declared the reason of his appearance.

'I cannot be,' said he. 'Is it likely that no one should ever have heard of the hiding of the deed but the old gentleman you mention. Depend upon it, you have been deceived, my dear friend; I am only sorry you should have taken so much trouble to do little purpose.'

The barrister mentioned the name of his visitor.

'Huge S—,' exclaimed the gentleman, laughing. 'I have not a relation of that name in the world.'

'It is worth the trying, however,' said the lawyer; 'and since I have come so far, I will finish the adventure.'

Mr. S—, seeing his friend so determined at length consented to satisfy him, and accompanied him toward the apartment he specified. As they crossed one of the rooms on their way, he suddenly stopped before a large, full length picture. 'For heaven's sake,' cried he, 'who is this?'

'My grand uncle,' returned Mr. S— 'A good fellow as ever lived. I wish, with all my heart, that he was alive now; but he has been dead these thirty years.'

'What was his name?'

'Huge S—. The only one of our family of that name.'

'That is the man who called upon me. His dress, his hat, his very ring are there.'

'He proceeded to the closet, lifted the false bottom of the chest, and found the deed.'

The kind old uncle was never seen again.

A BUCKEYE DUEL.

In the early part of 1824, a party of some twenty good fellows assembled, by the invitation of Mr. W., (a great favorite of their's) at the Pearl Street House, Cincinnati. W. was about to emigrate to a neighboring city, and having packed off all his movables, he had nothing to do but take leave of his old friends, with whom he resolved to have a parting supper. He therefore resolved to invite them, on the night of his departure, to join him in a few bottles of wine. Such things were more common in those days than since the advent of Madame Temperance into this, then wicked world. The invitation went out, and, strange to say, not a single 'regret' was sent in; but all came. Toasts were drunk—songs were sung—speeches got off, and the 'Old Pearl' fairly rung again with the revellings in its halls. In spite of all, the night would roll on. Three o'clock came, and the thundering of heavy wheels over the pavement told of the approach of the stage that was take away Mr. W.

The stage-agent opened the door of the dining-hall, and called for the passenger. Here was a scene! All had evidently been joyful overmuch, and a proportionate relaxation had succeeded. Some, incapable of rising or speaking, leaned back in their arm-chairs, and their eyes rolled out upon their wine-gorged cheeks, looking like so many boiled onions, stuck upon sun-flowers; while others, who carried lesser sized 'turkeys,' were toddling about the room in groups of two and upwards, muttering delightful sentiments, and swearing that their friendship to each other should last as long as it should please God to let them live.

'Where is Mr. W—?' called out Campbell the agent.

'N-n-not here, Mr. C-c-campbell,' answered some one; 'he's d-dead;—b-b-been dead t-two hours!'

'Dead! Great God! what do you mean?'

'Ay, dead!—stepped out! d-d-dead as Te-cumseh!'

Mr. C., now beginning to comprehend that life was not quite extinct, added—

'W— is to go in the stage—and it is now waiting for him at the door.'

'Stage? All the world's a stage! Ha, ha!—good. Yip! Yip! Ypsylanti! C-c-campbell, my dear fellow, tell the g-g-gentleman that steers your old w-w-wagon, to haul in that plank—c-r-crack on the steam—and let her r-r-rip, for W— can't go!'

'But he must go. Where is he?'

'Well, if he m-m-must go, and you will see him, there he is! (pointing under the table) down there among the cast off c-r-crackery. D-d-d—n it, see how he hugs the best crackers. S-s-sensible to the last.'

Mr. C. looked under the table, and there lay W., snoring, and holding in his embrace a pair of champagne bottles as closely as a young mother would clasp her twin babes. So pulling him out by the heels, Campbell righted him up, and partly dragging, partly lifting him, rolled him into the coach. Crack went the whip—the horses pulged forward, and whirled W. away from his companions, without even a parting tear. In the mean time they had all lain down in the supper room to rest, singing—

'We went go home till morning, Till broad daylight appears.'

W., with some difficulty, at last got fixed in the coach, and fell into a doze. Had he been wakened, he would probably have discovered that the landlord had, in a joke, placed in the side pockets of his overcoat a bottle of good old Bourbon whiskey, and one of 'Cognac.'

W.'s seat was on the middle bench of the coach, and directly in front, sat a six and a half Tennesseean. W. got into a habit of pitching forward, and would sometimes bring up plump against the abdomen of his vis-a-vis. Several times the Tennesseean passed it over, and actually assisted W. in righting himself up into his seat. Presently a sudden jolt of the vehicle threw Mr. W. upon the breast of the Tennesseean, with a tremendous concussion. The six-and-a-half footer became wrathful and exclaimed—

'Stranger, if you tumble on me again, in that way, I'll send you over to 'tother end of this multi-hopper, pretty d-n quick.'

'N-n-not on the f-f-feminines on the back-seat, I t-trust, old Stub-and-I wish.'

Old 'Stub-and-Twist,' as W. called him, made no reply; but after a while down came W. again upon him, when he pushed him, roughly back, and said—

'By G—d, sir, I tell you—meaning no disrespect to the ladies—that if you don't keep your seat, I'll split you plum in two.'

'Sp-sp-split me in two, eh? Let me inform you that I am a g-g-gentleman and never carry the d-d-deadies. But if I f-f-find you are a g-g-gentleman, I'll attend to your case in the morning, about the b-b-break o' day.'

'Very well, sir, I'll be there.'

Here Mr. W. changed his seat to one that proved more stationary, and soon fell asleep.

Morning came, and the sudden stopping of the coach at a watering place aroused W. from his sleep. He awoke spitting little wads of cotton, his mouth being as dry and dusty as Broadway in fly-time, and, jumping out, started for the well. Before he reached it, he looked back and saw one leg of the Tennesseean coming out of the coach. Suddenly the recollection of the challenge he had given flashed upon his mind, and the leg then appeared to him to be about fourteen feet long.

'Now I am in a fix,' said he to himself.

'Well, stranger,' said the Tennesseean, advancing, 'how do you feel by this time?'

'Tolerably well,' replied W.; 'but I should like some apology for your insult to me last night.'

'No apology from me, sir; not a word—you proposed to fight me this morning, and I am here.'

'Very well, sir, but I have no weapons.'

'Here—take this,' said the Tennesseean—showing him a bowie knife—'these are enough for me—holding out his clenched fists. 'You go to that fence—I will remain here, and when you say 'ready,' we will advance at pleasure, and each take his chance for the result.'

'Agreed,' said W. And he went to his post. While taking off his overcoat he discovered the bottles in his pockets, and suspecting what might be in them, called out to his antagonist to renew negotiations, in these words:

'I find, sir, I have a pair of loaded pistols in my pockets, and now propose that you take your choice; this will place us more on an equal footing, advancing at the same time with the muzzles forward.'

The Tennesseean nodded assent, and advanced also, evidently admiring the Buckeye's sense of chivalry. It was yet so early in the gray of the morning, that they drew very near each other before the Tennesseean discovered the shape of the pistols. When he did so, a playful smile lit upon his countenance; but he spoke not a word, until he had deliberately drawn their corks and applied each bottle to his smelter; when he quietly remarked:

'If this is the sort of a man you are, I think I'll take a little of the 'Old Bourbon.'

The two then exchanged a 'shot in the neck,' and were that day the life of the coach. And thus terminated the last meeting on the 'field of honor' that ever came off in the Bonnie Buckeye State.—Spirit of the Times.

LIVING IN A HURRY.

Perhaps the most characteristic peculiarity of our social condition at present is the unhealthy want of repose. Travelling by railroad is mere typical of the headlong hurry with which all the affairs of man are transacted. In business, men are in a hurry to get rich; they cannot submit to the tedious process of adding one year's patient and legitimate gains to those of its predecessors, by anticipation of intelligence received through the ordinary channels, but make or mar themselves by one bold stroke. The mechanical wheels revolve with accumulated speed to correspond to the hot haste of those who impel them. The long hours of factory and millinery drudgery, the gangs of night and day laborers relieving each other in printing offices and coal pits—all the unintermitting, eager, 'go-ahead' pressure of society—are but so many symptoms of the excitement which impels men to live in a hurry. It is a paradox only in form, to say that we are in such a hurry to live that we do not live at all. Life slips through our fingers unfeeling, unenjoyed, in the bustle of preparing to live. A day of business is a day of breathless haste. The duties of the toilet are hurried through; the breakfast is gulped down without being tasted. The newspaper is skimmed with a dim idea of its contents; the day is spent in straining to overtake complicated details of business too extensive for the mind's grasp; it costs a race to be in time for dinner, and dinner is curtailed of its fair proportion of time for the debate, or the committee, or the theatre, or the evening party, or all of them. Even sleep is got through impatiently, with frequent starting and consultations of the watch lest the morning hours be lost. We snore in quicker time than our ancestors snored. And the worst of it is, that men cannot help this railroad fashion of galloping out of life. When all are running at this headlong speed, you must run with them, or be borne down and run over, and trampled to death by the mass. Even the moralizers on this universal race for the sake of running, hurry along with the rest, and pant out their reflections as they run.

WONDERS OF NATURE. The Polypous, like the fabled fly, receives new life from the knife which is lifted to destroy it.

There are four thousand and forty-one muscles in a caterpillar.

Hook discovered fourteen thousand mirrors in the eye of a drone; and to effect the respiration of a carp, thirteen thousand and three hundred arteries, vessels, veins, and bones are necessary.

The body of every spider contains four little masses pierced with a multitude of imperceptible holes, each hole permitting the passage of a single thread, all the threads to the amount of a thousand in each mass, join together when they come out and make a single thread, with which the spider spins its web; so that what we call a spider's thread, consists of more than one thousand united.

Leuwenhook, by mean of microscopes, observing spiders no bigger than a grain of sand, which spun thread so fine that it took four thousand of them to equal in magnitude a single hair.

'ONLY ONCE.' One false step has ruined many a young man. Let this thought be impressed upon your heart. If the one false step do not itself prove ruinous, it may be the first step on the road to ruin. It may lead to others, which will issue in your destruction.—Resist beginnings. You may be tempted to forsake the sanctuary, and break the Sabbath, and the plea may be, 'It's only once.' It is a false step; it may ruin you. You may be tempted to appropriate the property of others to your own use, thinking, perhaps, that you may never be detected, and the plea may be, 'It's only once.' Avoid, avoid the first false step, for it has ruined many a young man, and may prove the ruin of you.

FORGIVENESS. Is there any real satisfaction in retaliating an injury? We venture to say there is not. On the contrary, we have known a slight offence visited by a slight retaliation, when regret for having resorted to it was far from being slight or of short duration. And we think we may confidently assure any person, young or old, who is determined to retaliate, that he or she will probably have the worst in the encounter. There is a satisfaction in forgiving an injury, which a revengeful spirit never experienced; whether the injury is done to our prospects or to our feelings, the best return we can make is to forgive.

A TRUE GENTLEMAN. No well bred person will be insolent to his inferiors. On the other hand, he will observe a scrupulous tenderness of manner toward them—a care of word and action, that shall lighten the burden of humility which they must necessarily feel, as much as possible. This refinement of heart is the most prominent characteristics of a high and noble spirit. It is the only mark of a lady or gentleman that is wholly unequivocal.—When we see a person very choice of his words, and very dainty at the table, yet capable of insulting the unfortunate, or ridiculing distress, we always think of the ass in the lion's skin.

THE FIRST WEDDING. We like short courtships, and in his, Adam acted like a sensible man—he fell asleep a bachelor, and awoke to find himself a married man. He appears to have popped the question almost immediately after meeting Midle Eve, and she without any flirtation or shyness, gave him a kiss and herself. Of that first kiss in this world we have had, however, our own thoughts, and sometimes in a poetical mood we have wished we were the man 'wot did it.' But the deed is done—the chance was Adam's and he improved it.

We like the notion of getting married in a garden. It is in good taste. We like a private wedding. Adam's was private. No envious beaux were there; no croaking old maids; no chattering aunts and grumbling grandmothers. The birds of heaven were the ministers, and the glad sky flung its light upon the scene.

One thing about the first wedding brings queer things to us, in spite of its scriptural truth. Adam and his wife were rather young to be married—some two or three days old, according to the sagest speculations of the logicians—mere babies—larger but not older—without experience, without a house, without a pot or a kettle, nothing but love and Eden!

HE HAS ENEMIES. We never hear the remark made of a man, 'that he has a great many enemies,' without feeling desirous of his acquaintance. We are sure to find him in many respects a sterling character. A man who plods along in the same track of his forefathers—who never breaks away from the traces of expediency, and who thinks and writes with the same pen, and from the same model, that his grandfather used, seldom if ever gains an enemy. But he who thinks for himself, is something of a genius, and has talents of a higher order, is sure to find enemies at every corner. A truthful paragraph that he has written—a daring vice that he has denounced—or a sense even of his superiority over themselves, induce many to say severe things of him and brings his good name into contempt. When lived the energetic, active, talented man, who had no enemies? Even perfection itself in the life of Christ, was ridiculed, spoken against, abused, spit upon and cast away.

DEFENCE AND EDUCATION. The English government does not seem to recognize the doctrine that a nation's best bulwark is the intelligence of its people; for it is said that the expenses of that country for purposes of defence on the peace establishment, are about one hundred millions of dollars a year; yet, at the last session of Parliament the most violent opposition was made to an appropriation of half a million of dollars for the purpose of education.

KNOWLEDGE. Knowledge is not a couch whereupon to rest a searching and restless spirit; or a terrace for a wandering and variable mind to walk up and down with a fair prospect; or a tower of state for a proud mind to raise itself upon; or a fort of commanding ground for strife and contention; or a shop for profit or sale, but a rich storehouse for the relief of man's estate.

ADVANTAGES OF THE FAIR SEX. According to Haller, women bear hunger longer than men; according to Plutarch, they can resist the effects of wine better; according to Ungor they grow older and are never bald; according to De La Part, they have sea-sickness lighter; according to Aristotle, they can keep up longer in swimming; and according to Pliny, they are seldom attacked by lions. (On the contrary, they will run after lions.)

GENEROSITY. There is a great distinction to be made between generosity of manner and generosity of heart. A good man is sometimes disguised by a certain coldness and formality of manners; while a 'heartine,' whose life is spent in the gratification of self, imposes on the multitude, by the bravery and frankness of his air for a most generous-hearted fellow.

CHURLISH NATURES. A churlish man will necessarily think worse of human nature than it deserves. As there are some flowers which never open but when the sun shines upon them, so there are many hearts whose good qualities must be drawn out by sympathy and kindness.

FRUGALITY. Said William Penn, frugality is good, if liberality be joined with it. The first is leaving off superfluous expenses; the last is bestowing them to the benefit of others that need. The first without the last, brings prodigality. Both together make an excellent temper. Happy the place where they are found.

SHRINKING OF FLANNEL. Enclose new flannel in a bag, put it into a boiler with cold water;—heat and boil it. It will never shrink any more after this operation, and should then be made up into garments.

TYRANNY. Every causeless and wanton restraint of the will of the subject, whether practised by a monarch, a nobility, or a popular assembly, is a degree of tyranny.

RECITE. Take a pint of pulverized charcoal, and put it into a bag, then put it into a barrel of new cider, and the cider will never ferment, will never contain any intoxicating quality, and is more and more palatable the longer it is kept.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,
WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,
far superior to the far famed Bogie Hygienic, which when scientifically applied, renders the hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

Children's hair cut at their residences at half price.

MISCELLANY.

BILL JINKINS' TROUBLES.

ON THE FIRST NIGHT OF HIS MARRIAGE.

Bill Jenkins was a very modest man; and although he had mingled with the world at barbecues, shooting-matches, bar-rooms, and at many of the cetera places where men may occasionally be found—yet he was modest, very—whenever placed in the company of ladies. He trembled when a pretty girl would speak to him, and felt like a culprit at the stand when he was called to 'see Miss-So-and-so home.' Bill could never explain or account for this singular timidity. He would sing, frolic, and be as wild as a Rover, among men, but a petticoat would unnerve him instantly.

Lucy Ann Liggins, a young widow, had 'set her cap' for Bill, and was determined to 'head him or die.' Bill, to tell the truth, loved Lucy, and was as miserable out of her company as he was timid in it—but as to 'popping the question,' that was impossible. Lucy knit purses, beamed handkerchiefs, worked shirt bosoms, and gave them to Jenkins, as well as several gold rings, but still Bill would not propose. Lucy declared to him repeatedly that she loved him and was miserable when he was absent from her, and her happiness in life depended upon being his wife—but Bill was dumb. At last Lucy was determined that he should 'hear thunder,' and when he next visited her, after some preliminary soft talk on her part, she affectionately said, 'Billy, my dear, when are you going to ask me to marry you? for I want to get my dress ready.'

Bill fainted on the spot, and bathshorn and water were applied for half an hour before he was finally restored.

'What has been the matter, Miss Lucy?' 'Oh, not much; you fainted when you were about to ask me to marry you—but I told you yes—and oh, how happy we will be when we are married! I will love you so dearly; and as you said next Tuesday, why I am willing the wedding should be then—my dear Billy how I do love you.'

'I am willing, Miss Lucy,' was all that Jenkins could articulate, while Lucy almost kissed him into fits. What a glorious victory!

Here we ought to stop, but justice to our narrative requires that we should proceed to the final.

The 'next Tuesday' had come, and Jenkins was trembling at the approach of evening—something seemed to harrow up his mind, and to no friend would he communicate his deep distress.

'You are not afraid, certainly, to go up and get married—why, to marry such a beautiful, charming and intellectual being, as Mrs. Liggins, I should wish that time would fly like news upon the Electric Telegraph line. Cheer up, Jenkins—cheer up.'

'Oh,' replied Bill, 'you don't know what distresses me. I can go up and get married—that is easy enough, but there is something—I know it—I feel it—there is one thing I am satisfied I never will be able to do, unless Lucy will assist me.'

'Explain yourself,' replied his friend, 'and if I can with propriety I will endeavor to render you comfortable.'

But Jenkins could not explain—he dared not—it was his timidity—he saw the Rubicon before him and knew he could not pass it—but he was determined to get married and 'trust to luck and Lucy.'

The night came—and they were married. All were merry; the laugh, the chat, the song and the dance, made up a lively party until midnight—they commenced to disperse, and at one o'clock, Bill Jenkins was left 'solitary and alone' in the Hall. Lucy Ann had retired, and her bridesmaids were off in a distant room. Bill Jenkins' waiters and friends had gone home with the ladies. Bill was now at the point where he thought his firmness would fail him. His situation was a peculiar one. He was not certain which was Lucy Ann's room, although he had been told—and even had he known he could not go to it.

The watchman cried 'past two o'clock,' and yet Jenkins was still alone and apparently engaged in perusing an old almanac, which, by chance had been left in his coat pocket. An old female darkey, who resided in the family, had been prevailed upon by the ladies, who noticed Jenkins' bashfulness, to show him his bedroom, and she accordingly introduced herself to him in as modest a style as she well could.

'Mr. Jenkins,' said she, 'past two o'clock.'

'Oh, yes—I know it—I'm going home in a few minutes. Old woman, where is my hat?'

'It's in Miss Lucy's room, sir—you can get it there if you'll go in. Mr. Jenkins, why don't you go to bed? Miss Lucy is there waiting for you—don't be so modest—the ladies will laugh at you. Come with me, and I'll show you the room, for I want to put out the lights, lock up the house, and go to bed.'

The old woman seized hold of Jenkins and pulled him along until she got out of the hall, and his gaze was fixed for a moment upon the entry door—but she was determined to put him into Miss Lucy's room, and after violent efforts succeeded. There he stood, with the knob of the door in his hand—but the old darkey had been smart enough to lock the door outside. Lucy pretended for some time to be asleep; but that sort of gammon would not answer—at last she said—

'My dear Billy, what is the matter?' 'I want my hat!' screamed Jenkins, and Lucy, knowing his modesty, leaped out of bed, and after caressing him for some time, Billy went to bed with his clothes and boots on—and trembled till morning.

How Jenkins subsequently managed 'matters and things in general' can be known by application to his dear Lucy.

Reader, strange as it may appear, there are Jinkinses all over the world; but the freemasonry of wedded life draws the curtain before the eyes of the uninitiated. Going to bed on the first night after marriage must be among the most delicate situations in life. Ask your married neighbor how it was with him. We have no experience, exactly, in that way!—Spirit of the Times.

TOO MUCH MONEY.

Said a friend to us last evening, 'I never saw but one man in my life who acknowledged he had quite as much money as he knew how to dispose of. I had called at his house one day, when a gentleman present urged him to a scheme from which he might realize a large profit.' 'You are right,' said he, 'as regards the probable success of the speculation, but I shall not embark in it; I have too much money now.' This very uncommon remark struck me most forcibly; and after the gentleman retired, I asked Mr. P. to explain. 'Yes,' said he in reply, 'I would not cross the street to gain thousands; I should be a happy man, if my income were less. I am old, and in a year or two, whatever I possess will avail me nought—my daughters are dead, and I have three sons upon whom I look with a father's pride. My own education had been neglected, my fortune was gained by honest labor and careful economy. I had no time for study, but I resolved that my sons should have every advantage. Each had the opportunity of gaining a classical education, and then I gave them the choice of a profession. The eldest would be a physician; the second chose the law, and the third chose to follow my footsteps as a merchant. This was very well—I was proud of my sons, and hoped that one day I might see them distinguished, or at least useful to their fellow men. I had spared no expense in their training; they had never wanted money, for I gave each a liberal allowance. Never had more fairer prospects of becoming honored and respected. But look at the result. The physician has no patients—the lawyer not a single client—and the merchant is above visiting his counting house. In vain I urged them to be more industrious. What is the reply? There is no use in it, father—we shall never want for money, we know you have enough for all.' So look at my disappointment. Instead of being active, energetic members of society, my sons are but idlers, men of fashion and display. True, they have few vices—perhaps not so many as their associates; they have never done any thing to bring disgrace upon my name—but I had expected them to add to the little reputation I have gained. It is not the money that I care for; as my sons say, I have enough for all. But let the physician attend the poor, and the lawyer see that justice is done to those who have not the means of paying the enormous fees now required by the members of the bar. The merchant may not need the reward of his labors, but there are a thousand benevolent institutions to the support of which it would be a pleasure to me to see him contribute. They would at least be useful, each in his vocation, to those around them; now selfish amusement is their only aim. This is a burden upon my heart, and this is the reason of the remark you listened to. Had they been obliged to struggle against difficulties to gain their professions, and were they now dependent upon their own exertions for support, my sons would have gained honor to themselves and me.'

This is the experience of many a wealthy parent, though all do not grieve at the result. It has almost passed into a proverb, that 'nothing can be expected of rich men's sons; and in looking about us at the distinguished men of our own day, how few do we find who have been nursed into greatness.

EDUCATION OF THE HEART.

It is the vice of the age to substitute learning for wisdom—to educate the head, and forget that there is a more important education for the heart. The reason is cultivated at an age when nature does not furnish the elements necessary to a successful cultivation of it; and the child is solicited to reflection, when he is only capable of sensation and emotion. In infancy, the attention and the memory are only excited strongly by things which impress the senses and move the heart, and a father shall instill more solid and invaluable instruction in an hour spent in the field, than in a month spent in the study, expounding stereotyped aphorisms.

No physician doubts that precocious children, in fifty cases for one, are much the worse for the discipline they have undergone. The mind seems to have been somewhat strained, and the foundations for insanity are laid. When the studies of maturer years are stuffed into the head of a child, people do not reflect on the anatomical fact, that the brain of an infant is not the brain of a man; that the one is confirmed, and can bear exertions—the other is growing, and requires repose; that to force the attention to abstract facts, to load the memory with chronological and historical or scientific detail—in short, to expect a child's brain to bear with impunity the exertions of a man's, is just as rational as it would be to hazard the same sort of experiment on his muscles.

The first eight or ten years of life should be devoted to the education of the heart, to the formation of principles, rather than to the acquirement of what is usually termed knowledge. Nature herself points out such a course—for the emotions are then the liveliest, and the most easily moulded, being as yet unalloyed by passion. It is from this source that the mass of men are hereafter to draw their sum of happiness or misery; the actions of the immense majority are, under all circumstances, determined much more by feeling than reflection; in truth, life presents an infinity of occasions where it is essential to happiness that we should feel rightly.

Up to the seventh year of life, very great changes are going on in the structure of the brain, and demand, therefore, the utmost attention not to interrupt them by improper or over-excitement. Just that degree of exercise should be given to the brain at this period, as is necessary to its health; and the best is moral instruction, exemplified by objects which strike the senses.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary to add, that at this period of life, special attention should be given both by parents and teachers, to the physical development of the child. Pure air and free exercise are indispensable, and wherever these are withheld, the consequences will be certain to extend themselves over the whole future life. The seeds of protracted and hopeful sufferings have, in innumerable instances, been sown in the constitution of the child, simply through ignorance of this great fundamental physical law—and the time has come when the united voices of these innocent victims shall ascend, 'trumpet-tongued,' to the ears of every parent and every teacher in the land. 'Give us free air and wholesome exercise; liberty to develop our expanding energies in accordance with the laws of our being, and full scope for the elastic and bounding impulses of our young blood.'—London Quarterly Review.

AN INTOXICATING FLUID.

If the vice of excessive drinking be occasionally indulged in among the better class of people of the Sierra, it is much more frequent among Indian inhabitants. Every one of their often recurring festivals is celebrated by a drinking bout, at which enormous quantities of brandy and chicha are consumed. In some districts of the Sierra the chicha is prepared in a peculiar and very disgusting manner by the Indians. Instead of crushing the jora (dried maize grain) between two stones, which is the usual method, the Indians bruise it with their teeth. This mass, after being boiled in water and left to ferment, is the much-admired chicha masada, (that is to say, chewed chicha), the flavor of which is said to surpass that of the same beverage made any other way. But they who have been eye-witnesses of the disgusting process, and who bear in mind various other preparations of Indian cookery in which the teeth perform a part, require some fortitude ere they yield to the pressing invitation of the hospitable Serano, and taste the proffered nectar. When it is wished to make the chicha particularly strong and well flavored, it is poured into an earthen jar along with several pounds of beef. This jar is made perfectly air-tight and buried several feet in the ground, where it is left for the space of several years. On the birth of a child it is customary to bury a botijo full of chicha, which on the marriage of the same child is opened and drunk. This chicha has a very agreeable flavor, but is so exceedingly potent that a single glass of it is sufficient to intoxicate a practiced chicha-drinker, or, as they say in the country, a chickero.—Von Tschudi's Travels in Peru.

TAKING SAMPLES.

Mr. K., a member elect for K—y county, lately made his debut in legislation. To say that he was 'green' in city life, and in all that related to intercourse with the 'upper,' or even second ten, would convey but the hundredth part of an impression which irresistibly fastened itself upon an eye witness.

He had 'legislated' (?) two whole weeks before he became aware that members drew pay for Sundays as well as week days, and when he learned that such was the fact, he took a bee line for his boarding house (?) and saluted 'his Sally' with the following:

'Waal, Sall! aint I in town? What do you think? I draw two dollars for every Sunday, besides my reg'lar pay! That, together with what washing you can do for other members will pay for our keepin, and I'll make a clean two hundred! Come! let's take a little corn on that.'

He drew out a pint flask, filled with what Capt. M—n of the 'Town Regulars' would call 'Bourbon,' that lacked only six days of being a 'week old,' and after 'taking a suck,' handed Sall the bottle. She lowered it 'about an inch,' when it was, in turn, handed to the other inmates of the house; and our hero—if it is not blasphemy to call him such—returned to his legislative callings.

But to my text. During the winter K. had become satisfied that he and his Sally could live cheaper, if they perwided for themselves, and only hired house-room.' Accordingly, at it they went—he 'perwided the truck,' and she acting the part of cook.

One morning, while at the grocery for the purpose of replenishing his flask, he espied an open barrel of salt or pickled mackerel. He knew they were fish, but what kind it mattered not—they struck his fancy, and turning to the owner, he said—

'Stranger, how do you sell these ere?' at the same time lifting one out of the brine.

'A bit a piece,' was the reply.

'Waal, I'll try a piece before I buy any, and see how I like them,' replied K., as he took out his knife and cut one in half.

'Certainly, take a sample,' said the owner, who desired to be very respectful to members.

With fish in hand, K. took the road for his boarding house. As he passed up the street, he was seen trying the sample, and by the time he reached our quarters, had devoured all.

The next morning he again visited the grocery for the purpose of laying in a fresh supply of 'bald face.'

'Well,' says the grocery keeper, 'how do you like my fish?'

'Drat your fish,' says K., 'it's too all-fired salt to eat much on! I reckon as how you just keep it here to make fellers dry, don't you? You can't come that game over me again, old boss!'

It is needless to say that 'mackerel' was a pass-word to a laugh for the remainder of the session.—Spirit of the Times.

THREE THINGS. Three things that never become rusty:—The money of the benevolent, the shoes of the butcher's horse, and a woman's tongue.

Three things not easily done:—To allay thirst with fire, to dry the wet with water, to please alike every thing that is done.

Three things that are as good as the best:—Brown bread in famine, well-water in thirst, and a great coat in cold.

Three things as good as their better:—Dirty water to extinguish fire, an ugly wife to a blind man, and a wooden sword to a coward.

Three things that seldom agree:—Two cats over one mouse, two scolding wives in the same house, and two lovers after the same maiden.

Three things of short continuance:—A lady's love, a chip fire, and brook's flood.

Three things that ought never to be from home:—The cat, the chimney, and the wife.

Three essentials to a false story teller:—A good memory, a bold face, and fools for his audience.

Three things seen in the peacock:—The garb of an angle, the walk of a thief, and the voice of the devil.

Three things it is unwise to boast of:—The flavor of thy ale, the beauty of thy wife, and the contents of thy purse.

Three miseries of a man's house:—A smoky chimney, a dripping roof, and a scolding wife.

SOMETHING FOR ALL. So various are the appetites of animals that there is scarcely any plant which is not chosen by some and left untouched by others. The horse gives up the water-hemlock to the goat; the cow gives up the long-leaved water-hemlock to the sheep; the goat gives up the monk's hood to the horse, &c.; for that which certain animals grow fat upon others abhor as poison. Hence no plant is absolutely poisonous, and only respectively. Thus the spurge, that is noxious to man, is wholesome nourishment to the caterpillar. That animals may not destroy themselves for want of knowing this law, each of them is guarded by such a delicacy of taste and smell that they can easily distinguish what is pernicious from what is wholesome; and when it happens that different animals live on the same plants, still one kind always leave something for the other, as the mouths of all are not equally adapted to lay hold of the grass—by which means there is sufficient food for all.

AGE OF POULTRY. It is easy to judge of plucked fowl, whether old or young, by the state of the legs. If a hen's spur is hard, and the scales on the legs rough, she is old, whether you see her head or not; but the head will corroborate your observation, if the under bill is so stiff that you cannot bend it down, and the comb thick and rough. A young hen has only the rudiments of spurs, the scales on the legs smooth, glossy and fresh colored, whatever the color, the claws tender and short, the under bill soft, and the comb thin and smooth. An old hen-turkey has rough scales on the legs, callosities on the soles of the feet, and long strong claws; a young one the reverse of all these marks. When the feathers are on, the old turkey-cock has a long beard, a young one but a sprouting one, and when they are off, the smooth scales on the legs decide the point, besides difference of size in the wattles of the neck, and in the elastic shot upon the nose. An old goose, when alive, is known by the roughness of the legs, the strength of the wings, particularly at the pinions, the thickness and strength of the bill, and the firmness and thickness of the feathers; and when plucked, by the legs, pinions, and bill, and the coarseness of the skin. Ducks are distinguished by the same means, but there is this difference, that a duckling's bill is much longer in proportion to the breadth of its head, than that of an old duck. A young pigeon is discovered by its pale colored, smooth scaled, tender, collapsed feet, and the yellow long down interspersed among the feathers. A pigeon that can fly has always red colored legs and no down, and is then too old for use.

JUDICIAL INTEGRITY. Judge Sewall of Massachusetts, who died in 1760, went one day into a hatter's shop, in order to purchase a pair of second-hand brushes for cleaning his shoes. The master of the shop presented him with a couple. 'What is the price?' said the Judge. 'If they answer your purpose,' replied the other, 'you may have them and welcome.' The Judge upon hearing this laid them down, and bowing, was leaving the shop; upon which the hatter said to him, 'Pray, sir, your honor has forgotten the principle object of your visit.' 'By no means,' answered the Judge, 'if you please to set a price I am ready to purchase; but ever since it has fallen to my lot to occupy a seat in the bench, I have studiously avoided receiving the price of any article I come in contact with at some future period of my life, it might have some kind of influence in determining my judgment.'

WATERMELON EXTRAORDINARY. How much do you ask for that melon? said a cute, dapper-looking chap, to a sturdy darkey, who was mounted on a cart before one of the principle hotels in Philadelphia, a day or two since.

'For this big un? Why, massa, I reckons he's wurf three levies, I does.'

'Is it ripe?'

'O yes, massa, he ripe, shu. I cun plugs um dough, if you sa's so.'

With that the darkey took out his jack-knife, and was making the first incision in the melon, when it gave a long, deep, piercing 'oh!'

'What do you stop for?' said the gentleman.

'Bress God! I tot him hollar, I did.'

'Come, cut away, and see if it is ripe.'

He gave another poke with his knife, and this time the melon shrieked out, 'Oh murder! you kill me!'

Before the last word was out, the melon went tumbling to the one side of the cart, and the darkey on the other, bellowing, 'O, de Lord! O, de Lord oh hebens!'

Picking himself, he half scrambled, half ran a few paces from the cart, and turning to behold the fragments of the melon, continued:

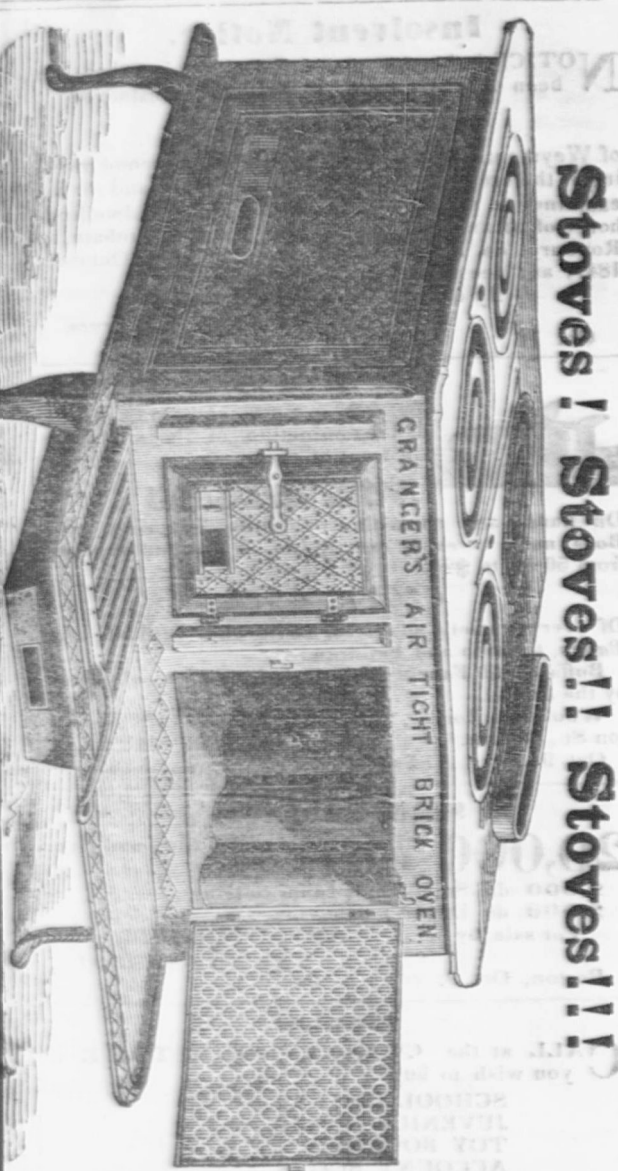

'Whew! dis nigger neber stands dyt.—'

'Clare to God it hollar murder!' while Wyman, the celebrated ventriloquist, walked away, amid the shouts and roars of the bystanders.—Trenton News.

CAUSE OF CRIME. One of the most fruitful causes of crime is undoubtedly a lack of proper education. England saves the expense of public schools, and the saving costs her fifty millions of dollars a year in courts, penal colonies, and in poor rates, not to reckon ruined hopes, broken hearts, blasted characters, and the wretchedness of tens of thousands living in shame and agony, a living death, whom free schools would have brought up to honor and happiness and a useful life. England has left the public morality to take care of itself, and the comment is heard in groans and written in blood.

WONDERS OF CHEMISTRY. Aquafortis and the air we breathe are made of the same materials. Linen and sugar, and spirits of wine, are so much alike in their chemical composition, than an old shirt can be converted into its own weight in sugar, and the sugar into spirits of wine. Wine is made of two substances, one of which, is the cause of almost all combustion on burning, and the other will burn with more rapidity than anything in nature. The famous Peruvian bark, so much used to strengthen stomachs, and the poisonous principle of opium are found of the same materials.

CADMUS. He laid the foundation of Thebes, and was the first who introduced letters into Greece. His alphabet consisted of only sixteen letters, to which eight more were afterwards added. His era is reckoned to be 1519 years B. C.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

Would respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unexcelled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the far famed Bugle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable, and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition, which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

For the Quincy Patriot.

CORRESPONDENCE.

QUEBEC, Aug. 17th, 1847.

FRIEND GREEN—Having been obliged to stay in this place longer than anticipated when I last wrote you, I take the liberty of addressing you a few more lines.

As I said in my last, Quebec is a gloomy place to a stranger, yet there are many places in and about the city, interesting from their associations of the past. While strolling over the plains of Abraham, a place, as you are aware, particularly celebrated in the annals of the French and Revolutionary wars, my attention was attracted to a small monument, which marked the spot where the brave and patriotic Gen. Wolfe fell. The monument is made of granite, small, and now so much defaced that the inscription (here died Wolfe victorious) which it bears is with difficulty read, the iron railing which once enclosed it, now is broken, and lies in ruins around it. As I gazed at this monument, and surveyed with my eyes the vast plain spread out before me, I gave myself up to reflection, and my mind was hurried back to other days and other scenes, when eight thousand brave soldiers under command of the lamented Wolfe, stood up in battle array against ten thousand troops led on by Gen. Montcalm. And yet later, when a small part of the American army, then reduced to a meagre remnant by toil, privation and sickness, commanded by Generals Montgomery and Arnold, attacked the city, and fought valiantly and desperately as none but patriots can, against the enemy, vastly superior in numbers, and strongly fortified. Here Montgomery fell, covered with horrible wounds, at the very muzzle of the enemies' guns. His name has descended with esteem and glory, an example of unwavering fidelity and bravery. Far better had it been for Arnold had he shared the same fate, for no man had been more zealous in the cause of freedom, or performed more glorious deeds than he. The great firmness and talent he manifested, while for forty days, yet resolutely toiled through the gloomy wilderness of Maine and New Hampshire, exposed to hunger, cold and misery, yet his energy and perseverance led him on, till at last he reached Quebec. Here he fought with reckless bravery, and won an enviable reputation. But alas! he outlived this glorious achievement, and disgraced the fame he had so justly won, by the basest perfidy and most daring treason in the annals of our revolution.

The Citadel of Quebec, situated on Cap Diamant, a bold promontory which rises abruptly from the water to the height of three hundred and fifty feet, is a fortress of immense strength. The guns are so mounted in the citadel as to have complete control of the harbor either way, bidding defiance to any attack which could be made from the water. To gain admittance to the citadel a pass is required from the Mayor of the city, which I just obtained through the kindness of our landlord of the Albion. On presentation of the pass at the gate, a guide, generally one of the soldiers, is sent to accompany you through the whole, explaining the different purposes of the many different parts. The view from the citadel is grand. Being three hundred and fifty feet above the water, every thing is seen as in a panorama—city with its spires, and glistening roofs—harbor, dotted with ships and steamers gliding rapidly along or lying motionless on the water—the varied scenery in the distance, all combine to make the view pleasant and enthralling.

In the Upper City, fronting the harbor, stands a fine memory of Wolfe and Montcalm. It is situated in the midst of a beautiful flower garden, surrounded by a handsome iron railing, and is but a just tribute of respect to the brave and worthy men whose memory it commemorates.

Yours truly, AMERICUS.

The friends of A. J. Davis, the clairvoyant, are about to establish a weekly paper in New York city, under the title of The Universalist, to be edited by Mr. Davis and eleven others.

They have a machine in Washington which turns out four thousand percussion caps per hour.

Rev. Dr. George Burgess, of Hartford, has been elected Episcopal Bishop of Maine.

The total liabilities of all the houses that have recently failed in England are said to be one hundred and seventeen millions and a half of dollars! Of this amount, at least one hundred and five millions of dollars belong to the United Kingdom.

The Governor of Canada refuses to give up the fugitive slave Brown, who is charged with the commission of a murder in Calvert county (Penn.).

The sum of seventy five thousand dollars has been recently offered for the patent right of an artificial leg, lately invented by a Yankee in New Hampshire. One leg per day is wanted in New England alone.

One night last week some scoundrel entered the orchard of Mr. Daniel Merrill 2d, in Methuen, and destroyed about one hundred thirty apple trees, worth at least five hundred dollars. The selectmen of the town have offered a reward of one hundred dollars for the detection of the perpetrators.

Miss Thompson, a lady of large fortune—who has boarded for some years at the Tremont House, Boston—suddenly disappeared on Monday last, and was found drowned in Jamaica Pond, Roxbury, where it is supposed she had thrown herself in a fit of mental derangement.

Mr. Longfellow's beautiful phrase, "suffer and be strong," is now familiarly rendered "grin and bear it."

The receipts on the Fall River Railroad for four months, exhibit a net income of $37,000—equal to 37-40 per cent. on its capital, one million of dollars.

Late dates from New Orleans state that a small increase in the deaths by yellow fever, caused by the influx of strangers.

Six states have fixed on the same day (Nov. 25th) for Thanksgiving, viz: Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and Missouri.

The friends and fellow soldiers of Gen. Harrison had an informal meeting at Cincinnati a few days since, to consider the subject of erecting a monument to his memory. The intention is that a monument shall be erected at North Bend, which shall be a fitting memorial of national gratitude to the deceased patriot.

A wag speaking of Cincinnati, said, "it should be called the Ham-burgh of America." True," answered his companion, "and it will one day be the meat-ropolis of America."

During a violent thunder storm at the city of Nashville, Tennessee, struck, the Powder Magazine at that place was struck with lightning, causing an explosion by which one hundred houses were destroyed and many lives lost.

Vocal Concert. It will be seen by an advertisement, that the "Baker Family of Vocalists" are to give a Concert at the Town Hall this (Saturday) evening. They are natives of Salisbury, (N. H.) They have been engaged in their present avocation some more than three years. Wherever they have been (and they have travelled quite extensively) they have elicited the highest encomiums from the press. We make the following extract from the Jackson Democrat (Williamsport, Penn.):

"On Wednesday evening last the beauty, taste, refinement and piety of our borough assembled at the Court Hall to hear the Bakers, who arrived early enough in the day to cultivate the esteem of all who sought their acquaintance. The fame of these vocalists having preceded them, our citizens were prepared for a highly pleasurable entertainment; yet every anticipation of enjoyment was far more than realized. Their pieces were patriotic, sentimental and amusing; and though nothing transpired in the least degree calculated to chill the power of devotion, yet something was offered for the gratification of every refined taste. The most amusing pieces were as much enjoyed by the clergymen and their families, who were present, as by the 'fun-loving blue eye' just free from the restraints of the school-room. We feel the impossibility of conveying in words any description of the power of their music. The Bakers must be heard to be appreciated. Those only who have heard the echo and bass of the Bakers' concert, can form any idea of George's powerful bass, and the soft, sweet notes of the female voices. Success attend the Bakers, whose musical talents are only equalled by their personal merits."

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE. The large and extensive Card Manufactory of Messrs. Isaac and Edward Crehore, at Milton Lower Mills, was totally destroyed by fire last Thursday morning at seven o'clock. There was a large stock of paper and cards, and much new valuable machinery in the factory, which shared the fate of the building. The entire loss is supposed to be between five and six thousand dollars. This was the only card factory in the New England states, and the business done was very large. The factory was insured, partially at the Manufacturers' Office in Boston.

LATER FROM EUROPE. The steamship Cambria, from Liverpool, arrived at the Cunard Wharf, East Boston, on Wednesday, after a pleasant passage of fourteen days.

We learn by this arrival, that Hon. Alexander H. Everett, Commissioner from the United States to China, died at Canton on the 20th of June last. His remains were interred at Whampoa, with appropriate ceremonies.

There had been considerable fluctuations in the price of cotton, which had fallen in price. Commercial disasters have gone on increasing. The mercantile community has been convulsed to the very centre, and the week previous to the departure of the Cambria from Liverpool, is considered the most disastrous which has ever been known. All descriptions of stocks and property have depreciated. In the prices of cotton, there had been a considerable decline. In the manufacturing districts the total suspension of confidence has rendered it impossible to transact any extensive business, and many of the Cotton Mills have been obliged to suspend operations.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. Early on Wednesday morning last, a young man named Willard Farnum of this town, was accidentally caught in the machinery of Mr. Charles H. Edwards' Planing Mill, at Neponset Village, and his left hand severely mangled. Drs. Thaxter, Cushing and Leavenworth of Dorchester, and Bugbee of Quincy, were called. Amputation of the hand being considered necessary, the operation, as we learn, was performed by Dr. Bugbee, to whose care the case was submitted, with an adroitness and success, which reflected much credit upon him as a surgeon. The vapor of ether was inhaled during the operation, and the patient seemed unconscious of pain. By last accounts, he was doing well.

MEXICO. All accounts agree that Maj. Gen. Scott had peaceful possession of the City of Mexico. No definite news has been received of the siege. The United States government now intend to prosecute the war with vigor, and have called for an additional number of regiments.

APPOINTMENT. Col. John W. Thomas has been appointed postmaster at South Weymouth, in the place of Jacob Loud, Esq., removed.

Charles Johnston, clerk at Oak Hall, Boston, has been arrested charged with stealing goods to a large amount from his employer. He has been in the habit of directing goods to Springfield and New York, and selling them at auction. He has been bound over in the sum of two thousand dollars.

The Webber Guide Post has just commenced a new volume, enlarged and improved.

The Native Americans held a State Convention in Boston. Francis Baylies of Taunton, was nominated for Governor, and Charles W. Moore, for Lieutenant Governor. Thirteen towns and cities, out of the three hundred and ten in the State, were represented.

A child four months old died in New York last week, from the effects of six drops of paregoric. It was given to the child on Saturday morning by the nurse to quiet him, and did not take effect until afternoon. He then fell asleep, from which he could not be roused, and died on Sunday morning.

Commodore Ap C. Jones will leave in a short time to take command of our squadron at Monterey, on the Pacific.

We hear of the progress of the potato rot in Canada, New Jersey, Vermont, and in Western New York. It is stated that effluvia arising from the hills in some fields is absolutely sickening.

An effort is to be made at the coming session of Congress to secure an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars, on certain conditions, for the purchase of Mount Vernon.

As a sailor was passing through Hanover street, Boston, one evening last week, he discovered a gold watch suspended by the guard to one of the buttons on his jacket. He was unable to account for the possession of it, and left it with marshal Tukey.

The Secretary of the Treasury has issued a circular directing the admission free of duty of coffee of the growth of Brazil, imported directly from that country, in vessels belonging to that nation; and also exempting said vessels and cargoes from the charge of discriminating duties of impost or tonnage of any description whatever.

Hon. Ruel Williams, formerly Senator in Congress from Maine, was elected to the House of Representatives of that state, from Augusta, recently.

The Queen of Spain lately shot two deer during a grand hunt which took place at Rio Frio. She is a bold rider, leaping hedge and ditch without ceremony, to the great dismay of her courtiers, who have to follow.

We understand that the Oratorio of the "Creation," with orchestral accompaniments, will be performed at South Weymouth about a month, under the direction of Mr. D. F. Felt.

Of all the men published as deserters from the army, not one is a printer; neither has a printer been punished for disobedience. Two recent immigrants from England—a man and his wife—have been convicted at Montreal of the murder of their two children. They were prompted to the deed from the want of means—as no one would employ them on account of the children. They will be executed Nov. 1st.

George W. Towns, democrat, has been elected Governor of Georgia by majority of fifteen hundred. Capt. Paul R. George has been detached from the Massachusetts Regiment to the staff of Gen. Cushing as Brigade Quarter Master.

The exports of Indian corn, the past year, from the United States to Great Britain and Ireland alone, have exceeded by half a million bushels the entire export of that article to all countries from 1840 to 1846 inclusive.

NOTICE.

An adjourned meeting of the Social Singing Society will be held at the Lyceum Room, SUNDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock.

MARRIED.

In this town, 20th inst, by Rev. Mr. Lunt, Mr. Lewis Curtis to Miss Emeline M. Phipps.

DIED.

In this town, 16th inst., Anna, daughter of Mr. William R. Belzer, aged 2 years.
On 17th inst., Stephen Stodder, son of Mr. James Lovell, aged 5 weeks.
In Braintree, Oct. 15th, of the typhus fever, Henry M., son of Mr. Martin and Mrs. Susan Nash, aged 21 years.

"Was lying" on the couch of death
A form that once was nerved with strength,
Now turned with restless pain.
Oh! what a scene of anguish this!
What sorrow rends the heart;
Life's feeble lamp waning in death
Just ready to depart!

Can naught evade the fatal blow,
And stay the ruthless hand
That waits to break the tender tie
That joins this happy band?
Fond parents' tears cannot avail,
Naught can restore our son;
At heaven's behest the mandate flies,
Dread Azriel's work is done!

Well may we mourn his early death,
His excellence and worth;
For qualities rarely found
So soon removed from earth.
His was a mind of noble mould,—
Virtue with worth combined;
His heart was noble, just and true,
Affectionate and kind.

But there is one whose heart will bleed
When others cease to weep,
And round his grave fond memory will
Its faithful vigils keep.
Her cherished dreams of golden bliss
Are blighted, crushed and gone;
And o'er the grave of him she lov'd,
Her lot it is to mourn

The kindest tones of friendship fail;
To cheer her stricken heart,
Earth cannot yield a solace now,
Or one bright ray impart,
In heaven a crystal fountain flows,
To soothe the heart of grief,
Thither thy weary thoughts bend,
And find the sure relief.

One Evening Only.

THE BAKERS.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
60 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to reorganize the General Agency there. It is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. EDWARD BARTON, is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the Company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

THE GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.
The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrhs, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Bile, Hemorrhoids, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box. The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,
Warranted to make two quartes superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, and all other eye diseases, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Gun Cotton for Blasting.
THE undersigned, Agent in Boston for the Patentes, invites the attention of persons interested in Quarrying, Mining and Tunneling, to the patent Gun Cotton, which will be found in all respects superior to Gunpowder for blasting rock. A charge of cotton occupies less space than one of powder, and does its work more quietly and thoroughly. It is more convenient for charging in upper and side holes, is LESS AFFECTED BY DAMPNESS, and makes no smoke or noxious gas.

The Agent is prepared to take orders, and will show samples and give any desired information to those who will call at his Store, or send by mail descriptions and directions for use.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
60 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to reorganize the General Agency there. It is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. EDWARD BARTON, is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the Company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

THE emperic of our nation is well high becoming proverbial. A strict sense of justice, urges us imperatively to resort to those well defined and simple preparations, which being prepared from Health! Health!!

SARSAPARILLA
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPA-
RILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures
HEALTH AND VIGOR
to the whole system. In all cases of
JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA,
LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL
CONSTIVENESS, SCROFULA,
HEADACHE, LANGUOR,
and that
DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,
which is so common a complaint in the
SPRING AND SUMMER
season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous
of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.
BE CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.
Be Particular and ask for Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E.
Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.
Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

Pleasant Residence for Sale.
THE subscriber offers for sale his former residence, consisting of a country Cottage Dwelling-house, about one acre of excellent Land, with convenient Out-Buildings, and a never-failing Well of Water. Said house is thirty-four feet square, contains eight rooms, and has been built but a few years, of the best materials.
Upon the premises is a young Orchard of about seventy trees of the different varieties of fruits, selected with especial care, very thrifty, and in good bearing order. This place is quite pleasantly located on Granite Street, Quincy, and within three minutes walk of the Railroad Depot.
It will be sold at a bargain, and the payments made easy.
For further information apply to
EDWARD HALL.
Quincy, Sept. 25.

For Sale,
A NEW COTTAGE HOUSE and one fourth of an acre of Land, on Washington Street, built of cedar, of the best materials, and finished in the most thorough manner. The above is about three minutes' walk from the Old Colony Railroad Depot and is a rare chance for an investment. Price $1600 dollars.
Also—Several lots of WOOD.

as a dwelling and partly as a Milliner's Shop, consisting of seven rooms and in good condition.
Also—Two other chambers adjoining, lately occupied by the Quincy Temperance Society, which will be let with the same, or separately.
The house is well situated to accommodate a gentleman doing business in Quincy, or doing business in the city of Boston and wishing to reside with his family in the country, being within about twenty rods of the Depot of the Old Colony Rail Road.
Also—A new building now finishing in said Quincy, adjoining the Bookstore of C. Gill & Co., calculated for small Stores, or places of business, designed for two tenements, consisting of two rooms on the lower floor and two chambers to each tenement, being one of the best locations for business in the town of Quincy.
Application may be made at the Store of JOSIAH
BRIGHAM & Co., near the premises.

TO VOTERS.

The Selectmen give notice, that they will be in session, for the purpose of correcting and revising the foregoing list, at the Selectmen's Room, in the Town Hall, on SATURDAY, the 6th of November next, from two to five o'clock in the afternoon.

Also—On MONDAY, the 8th of November next, from eight till nine o'clock in the forenoon; at the same place.

DANIEL BAXTER, } Selectmen
BRYANT B. NEWCOMB, } of SETH SPEAR, } Quincy.
Quincy, Oct. 27th, 1847.

QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS.

Every male citizen of twenty-one years of age and upwards, (excepting paupers and persons under guardianship) who shall have resided within the state one year, and within the town, in which he may claim a right to vote, six months next preceding any election of town, county or state officers, or of representative to congress, and who shall have paid, by himself, or his parent, master or guardian, any state or county tax, which shall, within two years next preceding such election, have been assessed upon him, in any town in this state; and also every citizen, who shall be by law exempted from taxation, and who shall in all other respects be qualified as above mentioned, shall have a right to vote in all such elections; and no other person shall be entitled to vote in such elections.—Revised Statutes.

PRUDENCE IN CONVERSATION. It is as obliging in company, especially of superiors, to listen attentively, as to talk entertainingly. Do not think of knocking out another person's brains, because he differs in opinion with you. It will be as rational for you to knock yourself on the head, because you differ from yourself ten years ago.

If you want to gain any man's good opinion take particular care how you behave the first time you are in company with him. The light you first appear in to one who is neither inclined to think well or ill of you, will strongly prejudice him either for or against you.

Be sure of the fact before you lose time in searching for a cause.

In disputes upon moral and scientific points ever let your aim be to come at truth, not to conquer your opponent.

If you happen into company where the talk runs into obscenity, scandal, or folly, or vice of any kind, you had better pass for morose and unsocial among people whose good opinion is not worth having, than shock your own conscience, by joining in conversation which you must disapprove of.

GRATEFUL AND GENEROUS. A writer in a Baltimore paper says, a well known baker, a few days ago, inclosed a check for $2000 to a widow lady saying, that while he was in want of the 'needful' some years long gone by, he obtained a small loan of a few hundred dollars from her husband, which was never called for, and that the present sum was the amount with interest and profits accruing; and though there was no legal obligation to return it, he felt it his conscientious duty, and was happy to send it, and beg her acceptance, &c. So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

A MARRIED WOMAN'S SOLILOQUY.

Yes, it's go! go! go! go! and git! for every body on earth but one's own wife. If I should ask Mr. Slocum to go out at such a time of day, for a water pail or basket of oranges, d'ye guess he'd go? Not he! not he; I might want one while and take it out in wanting! Oranges, forsooth. 'Twas only yesterday I asked him to call at William's for Charley's shoes. Wouldn't you like to have heard him scold though? If he didn't tune up! Always something wanting! Wished he could go to the store and back without calling for a dozen articles! And when he came in and put them on Charley's feet, slapped him for crying because the pegs hurt him! Poor fellow, he limped around till his father had gone, and then pulled them off. The pegs were an inch long at the least calculation. And now, just because Mrs. Brown hints at a water pail, he's up and off in a minute! Why couldn't Brown go? Just as though her own husband wasn't good enough to wait upon her. I'd show him the difference, if I was Brown! A pretty how'd do we shall have of it, if things go on at this rate. I'll ask Brown to do my errands, and see how he likes it.

If the girls only knew? But no they won't believe a word of it! Bought wit is the best, if you don't get it too dear! I wonder what some folks call dear? There's Nelly Bly. You might talk to her till next July, and she wouldn't believe it. But she'll see! She'll learn a lesson for herself she'll not forget very soon.

If I was a girl again, I wouldn't change my condition in a hurry! Not I. There was Slocum always ready to run his legs off—but now—he'll go sooner for that Mrs. Brown than for his own flesh and blood.

But I'll pay him, see if I don't! I won't get him a mouthful of supper. He may get his victuals where he does his work. See how he'll like that. If I should do so—always trying to please other folks' husbands instead of my own—we should have a pretty kettle of fish. There's Willie, he's teased for an orange these three days and not the peel of one has been seen yet.

There he comes, puffing like a steamboat. If I had sent him he wouldn't have been back these two hours. Calling at Mr. Brown's too, if it aint enough to vex a saint. I'll tell him I'll quit—I'll—but no, he'll like that too well. The brute!

I won't please him so much. I'll stay if he wants; and no thanks to him either. There he comes again, and both hands full. Wonder what he has got now, and who else he is running for? Coming through the gate, and yes—both pockets full of oranges. The—dear soul! I knew he wouldn't forget his own children. Won't Willie have a good meal? And I will—yes, he shall have muffins for supper; Slocum loves muffins.

That's all we heard reader, for when Slocum opened the hall door Charlie, Willie, wife and all went out to meet him, and get some of those oranges.

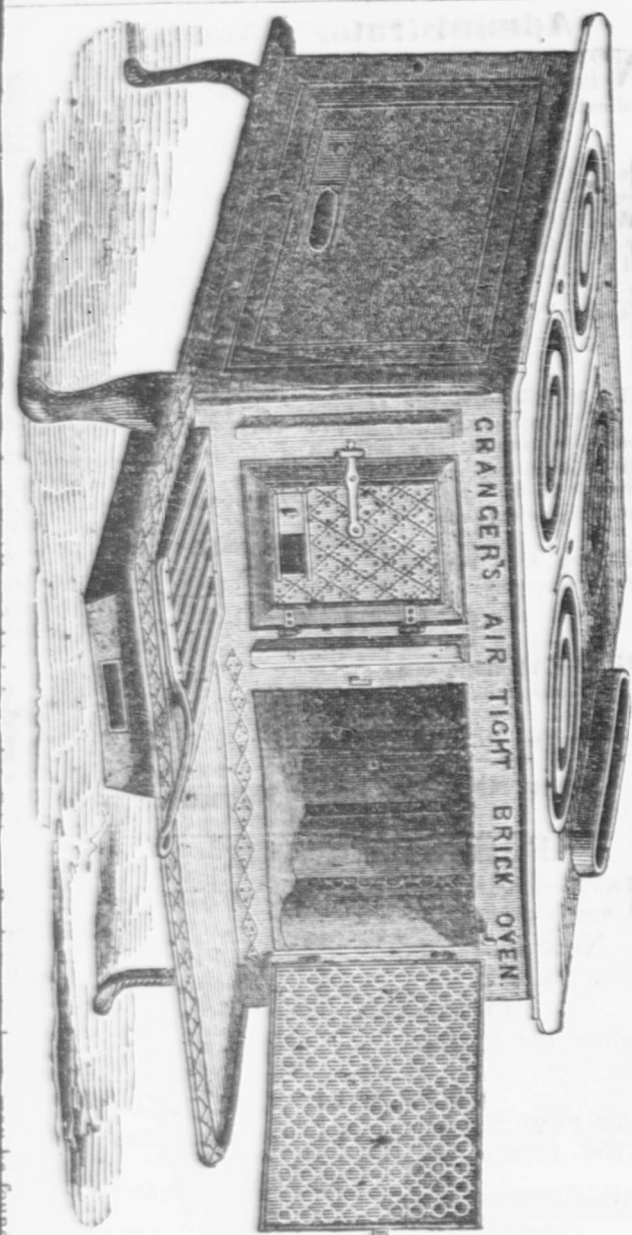

Slocum did get supper, and Slocum had muffins.—Troy Budget.

AN IRON MAN—SINGULAR PETRIFICATION. Quite recently, a gentleman brought into Portsmouth, (Ohio), from the Bloom Furnace, Scioto county, a part of an iron man, found in the ore bed! The part we saw was the foot and a part of the leg. Having been converted into iron by a gradual process, the minutest divisions, as between the toes, etc, were not visible; but the general outline of the foot and ankle were palpable. The spreading across the toes, the general outline of the toes, the heel, ankle, &c. were perfectly plain. We were told that the head and arms are still more perfect. There could not be the least doubt of its having been a man. Nor is there much doubt of the manner in which it came into this condition. The body must originally have been petrified in lime; but of this there remains now only the outside incrustation, which will crumble off. What was the man is now iron. By some natural process, the iron must have grown out of the lime. And here is a theme for geologists! How did this change take place? If we are right—and the facts seem to leave no room for doubt—this iron man would afford one of the most beautiful subjects for a geological lecture. The iron ore, in which it is found, is called the calcareous formation. The process of its formation would be an instructive study.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

THE SIAMSE TWINS. They reside at Mount Airy, North Carolina, on a farm purchased with the proceeds of their exhibitions, and which they cultivate. Both are married and have a number of children. They appear to take great pleasure in farming, are quite plain and economical in their dress and manner of living, are fond of hunting, and, with their wives and little ones, apparently quite happy and contented.

ON WOMAN! The Brooklyn Light Guard should be called 'The Woman's Own,' for their admiration of the sex is unbounded, if we may judge from the following toast given at their late excursion: 'Woman—the core of our heart—the apple of our eye—the smile of heaven upon us—the spirit of our life—the incarnation of divinity! We love her, 'how we love her!' and he who does not love her is a God-forsaken wretch!'

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled superior to the far famed Bugle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

GROWTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. In 1790 the whole personal property of the State of Massachusetts was estimated at $14,021,347. In 1809 it had increased to $97,949,616. In 1830 it was $305,856,422; and in 1840 it amounted to $229,880,335. The average in 1840 was $406.50 to each resident of the State, the number of inhabitants being more than 700,000; and in 1847 it will amount to about $388,400,000. From these facts it appears that wealth increases in Massachusetts three times faster than the population. Were the whole property of the State divided, every family consisting of five persons would have an estate worth $2,032. But the cost of living has kept pace with the increase, for the average surplus over consumption is only about ten dollars per head.

CANDOR. If you would be prosperous in your undertakings, you must evince a strong regard for the truth. Not, however, because it opens before you the way to eminence—but, because it is a duty so intimately connected with your being. Speak the truth, from principle, from an innate love of virtue, and you may venture with confidence, upon the theatre of life, taking an important part in the great drama to be enacted thereon. Have a respect for truth, for the sake of the truth, and man will respect you, and aid you, and honor you. If you promise to perform, then do so, not because you fear to meet the disapprobation of man, but for the respect you have for your word and honor, in the eyes of your own conscience. This is true candor. And to speak the truth for fashion's sake, or because you are compelled to do so, is to belie your own intentions.

'STAND IN AMONG-T THE PINS.' A good story is told of a Yankee who went for the first time to a bowling alley, and kept firing away at the pins to the imminent peril of the boy, who so far from having any thing to do in 'sitting up' the pins, was actively at work in an endeavor to avoid the ball of the player, which rattled on all sides of the pins, without touching them. At length the fellow seeing the predicament the boy was in, yelled out, as he let drive another ball, 'Stand in among the pins, boy, if you don't want to get hurt.'

ORCHARDS. Should any of the trees show canker or too much gum, you should cut the decayed part clean to the sound wood, taking care to leave a smooth surface on the wound which must be covered with the following mixture: Take in the proportion of one pint of tar to one pound of powdered chalk, or the same quantity of calcined plaster, mix the whole well together and paint the wounded part with it.

STOOD ON HER POSITION. A divine in St. Louis called recently to see a sick lady belonging to his church. Said lady had been very kindly attended, during her illness, by a female cousin, who was also a member of the same congregation. The minister prayed with the afflicted one, and being cognizant of the kindness of the cousin, he besought the Lord, in his prayer, to bless his servant, who had in so kind and Christian a manner, watched over the afflicted lady. The cousin withdrew forthwith from the congregation, asserting at the same time that she would let him know she wasn't any body's servant!

CONCERT. The Baker family of vocalists gave a concert in this town a few evenings since, which was very fully attended. It was no catch-penny affair, but elicited the admiration of the large company present. Every hearer appeared highly pleased; and for rich melody, excellent time, and distinctness of sound, the Bakers will be admitted to have few equals.

FROM THE ARMY. Late advices from the Brazos state that the principal portion of Gen. Taylor's troops are to be garrisoned at Fort Brown, Camargo, and Point Isabel, and that the remainder will shortly unite with the forces under Gen. Scott. There is no further intelligence of importance.

HON. A. H. EVERETT. Mr. Everett died at the house of Dr. P. Parker, Secretary of Legation, who has been for several years resident at Canton. He died of a severe and painful chronic disease, under which he had suffered for two or three years, at the age of fifty-seven years. Notwithstanding the painful character of his complaint, he possessed his intellectual faculties in their vigor to the last, and he devoted some hours to writing and business to the last day but one of his life. The foreign authorities at Canton appear to have shown the most marked attentions at the funeral. Mrs. Everett remained at the last day at Canton, where she receives every kind attention and solace which her bereaved condition admits.

SAMARITAN BALM. Mrs. E. Hayden, of this town, has received from the proprietors a small lot of this infallible remedy for coughs, colds and diseases of the lungs. Those afflicted will find this far superior to all Balsam, or wild cherry, ever invented; it has been proved by several years trial and is now for the first time offered to the public.

AGES OF GREAT MEN. John Quincy Adams is the Nestor of our distinguished men. He is 80 years old. Henry Clay is 70. Van Buren, Johnson, Cass and Webster, sixty years old. Polk and Tyler, 57. ANTI-SLAVERY MEETING. The Norfolk County Anti-Slavery Society will hold a Quarterly Meeting in South Weymouth, on Wednesday, Nov. 3d, in one of the Congregational Meeting Houses, or in Rogers's Hall, beginning at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and continuing through the day and evening. Messrs. May, Pillsbury, Quincy, Brown, and others, will address the Meeting. It will be conducted on the picnic plan, and parties from a distance will bring their own provisions with them. No postponement on account of the weather.

EDGAR K. WHITTAKER. This individual has been selected as one of the candidates for State Senator for Norfolk County. We speak of him aside from his party predilections, because we have every evidence that he is a good man—one of Nature's noblemen. He is intelligent and liberal—honest and upright—combining with the more rare abilities of an humble citizen the qualities of a polished gentleman.

FUN, AND NO MISTAKE. Harrington (not the person of that name who attempted to perform here several months ago, but the original and genuine Harrington) will be at the Town Hall, in this place, next Thursday evening, and for fun and legere-drama he stands unrivalled. There is no mistake about his performances being No. 1, and with the reduced price of admission, a full house must be the consequence. Go in season to secure a seat. To the Honorable the County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk:

THE Petition of the South Shore Rail Road Company, a Corporation established by the laws of said Commonwealth, respectfully represents—that they have located and are about constructing their said Rail Road from Braintree to Cohasset, through the Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset in said County of Norfolk; that in constructing their said Road through the said Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset, it will be necessary to cross the following ways or streets in said Towns—

In the Town of Braintree—Adams Street (at Depot), Middle Street, Commercial Street (by Jacob Allen's), Road to White's Mill (at Hollis'), Road at White's (at the Dam), New Road to White's, Weymouth and Braintree Turnpike (by Church).

In the Town of Weymouth—Commercial Street (at Loud's), Commercial Street (at Tufts'), Green Street (by Humphrey's), Green Street (by Bicknell's), Loud's Lane, East Street, Road to Nail Works, Commercial Street, French Street—

In the Town of Cohasset—Hill Road, Cohasset and Hingham Road, King Street, Deer Hill Lane.

That they are desirous of constructing their said Rail Road in such manner as to cross said Ways or Streets upon a level, They, therefore, pray your Honorable body, that due notice may be given to said Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset, and to all other persons interested, of this Petition, and that your Petitioners may be authorized and required to construct their said Rail Road across the abovementioned Streets or Ways upon a level, in such manner as your Honorable body may direct, and that all such other proceedings may be had in the premises as are required by Law.

Dated the sixteenth day of October, eighteen hundred and forty seven.

South Shore Rail Road Corporation, by
GEORGE TYLER BIGLOW, their Attorney, and one of the Directors of said Road.

NORFOLK ss. Oct. 21, 1847.

ON the foregoing Petition, Ordered that the County Commissioners meet at Smith's Tavern in Cohasset, on WEDNESDAY, the seventeenth day of November next, at eleven o'clock A. M., and at Wales' Tavern in Weymouth, on THURSDAY, the eighteenth day of said November, at ten o'clock A. M., and then and there, after a view of said Streets and Ways, hear and act upon said Petition, and that the Petitioners notify the Selectmen of said Towns of Cohasset, Weymouth and Braintree, the Proprietors of the Weymouth and Braintree Turnpike, and all other persons interested, to appear at the above times and places, to show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said Petition should not be granted, by serving upon one of each of said boards of Selectmen, and upon the President of said Turnpike Corporation, a true copy of their Petition with this order thereon, fourteen days at least before said seventeenth day of November, and by publishing a like copy two weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, the last publication thereof to be seven days at least before said seventeenth day of November.

HARRIET HUNT, of Dayton, in the County of Montgomery and State of Ohio, Single-woman, Plaintiff, vs. GEORGE N. WAITE of Madison, in the County of Jefferson and State of Indiana, Clerk, Defendant.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners for the County of Norfolk:

THE Petition of the South Shore Rail Road Company, a Corporation established by the laws of said Commonwealth, respectfully represents—that they have located and are about constructing through said Rail Road from Braintree to Cohasset, through the Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset, in said County of Norfolk; that in constructing their said Road through the said Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset, it will be necessary to cross the following ways or streets in said Towns—

In the Town of Braintree—Adams Street (at Depot), Middle Street, Commercial Street (by Jacob Allen's), Road to White's Mill (at Hollis), Road at White's (at the Dam), New Road to White's, Weymouth and Braintree Turnpike (by Church's).

In the Town of Weymouth—Commercial Street (at Land's), Commercial Street (at Tullis'), Green Street (by Humphrey's), Green Street (by Bicknell's), Land's Lane, East Street, Road to Nail Works, Commercial Street, French Street—

In the Town of Cohasset—Hill Road, Cohasset and Hingham Road, King Street, Deer Hill Lane—That they are desirous of constructing their said Rail Road in such manner as to cross said Ways or Streets upon a level, they therefore, pray your Honorable body, that due notice may be given to said Towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Cohasset, and to all other persons interested, of this Petition, and that your Honorable body may be authorized and required to construct their said Rail Road across the above mentioned Streets or Ways upon a level, in such manner as your Honorable body may direct, and that all such other proceedings may be had in the premises as are required by Law.

Dated the sixteenth day of October, eighteen hundred and forty seven.

South Shore Rail Road Corporation, by GEORGE TYLER BIGLOW, their Attorney, and one of the Directors of

NORFOLK SS. Oct. 21, 1847.

ON the foregoing Petition, Ordered that the County Commissioners will meet at Smith's Tavern in Cohasset, on WEDNESDAY, the seventeenth day of November next, at eleven o'clock A. M., and at Wales' Tavern in Weymouth, on THURSDAY, the eighteenth day of said November, at ten o'clock A. M., and then and there, after a view of said Streets and Ways, hear and act upon said Petition, and that the Petitioners notify the Selectmen of said Towns of Cohasset, Weymouth and Braintree, the Proprietors of the Weymouth and Braintree Turnpike, and all other persons interested, to appear at the above times and places, to show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said Petition should not be granted, by serving upon one of each of said boards of Selectmen and upon the President of said Turnpike Corporation, a true copy of their Petition with this order thereon, fourteen days at least before said seventeenth day of November, and by publishing a like copy two weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, the last publication thereof to be seven days at least before said seventeenth day of November.

For the County Commissioners,
SAMUEL P. LOUD, Chairman.

Gun Cotton for Blasting.

THE undersigned, Agent in Boston for the Patentees, invites the attention of persons interested in Quarrying, Mining and Tunneling, to the patent Gun Cotton, which will be found in all respects superior to Gunpowder for blasting rock. A charge of cotton occupies less space than one of powder, and does its work more quietly and thoroughly. It is more convenient for charging in upper and side holes, is less affected by dampness, and makes no smoke or noxious gas.

The Agent is prepared to take orders, and will show samples and give any desired information to those who will call at his Store, or will send by mail de-

DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPA-
RILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver
—strengthening the Nerves, and at once secures
HEALTH AND VIGOR
to the whole system. In all cases of
JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA,
CONSTIVENESS, SCROFULA,
HEADACHE, LANGUOR,
and that
DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,
which is so common a complaint in the
SPRING AND SUMMER
season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous
of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each
label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E.
Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

MISCELLANY.

HOW TO BE A GENTLEMAN.
BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'Watson is very much like a gentleman,' remarked a young man to his friend and companion, as the two stood looking after the individual alluded to, who had just left them, and was walking leisurely away.

'I am not so certain of that,' was the reply. 'It would not do for him to hear you say that, Walter,' responded the friend.

'Perhaps not. The consciousness that the remark had something of truth in it would irritate him, and wounded pride would demand satisfaction. A true gentleman never blusters when his claim to that distinction are questioned. He knows that he is a gentleman, and that settles the matter in his own mind.'

'But, why do you doubt Watson's claims to the title of a gentleman?'

'Because I have, in several instances, even during the short time I have known him, observed him act towards strangers, whose appearances indicated that their station in society was an obscure one, in a very unkind and neglectful manner.'

'I believe I have noticed something of that myself,' remarked the other thoughtfully. 'I see the correctness and force of your inference.'

'Men's true characters,' resumed his friend, 'are not to be read while they hold intercourse with those of a certain position and influence. But when they come in contact with the obscure and humble, they stand revealed as they really are. Watson is remarkably polite and attentive to you, and I think it is partly because your father is intimate with the Secretary of the Navy, with whom he wishes to make interest, and partly because your station is pretty near the first rank.'

'I fear you judge harshly, Trueman,' remarked the friend, addressing the speaker by name.

'Perhaps I do, Wallace. But I am yet to be convinced of my error. I have quick feelings, and they have made me observant. If you, as I, had been compelled to force your way up step by step, in society, meeting at every point neglect or superciliousness you would have learned to scan men closer. Few, let me assure you, of the many who in public are thought gentlemen in externals have any real claim to that noble distinction. All is assumed and conventional.'

'No, Wallace, not unless great changes should take place in your condition, will you make the discovery to any extent. You and I have come to our present place by very different ways. I have struggled up, as you know from obscurity—you were born to an elevated position in society. My experience therefore is worth a dozen of yours. At school I was sneered at by the children of wealthy parents; as an apprentice to a trade, I was treated with indifference by the lads who could get behind a counter and were classed with clerks. When I, at last, got to be a clerk, I was despised and shunned, as unworthy of such elevated position, by young men studying the profession; and when in the busy round of change, I too bent over the dull books of a lawyer's office, I met the same want of kindness and consideration from those who thought themselves above me—rich men's sons, pursuing the same course of legal studies, who considered the money they were to inherit as of much more importance than the knowledge they were pretending to acquire. As I gradually rose, from unwearied devotion to every thing I attempted, and began to acquire reputation after my admission to the bar, I found a wider circle of those who were ready to take me by the hand, but still I found men the same every where, in all conditions. There were always some to pass me with marked neglect, or to meet me in open rudeness—men, too, who, like Watson, had the most affable manner for those whom they chose to honor with their attentions.'

'I am afraid, my friend,' Wallace replied, 'that all these things which you describe, have made you a cynic.'

'Believe it not to the extent your remark implies,' Trueman answered. 'But to do something in the way of demonstration. Suppose we hit upon a plan for testing how far the individual named possesses the excellencies of character that his actions in society claim for him.'

'Well, I have no objection, if the thing can be done without unpleasant exposure of ourselves, or any action not strictly right.'

'Would you be willing to disguise yourself in some manner, and then throw yourself in his way?'

'I hardly think I would.'

'Unless you are, I can't see exactly how the thing is to be managed. You are always fond of a little adventure. Why not enter into this? A pair of spectacles, and a set of false whiskers, with a little change of dress, will do all this.'

Wallace paused a moment thoughtfully, and then suddenly striking one hand in the other, exclaimed, laughing—

'I have it. Watson goes to Philadelphia next week. I should dislike practising disguise here, but I can do it there, under less feelings of restraint and unpleasant fear of discovery.'

'And you will do it?'

'Yes. I like a little sport now and then; and there is no positive wrong in assuming spectacles with plain glasses, and a pair of notable whiskers, there is no reason why I should not be indulged in my suddenly formed desire to test the true character of a friend.'

Some six or eight days after the interview just mentioned, Watson, the individual alluded to by the friends, was 'swelling' at the United States Hotel, in the most improved modern style. Among others sojourning at the same house, was a young man, genteelly dressed, and of easy manners, but no one knew him. His name, as appeared from the Register, was John Jones, of Jonesville, New York; and of course, so ordinary a person attracted little attention. Even the servants, aping their superiors, honored his calls less promptly than they did those of certain other individuals—better known and appreciated.

'A pleasant day this,' remarked Mr. Jones to Watson, one morning, while they were standing on the portico entrance to the hotel.

Watson turned upon him a forbidding glance, and then moved away. Mr. Jones did not seem to observe either the look or the manner. In a few minutes he found himself again close beside the individual he had addressed.

'A beautiful building that,' he said, indicating by a slight movement of his hand, the banking house opposite.

But Watson seemed not to hear him.

'A sad business they have made of it though,' added Mr. Jones.

Watson turned away abruptly, and went into the house, muttering something which was not heard.

At dinner time it so happened, 'by design,' probably, that Mr. John Jones, of Jonesville, had a seat along side of Mr. Watson. There were at the table, several gentlemen from Washington, well known to the latter, and as they were near him, a lively conversation was carried on between them on the various subjects of public interest. Mr. John Jones listened with much apparent interest to all that was passing, and occasionally dropped a remark, fully as sensible as any thing that was said. Usually, on occasion of his doing so, a profound silence would follow; and Watson, especially, would seem much annoyed. At last a scowl was added by the latter to the marked silence which invariably followed when Mr. Jones spoke. But that gentleman seemed perfectly unconscious of the disturbance which his intrusive words occasioned the gentlemen and especially Mr. Watson.

'Will you be kind enough to reach me those potatoes?' said Mr. Jones, at last, as Watson took the dish containing them from one of his Washington friends, to whom, by request he had handed it.

'That's a waiter's business, call on one of them, if you want anything,' responded Watson, loud enough to be heard half the length of the dinner table.

Mr. Jones seemed to feel this, for his cheek reddened suddenly, and his lip had a quick motion, as if a keen retort trembled upon it. But this apparent emotion subsided in a moment, and bowing with easy politeness, said—

'I beg pardon, if I have given offence. But seeing you lift the dish a moment since, to accommodate a friend, I supposed you would not think the same favor due to a stranger, any thing more than a kind act, such as a gentleman is at all times ready to perform.'

An angry scowl darkened for a moment on Watson's face, and stooping to the ear of Mr. Jones, he whispered—

'You will repent this impertinence, sir.'

Mr. Jones smiled calmly to his threat, and then in a very quiet way, went on to discuss his dinner.

'Look here, Mister,' said Watson, touching John Jones, of Jonesville, on the shoulder, as that individual stood in the bar room, or hall of the hotel, some half hour after he had risen from the dinner table. 'Do you know that I never suffered any one who insults me to go unpunished.'

'Well,' said Mr. Jones, in a calm voice.

There was something in the sound of that voice so mild, and yet so firm, that caused Watson to waver in his determination to make an example of the owner of it, by wringing his nose.

'Well?' repeated Mr. Jones, as his interlocutor paused longer than the occasion seemed to require.

'Please to say what you meant by your insulting language and manner at the dinner table?' demanded Watson, with one of his savage frowns.

'Explain yourself, if you please,' said Mr. Jones, in the same calm, firm tone.

'Confusion!' vociferated Watson, now losing all patience. 'Don't tempt me to cane you.'

'No man has ever dared that yet,' said Mr. Jones, compressing his lips firmly. 'And no man ever will. But this is disgraceful, the more so, in a public bar room. My room is No. 40. If you will favor me with a call at eight o'clock this evening, perhaps we will be able to understand each other better.'

And so saying Mr. Jones turned quickly on his heel and walked away.

'The impudent scoundrel!' muttered Watson, but he took good care that the other should not hear the exclamation. During the afternoon, he was much disturbed in mind, and in a state of vacillation as to what he should do. At one moment he determined that he would not stoop so far as to go to the room of the individual who had, he deemed, insulted him. But then to set aside this resolution, would cause a remembrance of the peculiar tone, and the steady searching glance of an eye, whose expression he had not marked, until the last interview.

Eight o'clock at last came, and, impelled by an impulse which he could not counteract, and still reluctant, Watson tapped at Mr. Jones' room. It was immediately opened by the individual he sought.

'Ah, I'm glad you are punctual, sir,' said Mr. Jones, bowing politely.

'I am here by appointment,' was the stern reply of Watson, as he drew himself up, and assumed all the appearance of offended dignity that he could put on.

'All right so far then. Now be seated; and let me hear in what I have offended you.'

'I have no wish to be seated, sir,' replied Watson, folding his arms. 'Let our interview be brief and to the point. I now demand what you meant by your language to me at the dinner table to-day.'

'Precisely what my words conveyed.'

'Take care, sir. I am not a man to be trifled with.'

'Nor I one to eat my words.'

'Sir?'

'This is folly,' said Mr. Jones. 'You complain of me; when, in fact, I am the one who was insulted. If there is any apology necessary, it is due from you to me. But I waive that, and it is my advice, that you also lay aside any idea of receiving an apology from me; for certainly you will get none.'

'Then, for what purpose have I been invited here?'

'To receive some lessons in true politeness.'

'Sir?'

'Nay, but you will have to keep cool, Mr. Watson, for that I believe is your name. I am a man of the world and understand just what I am about.'

'Who are you, sir, that dares—'

'You will see my name upon the register—John Jones, of Jonesville, New York,' said Mr. Jones, calmly interrupting the stormy interrogation of the other and looking him steadily in the face.

This was more than Watson could bear, and ejaculating an oath passionately, he drew a pistol, and pointing it at the other, said, in a loud voice—

'Defend yourself!'

'Let mind act on mind,' returned Mr. Jones, coolly eyeing his incensed companion. 'Deadly weapons and brute force, are dishonorable between gentlemen.'

'Defend yourself!'

'I have no weapons,' replied Mr. Jones; 'and if I had, far be it from me to harm a fellow man. No, no, Mr. Watson, you still remain in error as to what is gentility. Put up your pistol, sir. You must use other weapons in your contest with me.'

'Then name your weapon,' said Watson, lowering his pistol. 'I'll fight you with anything.'

'I'll fight with no other weapon than the rational powers that have been given to me. Come, now, let us be men. Sit down, and meet me upon a true rational ground. I charge you with not being a gentleman. Come, don't scowl and raise your pistol. All that don't make you more or less a gentleman. Now, if I can prove to you that you have not acted in a gentlemanly manner, then it is clear that you are not a gentleman—for no gentleman will act in an ungentlemanly manner. Is not this inference as clear as noon-day? And further, if you are really not a gentleman, my telling you the truth don't make you any worse. It is certainly of more importance to you what you are, than what any says you are. This is your great fault, Watson. The estimation from external appearance, and not from internal quality.'

'It is, hey? And who are you, pray, that pretends to know my character?'

'John Jones, of Jonesville, as I told you before.'

Watson eyed the speaker with a scrutinizing glance, for some moments, and then taking a chair in front of him, said:

'You seem to know me, sir?'

'I have seen you about here for several days.'

'But that would not authorize you to decide upon my character in the familiar positive way that you did just now.'

'It is no difficult task to read your character, especially when he who attempts to read it, can see far below the surface at a glance.'

'Well, sir wise-man,' said Watson, caving down, but speaking with a sneer, 'let us hear you read my character. I don't care what you prove me to be, so you prove it fairly,—for as you justly intimated, you can't prove me to be anything that I am not.'

'Just so. Well, I am to show you that you are not gentleman.'

Watson frowned, involuntarily; but the other did not appear to notice it, and continued—

'A true gentleman's external acts flow from a genuine principle of good will towards all. He really wishes to see every one around him, friend or stranger, in the enjoyment of pleasant feelings, and is always careful to add his portion to the general stock of social delight. Not of course, that he may be thought a gentleman, but because he feels kindly to all. Do you understand me?'

'Well, go on.'

'Now you do not act from such a ground of good will to all.'

'How do you know that I do not?'

'From observing your actions.'

'But they may often deceive.'

'Not so. They are the true exponents of the internal state.'

'Tell me of one action, that gives room for the broad inference you draw.'

'I will tell you half a dozen if you wish.'

'Well, go on.'

'A day or two ago, as General T— passed out of the hotel, you were on the portico.'

'A pleasant day, Mr. Watson,' he said. 'Delightful!' was your response, at the same time you lifted your hat and bowed with a pleasant smile and graceful air. If that smile and bow were from the heart—that is, came from an impulse of genuine good feeling, how estimable in character that man must be? said I.

'Half an hour after, I found myself by your side.'

'A pleasant day this,' said I. And did you respond to the stranger who thus addressed you with the same gentlemanly air? No?—you turned on me a forbidding glance, and moved away. He is no gentleman,' said I; but a true gentleman could not thus have rudely treated a stranger. Was I not right in my inference?'

Watson felt self-convicted, for the first time in his life; and though exceedingly chafed in his feeling, he reined in his passions before one for whom he began to entertain a deference and respect that in a degree subdued him.

'And now,' resumed his monitor, 'consider calmly your treatment of me at the dinner table to-day. You were conversing with some gentlemen from Washington, upon a subject in which I take a deep interest, and in the investigation of which I have spent more time and labor than either of you. Several times I was led to introduce a remark, and this is not improper at a public table. But how was that remark received? I need not tell you. Certainly it was very different from the manner in which the remark of some known distinguished man would have been received, even were he not personally known to you. And when, finally, I went so far as to request you to do me the small kindness of handing me a dish at the table, my request was met by open insult and rudeness. Now, I will contend against the whole world, that a gentlemanly feeling did not prompt either your words or manner. Have I not made clear my position? Come now, be a man, and utter fearlessly and honestly your true thoughts.'

'You are a strange person,' said Watson, looking Mr. Jones in the face with a calm, thoughtful expression. 'I don't know what to make of you. If I were to knock you down for the liberty you have taken with me, I can't see that it would do either of us any good, now that I am in quite a thinking mood; but since you have demonstrated, to your own satisfaction, that I am not a gentleman will you be kind enough to inform me how I shall be one?'

'With pleasure, Mr. Watson. The way to be a gentleman is to endeavor to feel kindly towards every one. There is no danger of our actions appearing rude, or constrained, or ungentle, when we feel a genuine impulse of good will.'

'I suppose you are right, Mr. Jones,' said Watson, rising. 'But as I am no gentleman I ought not to introduce my company on one who has already discovered that fact—so good night.' And Mr. Watson bent a hurried retreat.

On the next morning, opposite the name of Mr. Jones was the word Washington, indicating that he had departed for the Metropolis.

'Ah, how do you do, Wallace?' said Watson, a week after his adventure in Philadelphia, meeting that individual upon the Avenue in Washington.

'Well, how are you?'

'Bravely. Why, how much your voice reminds me of that of a strange genius I met in Philadelphia.'

'Ah, indeed, and what of him?'

'What of him? Confound the fellow! That's a question I hardly know how to go about answering. Why, would you believe it? he actually took the liberty of telling me that I was not a gentleman.'

'Indeed! And I suppose you knocked him down for his trouble?'

'No I didn't, though I was strongly tempted. But that is not all: he actually had the cool impudence to make an effort to prove to me, by rational induction, that I had no real claim to the title.'

'Worse and worse. But, as you seem less incensed than amused at this strange character, let me ask how he succeeded in the argument.'

'Come, come, Wallace, that is rubbing too close.'

'He had the best of it, had he?'

'Confound the imperturbable rascal! I verily believe he did.'

'Ha, ha! Well, that was an adventure, Watson.'

'Wasn't it! To be told to your teeth that you are no gentleman, in the coolest way imaginable, and then to have the allegation rationally demonstrated. Really it is too bad.'

'Can you tell me, gentlemen, where General S— lives?' inquired an Irish porter, at this moment, pausing before the two friends.

'That's the house,' replied Watson in quite a kind, gentlemanly way, pointing with his cane to the dwelling the porter was seeking.

'Much obliged,' said the Irishman, bowing politely, and hurrying off on his errand.

'I'm actually afraid to treat even a negro with inattention or rudeness, since I met that John Jones, of Jonesville, for fear he will become transformed into a monitor, and convict me of being no gentleman,' said Watson, half laughing, half serious.

'That John Jones must have been a queer chap, to have made such an impression upon you. Having demonstrated to you, as you intimated, that you were no gentleman, did he inform you in what way you could be one?'

'Yes, he even took that liberty.'

'Indeed! Well, do you remember his recipe?'

'Yes, distinctly. 'The way to be a gentleman,' said he, 'is to endeavor to feel kindly towards every one. There is no danger of our actions appearing rude, or constrained, or ungentle, when we feel a genuine impulse of good will.'

'Capital!'

'It's a good recipe, I must confess. But confound the fellow's cool impudence. I'm still half mad with myself for not having knocked him down any how. But good morning, Wallace, I have some business to attend to at eleven.'

And so Watson, leaving his way, leaving his friend, who knew a little more about John Jones, of Jonesville, than he dreamed of, just on the eve of bursting into a fit of laughter, that would have exposed more of the knowledge than he desired.

'Back again, I see, Wallace,' said his friend Trueman, coming up at the moment.

'Well, what of your adventure?'

Wallace related what the reader already knew of John Jones, of Jonesville, and added: 'And I really believe it has made an impression on him for good.'

'It may modify in some degree, his external deportment; but I fear he will still have as little claim as ever to the title of gentleman.'

'Well, even if it does that much, my wild freak will not be without its use. If you had seen the polite bow he gave an Irish porter just now, it would have done you good. Ha, ha!'

'You are right, Wallace. If the lesson makes him more cautious how he treats others with rudeness, it will have accomplished a very important use.'

And now if any one who reads this sketch has been in the habit of treating with neglect or rudeness strangers, or obscure persons, and has seen, as in a mirror, his own fault of character, we beg that he will not go and straightway forget what manner of person he is. If such forgetfulness ensue, we have written, and he read in vain.

REV. E. H. CHAPIN'S LECTURE.

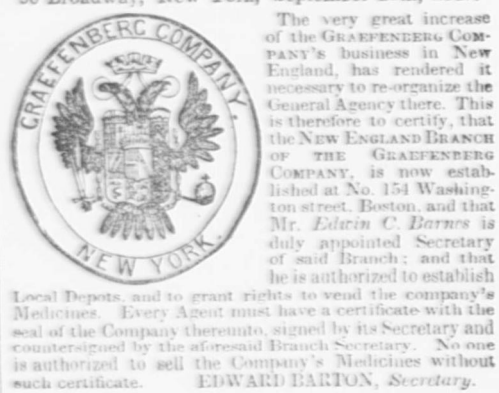

MR. EDITOR—It having been announced, that Rev. Mr. Chapin of Boston, would lecture on the subject of temperance at the Town Hall on Sunday evening last, his talents and well-known popularity drew forth a crowded audience to listen, and it must have been gratifying to the friends of the cause to have seen the interest manifested on the occasion. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Cobb of Boston, and followed by the singing of 'Speed, speed the temperance ship,' with good effect, by a choir who are ever ready to raise their voices in the great and good cause of temperance.

Mr. Chapin commenced by saying, that it could not be expected he would utter any thing new on the subject of temperance, but reiterate the old; and having lectured in this place before on the same subject, and addressed himself to different classes in society—such as the dealer in intoxicating liquors—the moderate drinker—the indifferent—he should at this time confine his remarks particularly to the young men. He pointed out, in a clear and forcible manner, the responsibility which rested upon the young men at the present day, to carry forward the temperance reform, and that much of the good to be accomplished must be done by the young men and the rising generation. It was a great and noble cause—much had been done, and there was still a great work to do. It was better for young men to grow up without acquiring a love for strong drink, than

SATURDAY, NOV. 6, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

Do you hear the call. Next Monday is "election day," and we want money. That no excuse may be offered on account of finding the "head" to settle accounts on that day, a person will be at our office ready for the business. If there is a prospect that his time will be too much occupied we will employ a clerk to assist him. We have good customers and hope they have the "ready" in hand; if otherwise we must reluctantly inform them that law is the other alternative.

SUDDEN AND MELANCHOLY DEATH. Elizabeth A. Leland, daughter of Hon. Sherman Leland, (Judge of Probate for the County of Norfolk,) while returning from a visit, on Thursday evening of last week, had nearly reached her father's house, when she fell near the gate in a state of insensibility. From the best information that can be obtained, she had lain in that state about twenty minutes, when she was discovered by her brother, at about quarter before seven o'clock. She was immediately carried into the house; her breathing was the only apparent sign of life. Dr. Henry Bartlett was immediately called, but she died within twenty minutes after she was taken into the house, and within three minutes after the arrival of the physician. Her general health was good—and for a few days previous to her death she had been uncommonly well. Miss Leland was a young lady highly accomplished, and beloved by all who knew her—and leaves a large circle of friends and relations to mourn her sudden death.

INFANTICIDE. An inquest was held at Milton on Saturday last, by Lewis Bass, Coroner, on the body of a female child found in a box near the burying ground in that town, where it appeared to have been for a considerable time. The box had been used for 10 by 16 glass and was cut down half its depth, the body was wrapped in a cambric gown with lace on the sleeves and neck, and was covered with a piece of linen on which was marked the name of S. M. Appleton. Verdict—That the child was apparently born alive and that it came to its death by means and persons to the Jury unknown. Any information that will convict the perpetrators of the crime will be suitably rewarded, and such information, we learn, should be given to the Coroner.

THE UNION MAGAZINE.—Israel Post, 140 Nassau St., (N. Y.) Of course we need not remind our readers that "The Union" is edited by Mrs. C. M. Kirkland, author of "A New Home," etc.; that it has been established for four months (the 11th of November number being the fifth) and that it has already attained a circulation little if at all inferior to the oldest of the three dollar monthlies, while in point of genuine reputation, as regards taste, tact and editorial conduct, it surpasses them all. The number now before us will speak for itself and prove that we are not commending the work unadvisedly. Here are no less than seven embellishments—all costly and of a high order—a mezzotint, a line, a fashion-plate, and four beautiful wood-cuts—these latter, indeed, are, in our opinion, the feature of the Magazine, and are universally admired. Mr. Matteson, we understand, has the sole control of the picture department, and he will no doubt, do it justice. The contributors are from our most distinguished writers. We observe two very admirable papers by Mrs. Kirkland herself (besides the customary editorial matter) and articles from Mrs. Embury, Miss Sedgwick, Mrs. Jane Campbell, W. Oland Bourne and several others.

MADAME RESTELL. The trial of this notorious female abortionist, which has been in progress in New York the past week, will be published in pamphlet form on Monday next, from the press of the "National Police Gazette." It will comprise thirty two pages of close matter, with an accurate likeness of Restell, and will present altogether the most extraordinary investigation that ever was elicited in a Court of Justice, or published to the world. Price, six cent per copy.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT. On Wednesday of last week, as a train was passing a bridge on the Vermont and Massachusetts Railroad, the bridge gave way, and the whole train was precipitated about twenty feet into the river. Five persons were killed and others dangerously wounded—persons employed on the road, it not having been opened to the public. It was at first supposed to have been owing to the bad quality of the iron used in the bridge, but it is feared that there was some design to cause the accident. An investigation will be instituted.

MONTHLY DISPATCH. Wilson & Co. of New York, have sent us their mammoth monthly "Dispatch" for November. It is filled with a great variety of interesting reading and afforded for twenty five cents a year.

THE UREKA. The November number of this journal of Inventions, Patents and Science, has been issued by Kingsley & Pirsson, New York. It comprises sixteen large pages, and the matter is highly interesting to inventors, mechanics and others. Terms, one dollar a year.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The receipts on this road since the first of July are stated to amount to $81,000, and it is anticipated that the receipts for six months will amount to $100,000. The expenses for the same period are estimated at $37,000, thus leaving a net income of the handsome sum of $63,000.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON. The Smithsonian Institute is going slowly up—a superb and massive structure. It will cost twice the amount of money appropriated for its erection.

THERE ARE LIGHTS. Nearly thirteen hundred oil lamps and three hundred and eighty-six gas lights, for the purpose of giving light to the streets in Boston.

A YOUNG GIRL SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE has been committed to jail in New Haven, charged with the abandonment and death of an infant.

FROM MEXICO. Very little has transpired of interest. Reinforcements are moving up to the city of Mexico. The Massachusetts Regiment has marched from Vera Cruz. The city of Mexico is quiet, and the minds of the people of the interior are said to be disposed to peace. Gen. Scott leaves upon the inhabitants to support the army.

THE NEW ORLEANS BULLETIN has a letter from Vera Cruz, saying that four companies of Massachusetts volunteers have been put under arrest for refusing to wear a blue uniform like the regulars. The Massachusetts regiment were to march towards the National Bridge on the 27th ult.

LATER FROM EUROPE. The steamer Caledonia arrived at Boston yesterday morning bringing eleven days later intelligence. Failures continue throughout England. The Royal Bank of Liverpool stopped on the 17th ult, and the general aspect of affairs is gloomy. All branches of trade are dull and prices are declining. Ireland is again the scene of outrage. A determination not to pay rent is said to prevail in the southern provinces.

CAPT. FELT. Letters received in Boston announce the death of Capt. Felt, of Company D, Massachusetts volunteers, soon after his arrival at Vera Cruz. He was acting Major in place of Maj. Webster who was absent.

VENTRILOQUISM. Mr. Harrington, the celebrated ventriloquist and magic performer, gave an entertainment at the Town Hall last Thursday evening to the great delight of a large assembly of our citizens. One must have sharp eyes to detect him in his performances and in ventriloquism he cannot be surpassed.

THE PLATMATE. No. three of this Magazine has been published by Crosby & Nichols. Its literary contents will afford a rich treat for youthful readers, and the pictorial illustrations are numerous and executed in a superior style.

MISCELLANY.

THE CONVICT'S BRIDE.

Late on a cold winter's night, a man warmly clad, was seen to wend his way along the deserted streets, and to enter a narrow alley, in the North End of Boston.

He paused on the stoop of an old and ruinous wooden building, from one window of which dimly shone forth the rays of a lighted candle.

He raised his huge cane, and gave several violent blows. His call was immediately answered by the appearance of an old negress.

Where is Mrs. Roosevelt? rudely asked the stranger.

She was confined to bed by a violent sickness. Walk in, dear! Heah! mind and not tumble down over the loose boards.

The stranger entered, and followed the woman to a room in the third story. As she opened the door, the light fell upon the pale features of a lady, apparently about fifty years of age. The invalid raised her eyes, and was about to speak, but she was interrupted.

Mrs. Roosevelt, you know that it is now Saturday night, and for three weeks past the rent has not been paid, and you see I have teeked all the way from State street, and to-night I cannot, must not be disappointed.

Tears stole down the cheeks of the woman as she replied, Mr. Vinton, I am no longer able to sew; and my week's wages is less than a shilling; and Frederic has not yet completed his picture, though, poor body, he has worked day and night; as soon as he completes the work, he will pay you.

The same old story again; I have not walked this long way for nothing, and I must have the money.

Sar, I tell ye the woman is sick, and han't got no money, said the kind hearted negress, and her eyes rolled widely as she spoke.

Silence! growled Vinton, as he cast a look of disgust upon her.

I won't silence! she replied.

I say, Mrs. Roosevelt, if you have got no money, why do you not pawn that miniature. It would bring seven or eight dollars, and my bill is only five.

Mr. Vinton, I cannot do it; it was the gift of my deceased husband; all else has gone, and I can never part with that.

Well, madam, it is late, and I cannot stay longer, and now I tell you that I will have the money or that miniature.

I cannot obtain the money, Mr. Vinton, and I beg of you to spare the miniature.

Woman, I tell you I shall take it, and he was about to wrest it from her hand.

At this moment the door opened and Frederic entered. He saw at a glance Vinton's intention and he stepped hurriedly forward to the bedside.

Brute! said Frederic, begone, or I will throw you headlong into the street.

This was uttered with a voice choked with rage, but with a degree of firmness which caused Vinton to tremble.

Bring the money, then, to my office on Monday, or I will turn you from the house, thus saying he rose and left the room.

Frederic Roosevelt was a young man of noble figure and commanding appearance. As the reader has doubtless inferred, he was an artist. For a time he had been engaged on a poor compensation but which absorbed his whole attention. It was a delineation of a family circle.

Monday evening came, but Frederic had not completed his work.

Mrs. Roosevelt was even more distressed than on the preceding day. A young and beautiful girl supported her head, and whispered in her ear kind words of comfort and of better days.

Emma, my dear, you are kind, very kind thus to watch by my bedside.

I only do my duty; I have brought you a few articles which you must taste this evening, said she; and removing the cover from a basket, displayed several rare luxuries. Tears of gratitude streamed from the eyes of the invalid, and vainly did she attempt by language to express her feelings. Emma knelt by her bedside, and together they mingled their tears.

Where is the negress whom I sometimes see with you?

She has gone to earn money to pay our rent, and she related the story of Mr. Vinton's cruelty.

How much does it amount to? asked Emma.

Five dollars.

Here is the money, Mrs. Roosevelt, and for my sake, take it.

Dear Emma, you wrong yourself. O, how can I ever repay your kindness. I cannot take it.

You must, and thus repay me by the pleasure I shall receive in being able to serve you.

Emma secretly enclosed a half eagle in a five dollar note, and slipped it into her hand. She was about to depart, when Mr. Vinton entered. He was amazed to find Emma there, and very awkwardly saluted her, and then seated himself on a broken chair, that stood by the window.

I hope you are better, to-day, Mrs. Roosevelt.

Indeed, I am worse.

I was passing, and thought I would call—sorry to find you ill. I have just called upon my tenants; but you need not distress yourself. I will call another time. He was about to depart, when Mrs. Roosevelt placed in his hand the money which she had just received from Emma. He unrolled the bank note, and the half eagle fell upon the floor.

My bill is only five dollars, and I would not urge immediate payment, said he as he picked up the coin and returned it to her, and at the same time thrust the note into his pocket. Heaven has timely sent this money, Mr. Vinton, and I can now pay you.

Thank you, said he, and rose to depart. During the conversation, Emma had closely watched the workings of his countenance, and read the duplicity of his heart. He departed. Emma then withdrew, but promised to call early next morning.

Emma Mansfield was a seamstress, but a lovely and virtuous girl. To a careless observer Emma was not beautiful, yet her dark eye, so full and expressive, her forehead, so intellectual, and the sun bright smile that ever played over her features, rendered her lovely.

She heard of the illness of Mrs. Roosevelt, had sought her abode, and from that time had daily visited her.

Harry Vinton was a man of about forty years of age; of rather prepossessing manners and of gentlemanly appearance. He was wealthy, and well he might be; for he had for the last twenty years in order to accumulate a fortune, closed his heart against the calls of charity and benevolent deeds, and had toiled in his counting-room and warehouse almost day and night.

Of course, he found no time for society, and therefore, at the age of forty, we find him a bachelor. He had often met the beautiful seamstress, as she went to and returned from her work, and felt the first warm ray upon his heart as he looked upon her sunny face. It was not difficult to form an acquaintance with her. He offered his heart, (a withered offering,) his fortune and his hand, but she rejected his offer.

Time passed on. The young artist had told her of his love, and though he had no fortune to offer, his suit was not urged in vain. Harry Vinton observed their intimacy, and determined to blast the fond anticipations of Frederic. Many were the arts used to win her affection, but the story of Mrs. Roosevelt had banished from her heart every latent spark of esteem and respect.

Vinton determined to ruin Frederic. He was well aware of the station which he himself filled, and that he was looked upon with respect by all. He therefore resolved upon the following plan to accomplish his object. He marked well the dress and general appearance of Frederic, then procured similar apparel for himself. Late at night he put on his disguise and secretly entered the dark and narrow alley, armed with a pistol, then emerged into a street.

Few persons were abroad at this late hour. He observed a single individual and advanced upon him. He seized the man by the throat, and presenting his pistol demanded his money.

The man called for aid and Vinton fled. He was pursued, and he directed his course down the narrow alley, and passing through the yard of the house which Frederic occupied, and disappeared. An officer entered the house, and arrested Frederic Roosevelt for highway robbery, while the artful Vinton returned to his counting-room and threw off his disguise.

In vain did Frederic assert his innocence. He was seized, and dragged from the society of his mother and Emma, and confined in a damp cell in the prison. The day of his trial arrived,—and he was sentenced to five years imprisonment in the State Prison. Thus was he doomed to pass five years in a loathsome prison, and more than all, to be regarded as a criminal. We will not describe the parting scene.

The first of his confinement, his mother and Emma visited him, and continued their visits daily. The Warden of the prison was daily furnished with luxuries for him, and with every article that would promote his comfort or gratify his appetite, but none knew the giver, not even the man who received them. At an early hour of each day, a poor Irish boy delivered his basket, and disappeared. In vain were Frederic's inquiries for the giver, none knew from what source they came. Frederic would have suspected the beautiful seamstress, but he knew full well that her employment was not sufficiently lucrative to warrant such kindness.

Several months rolled away, and each day Frederic's cheek grew more pale, and his spirits more oppressed with gloom. Mrs. Roosevelt was seldom seen to smile, and Emma often wept for him.

Vinton frequently met the beautiful Emma, and as often courted her favor; but he only met with contempt and cold indifference, for their friendship was forever at an end. Vinton became a gambler, and in a short time was sunk in dissipation.

One night he was seated in a fashionable gaming saloon. He was heated with wine, and had become deeply interested in play. He staked his fortune—every dollar that he possessed—and lost! He was penniless. He started from his seat, exclaiming: Comrade, I it was who obtained the imprisonment of Roosevelt. I attempted the robbery for which he is confined—he is innocent and I have had my revenge!

An exclamation of surprise and horror escaped those present; but the sound of their voices was stifled by report of a pistol; and Vinton fell. The spectacle was indeed melancholy and awful. He was mortally wounded. In a faint voice he requested to be moved from the room, and expressed a wish to see Mrs. Roosevelt and Emma, before he died. The ladies appeared, and Vinton whispered his crime and remorse, and fell back and expired.

Frederic was immediately and honorably acquitted, and released.

Frederic and Emma had pledged themselves to each other, and their wedding-day was appointed.

Emma's friends resided in Richmond. She was to return home in a few days, and Frederic and his mother were to follow soon.

The day appointed for their marriage arrived and Frederic and his mother appeared in Richmond.

He was directed to a splendid mansion. It was evening. The carriage in which they rode approached the house. It was brilliantly illuminated, and hurrying forms were flitting by the windows. Several carriages had just arrived, and active servants were busily conducting the guests to the house. The coach drove up to the gate, and Frederic and his mother alighted.

I am certainly mistaken; it cannot be driver, are you sure that this is Col. Mansfield's residence?

I am not often mistaken; replied John, and drove off.

They entered the hall, and Frederic sent in his card. They were then conducted into a private parlor and were met by the beautiful Emma. She was elegantly attired in a bridal dress, and now looked more beautiful than ever.

What means this, Emma? asked Roosevelt, no longer able to restrain his curiosity and astonishment.

By and by, you shall learn all, said she, and now, she continued, as two ladies entered, allow me to introduce my sister, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Arnold, Mr. Roosevelt.

Frederic was amazed and dazzled by the brilliancy of every thing around him.

The marriage ceremony was performed. It was at a late hour when the happy company dispersed, and Frederic, his bride, and their mother, were again together in a private room.

Now, Emma, explain all I pray you.

She seated herself on the sofa by his side and began.

Five years ago, my parents died. My father was wealthy, and at his death, his children my sisters and myself, inherited one hundred thousand dollars each. My sisters were soon married; Mrs. Arnold gave her hand to a villain, who having obtained her money, left her and has never been heard of. I gave twenty-five thousand to her. Howard was lost at sea. I was surrounded by a host of suitors but having seen so much of the duplicity of mankind, I resolved never to marry, or, at any rate never to give my hand to a man, until he had given me his heart, that I should be the object of his love and not my fortune. I knew that the industrious were happy, and I determined to earn my bread by my labor—and you very well know the sequel.

LEGAL MEASURES, &c. A quarter of wheat is an English measure of eight standard bushels—so, if you see wheat quoted at fifty-six shillings, it is eight shilling a bushel. A shilling is twenty-two and a half cents—multiply by seven and you will have 1.57 1-5 per bushel. In Kentucky, corn is measured by the barrel, which is five bushels of shelled corn. At New Orleans, a barrel of corn is a flour barrel full of ears. At Chicago, lime is sold by the barrel, and measured in the smallest size cask of that name that will pass muster. A barrel of flour is seven quarters of a gross hundred, (112 lbs.) which is the reason of its being the old measure of one hundred and ninety-six pounds. A barrel of tar is twenty gallons, while a barrel of gunpowder is only a small keg holding twenty-five pounds, and that reminds us of cotton, a bale of which is four hundred pounds, no matter in what sized bundles it may be sent to market.

LIFE AT THE SPRINGS.

The following amusing anecdote is related as occurring at one of the watering places in this country. There is a moral to it, which frequenters at such resorts would do well to heed:—

A few days since an elegantly dressed and handsome young gentleman arrived at the Springs. Curiosity was on tiptoe, nay it leaped into the very air to discover all about the stranger. The register was examined, his name was entered in a plain round hand, Willie P. Mangum, Jr., North Carolina. The sensation produced by this discovery was tremendous and unparalleled. He was the son of a senator—his father was once Speaker of the United States Senate, and his family connections had long been distinguished for their enormous wealth and unquestionable ability.

The ladies immediately emptied their trunks—spent hours in dressing and appearing at the dinner arrayed in all the splendor of beautiful laces and costly silks. At the table all eyes were directed towards the Senator's son, and many a fair one anxiously desired an introduction. The afternoon passed by—evening approached—and an hour before the usual time the company assembled in the dancing room.

At nine o'clock, precisely, young Mangum entered the hall, and a buzz of admiration followed. One of the belles fortunately attracted his attention and he led her to the dance. His every movement was closely observed, and from the ladies such exclamations came as,

What princely manners! Such a magnificent figure! Such graceful dancing! A love of a foot! O, he is a duck of a dear charming fellow! and other similar expressions, peculiar, I believe, to the sex.

During the entire evening the favorite belle received the most devoted attention from Mr. Mangum. Many of the ladies who thought they possessed some attractions, were greatly mortified at his marked preference, and two or three of the gentlemen evinced the strongest symptoms of laboring under the influence of envy and passion. Your friends, the witty and graceful Col. —, and accomplished and handsome Major — were completely thrown into the shade, and your humble servant Rustic, was driven from the list of competitors.

The Senator's son was declared victor and nobly did he bear his honors. The next day Mr. Mangum was again the reigning lion. He was surrounded by a host of admirers, but the superior tact of the charming belle enabled her to engross the attention of the young Southerner.

Evening once more advanced and the company again assembled for the purpose of dancing. Mr. Mangum was again by the side of the happy miss, admiring her appearance and complimenting her beauty in the most extravagant language, when a steamboat captain entered the room. Looking around him for a moment he remarked to the writer—

'Well, he's cutting it fat.'

'Who?' he inquired.

'My steward,' he answered, pointing to the Senator's son.

I replied that he was mistaken—the individual was Willie P. Mangum, Jr., of North Carolina.

'Mangum, indeed,' was the reply. 'it's Tony Welch—my steward, and a very good steward.'

INCREDIBLE MARRIAGE.

A woman who had been married several years, has appeared before one of the tribunals of Paris, with a complaint of the recent discovery that her husband was a female. The circumstances developed in the examination were very curious. It appears that in the most crowded quarter of Paris, the complainant, when very young, was sought in marriage by a well known tailor. The lover was not yet twenty, of lively, amiable and gallant manners, of handsome figure, and particularly elegant in his dress. The parents consented, and the marriage was celebrated with unusual gaiety. The ceremony was particularly remembered in the neighborhood by the fact that the bridegroom chanced to be called upon, the very next morning, to draw lots for enlistment in the army, and by happy chance, drew a blank and was exempted. Life went on very agreeably in the young household, for two or three years, and the bantering enquiries of the matrons and relatives were, from time to time, received with what passed for a modest affection of simplicity; but a sudden illness of the amiable husband called a physician into the house, and the sex of the patient was declared. The young wife, deeply mortified as well as astonished, presented her request to the court that she might be permitted to plead in her own name in the prosecution, which was granted. The culprit appeared before the Judge in proper female dress, and so feminine were the voice, the gestures and the manner of the rather pretty respondent, that the court had great difficulty in believing that the disguise had been for years successfully played. What penalty the law can inflict is difficult to say, if a lady has, (as Rosalind had not) 'a doublet and hose in her disposition,' she may not sport it to any extent short of commission of some crime in law.

CHARCOAL. Powdered charcoal, or the refuse of the heap, should be thickly strewn over every place where filth is allowed to accumulate. It absorbs the bad smell, and makes an excellent manure of what otherwise would be not only useless but offensive.

THE DEATH OF A CHILD.

And no one feels the death of a child as a mother feels it. Even the father cannot realize it thus. There is a vacancy in his home, and a heaviness in his heart. There is a chain of association that at times comes round with its broken links; there are memories of endearment, a keen sense of loss, a weeping over crushed hopes, and a pain of wounded affection. But the mother feels that one has been taken away who was still closer to her heart. Hers has been the office of constant ministrations. Every gradation of feature has developed before her eyes. She has detected every new gleam of intelligence. She has heard the first utterance of every new word. She has been the refuge of fears; the supply of his wants. And every task of affection has woven a new link, and made dear to her its object. And when he dies a portion of her own life, as it were, dies. How can she give him up, with all these memories, these associations? The timid hands that have so often taken hers in trust and love, how can she fold them on his breast, and give them up to the cold clasp of death? The feet whose wanderings she has watched so narrowly, how can she see them straggled to go down into the dark valley? The head that she has pressed to her lips and her bosom, that she has watched in burning sickness and in peaceful slumber, a hair of which she would not see harmed, O! how can she consign it to the chamber of the grave? The form that not one night has been beyond her vision or her knowledge, how can she put it away for the long night of the sepulchre, to see it no more? Man has cares and toils that draw away his thoughts and employ them; she sits in loneliness, and all these memories, all these suggestions, crowd upon her. How can she bear all this? She could not, were it not that her faith is as her affection; and if the one is more deep and tender than in man, the other is simple and spontaneous, and takes confidently hold of the hand of God.—Rev. E. H. Chapin.

THE EFFECTS OF MARRYING COUSINS. Mr. Fowler, in his work on 'hereditary descent,' has a frugal catalogue of facts to show the evil consequences of marrying blood relations. We give a short extract.

C. W. has six children by his cousin, one boy and five girls, of whom three are deaf and dumb.

The King of Hanover, cousin of Victoria, and the offspring of cousins, is blind.

The noble families of the old world are fast running out, and their deterioration is generally ascribed to their aristocratic custom of marrying blood relations. It is doubtful whether the present royal nurslings of Albert and cousin Victoria, will ever astonish the world with their talents.

Mr. B. of Meredith, N. H., married his cousin and had eight children, four of which are dead, one kept his cradle till five years old, when it died, three had moderate capacities, two are complete idiots, and one, the only bright one of the eight, has no legs, and only a stub of the right arm. Mr. B. by a second marriage, had two bright children.

Mr. N., and his cousin, both intelligent, married, and out of seven children, three were crazy, two flat and simpletons, one barely passable, and one fair.

D. H.'s parents were cousins, and two of his brothers became blind young, while he had a small head and causality, and a very sluggish organization.

W. G. of S —, Mass., brother of Professor G. of New Hampshire, married his cousin, and all his children are lame, or some way out of joint.

Mr. B., a man of considerable sagacity, lived a-a husband with his niece; and his children numbering some eight or ten, were much inferior, physically and mentally, to either of the parents. Four were helpless, and two, a male and female, had uncommonly large, but diseased heads. The male's measures about thirty-six inches in circumference, the female's a trifle less.

Mr. Foster, teacher in the deaf and dumb asylum, Philadelphia, says that of seven children of first cousins whom he knew, six were idiots, and one a mute, but smart; and of another family, two were mute idiots, and three mute but smart.

SENSATIVE. Do not be too sensitive. This is a selfish world, and if you bow to every breath, you will remain under the harrow forever. Stand erect, and ward off the blows of malice and hate, and let the world see that you are not to be crowded out of existence, or crushed to the earth. If you lay to heart every slander, you will die a mere chicken. Though destruction and death appear to be in the elements about you, stand firm. It is glorious to be upright, when the whirlwind passes by. There is grandeur in the character of that man, who is like a rock in the sea, when the wild waves dash and the ocean rages about.

MORNING AND EVENING. When we rise, fresh and vigorous in the morning, the world seems fresh too, and we think we shall never be tired of business or pleasure; but by that time the evening is come, we find ourselves heartily so; we quit all our enjoyments readily and gladly; we retire willingly into a little cell; we lie down in darkness, and resign ourselves to the arms of sleep, with perfect satisfaction and complacency. Apply this to youth and old age—life and death.

For Representative to General Court.

Whole number of votes,	508
Necessary to a choice,	255
William S. Morton, (dem.)	229
William Seaver, (whig),	229
George Clapp, (liberty),	38

Bryant B. Newcomb, 12; Eleazer Harmon, Jr., 1; I. W. Munroe, 1; L. G. Horton, 2; William Hinckley, 1; E. Brackett, 1; Elijah Baxter, 2; John Whitney, 1; George Baxter, 1; Francis Williams, 1; Charles Clapp, 1; William Allen, 1; Benjamin Curtis, 1; Henry Barker, 3; George Marsh, 1; E. H. Savil, 2;—31.

A meeting of the inhabitants of this town was held at the Town Hall on Monday last, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Joseph W. Robertson was chosen Moderator, and the following business transacted:

Voted—To procure Gilbert's works and place the same in the Niagara Engine.

Voted—That a Committee of five be chosen to carry the above vote into effect.

Chose Messrs. Eleazer Bent, Washington M. French, Bryant B. Newcomb, George H. French, and John Whitney.

It was afterwards voted to instruct the Committee to repair the Engine or act any other way on the subject they may think proper, and authorizing them to draw on the Town Treasurer, through the Selectmen, for the payment.

The Report of a Committee, that it is inexpedient, at the present time, to establish a Fire Department, was accepted.

JEWELRY, SILVER WARE, ETC. Our readers will see by Mr. Brackett's advertisement, (to which we should have called their attention before), that he has made arrangements for the increase of his already extensive business. In doing so, he has been particularly fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Obadiah Rich, well known as the most cunning workman in silver in this country, while the head of the watch department, having served his apprenticeship in one of the largest manufactories in Europe, may be safely relied upon for the skillfulness of his work, and we cannot see how any lady of taste can look upon the Jewelry without a desire to appropriate some part to her own use. The manufacturing the hair of friends into the most beautiful articles of ornament seems quite a new branch of these times.

ELECTION. The State election has terminated in favor of the whig party. Gov. Briggs and Lt. Gov. Reed, have been re-elected by about two thousand majority. The whigs have elected all the members that have been chosen to the Senate, and the vacancy will be filled by members of that party. In this County, one, probably two, whig Senators have been elected. The House will have a large whig majority. The democrats have increased in the popular vote and also in the number of members to the House.

KILLED. Forty-five sheep and lambs belonging to Harvey Field, Esq., of this town, were killed yesterday morning, by the New York train. They had escaped from the pasture and were upon the track.

NEW DEPOT. A new depot is in process of erection, on the line of the Old Colony Railroad, at the head of Franklin Avenue, in this town.

MEXICAN NEWS. More battles have been fought by detachments of Gen. Lane's command, on their march to the Capital, in which the Mexicans have been greatly beaten. Capt. Walker of the Texan Rangers was killed in one of the skirmishes. Puebla has been re-taken by the Americans, and quiet once more restored. It is reported that Gen. Santa Anna has again been disposed from power, and deserted by his army.

FIRE. A house recently occupied by Ezra Badger, belonging to Mr. George W. Barrett, and situated on West street, in this town, was destroyed by fire on Friday evening last. It was no doubt fired by an incendiary, as an attempt had once before been made to do the deed. Value $700, insurance $250.

ALUM WATER. repeatedly applied, is one of the most effectual remedies known for that troublesome winter complaint called "chilblains."

Never be afraid to do right because somebody will laugh at you. Never do wrong because that same somebody will applaud you. Never be ashamed of an old hat, if it is well brushed, and the best you have.

The foibles of the Yankee spring from the best traits of his character. He guesses and catches because he thirsts for knowledge; he whistles because he is ingenious and inventive; he sings psalm tunes because he is religious; and he whistles because he is contented and happy.

Fusionism and all, "If the riches of the Indies or the crowns of all the kingdoms of Europe were laid at my feet, in exchange for my love of reading, I would spurn them all."

A fool who has made a fortune is very much in the predicament of a pig which is embarrassed by its own fat.

Longfellow's beautiful phrase, "suffer and be strong," is now familiarly rendered, "grin and bear it."

A printer has been elected an overseer of the poor in Indiana. He promises to take good care of himself.

A dealer in ready made linen, in New York, advertises his shirts and chemises under the well-known appellation of "male and female envelopes."

Let the wicked look upon the beauties of virtue and repent that they forsake her, and pine for her.

A man named Shakespeare has been arrested in Philadelphia, charged with counterfeiting. He should be doubly punished in consideration of his disgracing the name he bears.

Eight hundred pounds of gold are annually made up into Gold Pens in the United States.

A merchant of St. Petersburg drives a carriage drawn by two very large wolves, which are harnessed exactly like carriage horses, and attract much attention.

DREADFUL RAILROAD ACCIDENT. A terrible accident occurred on the Worcester Railroad, on Saturday afternoon. As the Springfield train was coming in, when near the crossing of the Mill Dam, some accident, the nature of which is not clearly explained, happened to some of the gearing of the foremost second class car, by which the car was torn to pieces and all the occupants precipitated to the ground. Seven were immediately killed, and several others injured. There were about forty-six passengers in the car, most of them apparently laborers, including a number of Irishmen and women. The scene of the accident presented a terrible spectacle—portions of the bodies being strewn along the road.

NORFOLK COUNTY RAILROAD. At a meeting of the stockholders of the Norfolk County Railroad Company on the 30th ult, Welcome Farnum, Charles H. Warren, Samuel Frothingham, Isaac Livermore, John E. Williams, Edmund W. Clapp, Daniel Hill, Willis Fisher, and Freeman Fisher, were chosen Directors. At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, the Board was organized by electing Welcome Farnum, President, and Edmund W. Clapp, Clerk.

PRATHEWORTHY. The Sons of Temperance of Nashville appropriated five hundred dollars for the relief of the sufferers by the recent explosion in that city. The money had been set apart to defray the expenses of a grand celebration and public dinner; but they preferred, in accordance with that great fundamental principle of their organization which commands them to relieve the distressed, to abandon the dinner and bestow the money upon this more worthy object.

CONVICTED AND SENTENCED. The trial of the woman, Restell, of New York, has been concluded, and she convicted of misdemeanor. After her sentence of one year to the State Prison, the motion in arrest of judgment was allowed by the Court, and further proceedings will consequently be stayed for the present.

FUNERAL OF CAPT. FELT. Preparations are making to receive and bury the remains of this officer by the military of Boston, with all the honors due his rank, the second day after the arrival of the body, which is expected daily. The arrangements are assumed by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Corps, of which company the deceased was a member.

FOREIGN NEWS. By recent arrivals we have four days later intelligence from Europe. Failures continue in England and the price of grain and flour was falling. The news is unimportant.

The report is confirmed that Chief Justice Parker, of New Hampshire, has received the appointment of Royal Professor of Law, at Cambridge, in place of Judge Kent.

DR. A. S. DUDLEY, Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE, No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court, BOSTON.

TENDERS his services to the citizens of Quincy in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART.

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of DOCT. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, on a SUNDAY.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

The Firm with which Dr. D. is connected, enjoys an extensive practice, and is able to compete with any establishment in the City. The senior partner, Dr. S. GRANDIN, M. D., is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plate worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonies which he has received from distinguished men:

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fitch of Philadelphia, author of a large work on Dental Surgery, to Eleazer Parmenter, dated June, 1843.

Dr. Parmenter operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has engaged several men to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's requirements and personal good character must, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon Dentist.

S. F. FITCH.

From Reuben D. Mussey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, (N. H.) and at present Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I am acquainted with Dr. Grandin, and regard him as a very skillful dentist, well qualified to operate in all the departments of the profession. Dr. G. manufactures and uses the porcelain teeth and those too of superior quality, as I should judge from the tests to which I have seen them subjected. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Grandin to those who may wish to employ a good dentist."

R. D. MUSSEY.

From Parker Cleveland, M. D., Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Natural Philosophy at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, (Me.)

"I have seen the porcelain teeth manufactured by David S. Grandin, M. D., and from their composition as stated by him to me, and from the tests to which I have seen them subjected by Dr. G., I am disposed to consider them of superior quality, and not liable to be affected by any agents, to which they may be exposed in the mouth. PARKER CLEVELAND."

All Operations Warranted.

Dentistry.

DR. A. S. DUDLEY,

Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE,
No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court,
BOSTON.

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the
DENTAL ART.

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of Dr. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, ONCE A MONTH.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

The Firm with which Dr. D. is connected enjoys an extensive practice, and is able to compete with any establishment in the City. The senior partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plastic worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonies which he has received from distinguished men:

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fick of Philadelphia, author of a large work on Dental Surgery, to Dr. Grandin, dated June, 1843.

"Dr. Grandin operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has plugged several for me to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's acquirements and personal good character must, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon Dentist."
S. F. FITCH.

From Reuben D. Mussey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, N. H., and at present Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I am acquainted with Dr. Grandin, and regard him as a very skillful dentist, well qualified to operate in all the departments of the profession. Dr. G. manufactures and uses the porcelain teeth and those too of superior quality, as I should judge from the tests to which I have seen them subjected. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Grandin to those who may wish to employ a good dentist."
R. D. MUSSEY.

From Parker Cleveland, M. D., Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Natural Philosophy at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, (Me.)

"I have seen the porcelain teeth manufactured by David S. Grandin, M. D., and from the tests to which I have seen them subjected by Dr. G., I am disposed to consider them of superior quality, and not liable to be affected by any agents to which they may be exposed in the mouth."
PARKER CLEVELAND.

Dr. Dudley extracts Teeth without pain when circumstances require it. Fills with pure Gold so as to preserve decayed teeth and prevent them from aching, and inserts Mineral Teeth on gold and silver pivots without using gold, and sets gold plates upon the Serratus or Arytenoid Process, from a single tooth to a whole set, both with and without Gums.

All Operations Warranted.

Health! Health!!
DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures to the whole system. In all cases of JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGOUR,

HEALTH AND VIGOR

and that
DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,
which is so common a complaint in the season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.—Be particular and ask for Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Agents,
Quincy, Messrs. CLAPP & RICHARDS; Dorchester, J. Marshall, Howland & Parker; Milton, Mills, M. D. Plummer; and by all respectable dealers in the United States.

POETRY.

OLD SIMON.

In his crazy arm chair, on the downfall of life,
Old Simon sat calm and resigned;
He outlived his friends, he had buried his wife,
Old Simon was lame, deaf and blind.

But the being of love, who still tempers the blast,
With devotion had sweetened his mind;
Her gay smiles, o'er his wrinkles, Contentment had cast,
And cheer'd him, though lame, deaf and blind.

His misfortune, his woes, could you hear him relate,
Instilling them all were designed,
To reclaim him from ill, or some bliss to create,
You'd long to be lame, deaf and blind.

When I learn, says old Simon, that topics of state,
Indulge each political chief;
That they buck-bite, snarl, and in noisy debate,
Old Simon's content to be deaf.

When fashion that tempter, than the serpent more sly,
To folly Eve's daughters inclin'd;
When with scarce a fig-leaf, they obtrude on the eye,
Old Simon's content to be blind.

When battle's fell trumpets so frequently sound,
And blood marks our annals with shame,
When abroad, war and murder, are raging around,
At home, I'm content to be lame.

Thus, this worthy old man, by contentment and prayer,
To the ill of his life was resign'd;
And in death he exclaim'd as he sunk in his chair,
What bliss! to the lame, deaf and blind.

With chaplets of joy, in the regions above,
His temples the angels attend;
Old Simon there blesses the being of love,
Who, here, made him lame deaf, and blind.

THE SLANDERER;

I dreamed I stood outside of hell,
Dark walls, and cries, and groans, and yells;
Heard faintly, from afar within
That dark abode of pain and sin.
Loud and louder on the ear
Those murmurs broke, and seemed more near
To be advancing; like the roar
Of some dark storm cloud breaking o'er
A mighty forest, old and still,
And rushing on o'er vale and hill.
Curses and imprecations dire,
Terms of contempt and vengeful ire,
From myriad tongues, I now could hear
Each moment seeming still more near.
Toward where I stood, the tumult drew;
And hell's broad gates wide open flew;
Out rushed a being sore in haste
By demons, imps, and devils, chased.
"Drive him far off!" loud voices cried,
"And you, gate-keeper, who bestride,
If'er within these walls is seen
Another being half as mean!"
A fiend came near. I said, pray, tell,
I sought too mean, too vile, for hell?
Who can that wretched being be,
Whom thou hast forced so far to flee
From this dark den of sin and shame?
Tell whence he came, and what his name?
He grinned a smile of fiend-like mirth,
And said, "a slanderer from earth."

THE BACHELOR'S LIFE.

The Old Bachelor's life, how happy it is,
How free from all troubles and cares;
To him all the world seems an Eden of bliss,
And all nature a lovely smile wears.

All the world is to him one lawful domain,
O'er which unrestrained he may roam,
With none to upbraid him, to chide and complain,
O'er hurry him back to his home.

He goes when he's a mind, and comes when it suits,

And lives as best pleases his mind;
He's never embroiled in the petty disputes
Peculiar to Hymen's entwined.

He takes all the comfort that can be enjoyed
In a world full of torments like this;
Where women and devils are ever employed
In marring his pleasure and peace.

ANECDOTES.

A person who dined in company with Dr. Johnson endeavored to make his court to him by laughing immoderately at every thing he said. The Doctor bore it some time with philosophical indifference; but the impertinent ha, ha, ha! becoming intolerable—"Pray, sir," said the Doctor, "what is the matter? I hope I have not said any thing that you can comprehend."

An English lady, on arriving in France, was surprised and somewhat indignant at being termed, for the first time in her life, a foreigner. "You mistake, madam," said she to the waiter, with some pique—"it is you who are foreigners; we are English!"

A celebrated physician, boasted at a dinner that he cured his own horse, one of his guests remarked, "Doctor, I would sooner be your horse than your patient."

An Irishman was arraigned before the Court recently, and when asked if he was "guilty or not guilty?" replied, "It's guilty I am to be sure, but I'm not ready for trial. I haven't a witness."

"My dear Polly," I am surprised at your taste in wearing another woman's hair on your head," said a man to his wife. "My dear Joe, I am equally astonished that you persist in wearing another sheep's wool on your back."

"My dear," said a gentleman to a young lady, to whom he thought to be married, "do you wish to make a fool of me?" "No," replied the lady, "nature has saved me the trouble."

"Do you profess religion?"

"No, sir. I profess my faith and practice my religion."

MISCELLANY.

UNCLE JONAS AND HIS HEIR.

Uncle Jonas was seventy years old, and his thick fine hair lay like silver on his temples. His tall form was but slightly bent, and there was a ruddy glow on his healthy cheek. In short, from appearances, Uncle Jonas bade fair to live fifteen or twenty years longer.

Now, though this might be very agreeable and pleasant to the old gentleman himself, there were two young gentlemen who were not quite so delighted with the prospect. Uncle Jonas was rich, and had two heirs, in the shape of two idle, good-for-nothing little nephews, named James and Joseph, but more commonly called Jem and Joe. How it happened that Jem and Joe considered themselves sole heirs to Uncle Jonas, was not very well known, for there were other nephews besides themselves, and much more deserving; but nevertheless it was so, and Uncle Jonas himself seemed somewhat to favor the idea; but some said it was because he was under the influence of his brother, the father of the young men, who ruled him and governed him almost like a child. In fact, his brother's rule had lately become very irksome to Uncle Jonas, who at first submitted to it from affection, and a certain indolence, and dislike to the exercise of strong will; but as he found it encroaching more and more every day, he became sensible that, unless he resisted soon, he would have no free will left.

It was a fine, warm summer day, and Uncle Jonas having returned from a walk over his extensive grounds, entered his cool, darkened parlor, and reclining himself in a large easy chair, fell asleep. He was seated near an open window, through whose closed blinds came a soft summer breath, fragrant with the perfume of lilies. What wonder that, in this pleasant dream, he thought a soft white hand was bathing his forehead with cool odors. The sound of voices at length awoke him, and he listened, at first half asleep, half dreaming. He seemed in a few minutes, however, to acquire a sudden interest in the conversation, for he started slightly, and listened with an earnest, surprised expression; then rising softly, he peeped cautiously through the blinds out on the piazza, which, running round the main house, made a right angle near the window. Here in the shade, lounging on the settees which were placed at intervals, were his two nephews, each with a cigar in his mouth.

They were tall, well formed youths enough, but cunning was the marked expression of their intellectual faces, which possessed youth, health, and somewhat regular features—which, however, did not quite redeem their sandy hair, white eye-brows, and light blue eyes.

'I say, Jem, you needn't trouble yourself,' said the younger of the two, 'for I saw the old man go down to the Willow Pond an hour ago, and he can't come back without my seeing him.'

'I wonder he don't have the kindness to tumble into the Willow Pond? I should think he meant to hang on to all eternity.'

'Oh,' answered Joe, with a coarse laugh, 'he's as tough as pin wire; but his time will come at last, and then his money bags will have to sweat, I promise you.'

'The first thing I shall do will be to cut down these big trees, and have all this great useless green spot planted with potatoes.'

'You may do what you've a mind to with this place. I'm content with the house in the city, and then we'll see who will have a fast trotter that'll beat Joe Staples.'

'Have you seen Black Charley, that Uncle Jonas thinks so much of?' said Jem, knocking the ashes from his cigar. 'I s'pose we go and take a look at him. He's a fiery fellow, and it's a shame he don't break his master's neck. We should break our hearts at such a distressing event, should we not Joe?'

'We should be plunged into the depths of affliction,' answered Joe, in a tone of mock solemnity—and lighting a fresh cigar, Uncle Jonas's hopeful heirs took their way to the stable.

'Well, well,' said Uncle Jonas, throwing himself back, with a deep sigh, into his easy chair. 'So the ungrateful boys already wish I would break my neck—humph! I drown myself in the Willow Pond—humph! So they think I am tough as pin wire! Aye, aye! They shall find I am tougher than they expect. They have missed a figure in their calculations, the empty-headed, false hearted varlets. They my heirs? We shall see, we shall see! And Uncle Jonas rose up, so tall and erect and energetic, you would have thought him ten years younger than when he sat down.'

About five miles from where Uncle Jonas lived, away up a green lane, was a small black cottage, with a sloping roof, that ran down so far behind that it almost rested on the green bank around the house. It was an humble, rural abode as you would like to see in riding through the country, and there would have been nothing attractive about it, if it had not been overhung by an immense elm tree, which cast its grateful shadow far and wide before the cottage door. All was very still around this lowly dwelling. The murmur of the bright little brook that went dancing and sparkling over the stones, was mingled with the low hum of a busy wheel, beside which sat a young girl of twenty-two or three summers. She was neatly attired in a short, white gown, and a black skirt, from beneath which peeped a well shaped foot, clad in snow white hose.

Pretty Mary Miller was wont to sing as she plied her wheel, but to-day her sweet voice was silent; and now, as their little property diminished rapidly, she dreaded lest she should be obliged to leave her poor mother, and her humble but happy home, and seek her fortune in the wide world. So, while her hands wrought mechanically at their wonted task, her mind was busy shaping out future scenes. Suddenly the rapid tread of a horse's foot aroused her, and looking up, she beheld a fine looking man, mounted on a proud black steed, reined up before her.

Mary sprung up from her wheel, and hastened to welcome her old friend, Uncle Jonas. Good Mr. Staples! who had been a friend to them in all their trials. He was always welcome. Uncle Jonas declined entering the cottage; so Mary brought out another chair, and a bowl of her richest milk, for her visitor, and her dark eyes sparkled with pleasure as her benevolent friend received it with a smile and kind thanks.

After a few inquiries about her mothers, and how things were going on, made in rather an absent manner, to be sure, Uncle Jonas moved his chair nearer Mary, and with the air of a man who has made up his mind, he took her hand in his, and said, simply and candidly:

'My dear Mary, I am old, and you are young, and the world might perchance laugh at what I am going to say; but you are a sensible girl, and will view it rationally.'

A rich glow crimsoned Mary's cheek, as she fixed her eyes on Uncle Jonas, with a glance of surprise and expectation.

'I cannot offer you youth or beauty,' continued Uncle Jonas, smiling a little, 'but I can promise a comfortable and I trust a happy home, both for yourself and your mother, if you will be my wife. You need not answer me now, Mary, but in a day or two I will ride over, and you can tell me then what you may think best.'

And good Uncle Jonas, as he spoke, laid his hands on Mary's bright dark hair, as if he would ask a blessing on her. After a few moments, during which little was said, Uncle Jonas mounted Black Charley and rode slowly away. Mary sat by a spinning wheel, but did not spin, till the voice of her mother, returning from a neighbor's, reminded her that it was nearly sunset.

It was some three weeks after the above event that the thin, spare form of Mr. Joshua Staples, might have been seen crossing the green lawn before his brother's dwelling. His sharp features were an angry expression, and his little piercing gray eyes shot fire from under the cover of his overhanging brows. In his hand he grasped a small piece of written paper, and he muttered some inaudible words as he hastened on. There was a quiet smile on Uncle Jonas' face, as he watched his brother from the window, but he turned to meet him as he came into the room, in precisely his ordinarily calm manner.

Mr. Joshua Staples, without any useless ceremony, plunged at once in medias res.

'What does all this mean, brother Jonas?' said he. 'What set you to go and make a fool of yourself at your time of life?' and Mr. Joshua shook the crumpled piece of paper in his brother's face as he spoke. 'It is well you have me to take care for you, or you would plunge head-long into ruin.'

'What is the trouble, brother Joshua?' said Uncle Jonas, very mildly, 'what is in the paper?'

'Take it,' said Mr. Joshua, thrusting it upon him, 'and thank heaven that I have saved you from such disgrace.'

Uncle Jonas smoothed out the crumpled paper and read—his own marriage notice.

An angry spot burned in his cheeks, and his eye flashed, but he subdued himself in a moment, and answered mildly—'So you think I have done wrong, brother Joshua?'

'To be sure I do, you ought to be ashamed of yourself, to set up a poor, beggarly huzzy over your own flesh and blood.'

'Nay, brother; you forget yourself, Mary Miller may be poor, but she is no beggar.'

Mr. Joshua saw he had gone too far, and softened his tone a little. 'That may be,' continued he, 'but artful she must be to have entrapped a man of your years into such folly.' Uncle Jonas bit his lip, but said nothing.

'Come,' said Joshua more calmly, 'if you are lonely in your castle of a house, James and Joseph shall make you a visit; they desire nothing further than to make you happy and add to your enjoyment.'

'Very well, brother,' said Uncle Jonas, 'do as you please.'

Uncle Jonas said this in so apparently submissive a manner, as if in deference to his brother's superior judgment, that Mr. Joshua was satisfied, and talked and laughed as if nothing had happened.

The next day brought Jem and Joe apparently for a friendly visit to their uncle, but in reality as spies upon Uncle Jonas' movements.

Every thing went on, however, the same as usual; Uncle Jonas appeared to have wholly given up his idle folly, as his brother called it, and Jem and Joe grew more confident and boastful than ever, and more idle and luxurious.

They were seldom up in season for breakfast, and one morning they came down later than usual. As they sauntered idly into the breakfast room, they observed that Uncle Jonas had preceded them. This was not, however, a very uncommon event, and they took but little notice of it. Their breakfast was as well served as they could reasonably expect, yet they took the liberty of finding fault with every thing, and using improper language to the servants.

'I wonder where the stupid old fool of a Thomas is,' said Jem, as he rung the bell violently the second time, with a jerk that broke the pull in pieces.

No Thomas came; but there seemed to be an unusual bustle and confusion in the hall, and in a few moments there entered Uncle Jonas with a happy smile on his benevolent countenance, and with him a lady, young and handsome, whom he introduced to his astonished nephews as his wife.

Surprise and anger really imparted animation to their dull, conceited countenances as Jem and Joe started up at this unexpected announcement.

Do not let us interrupt your breakfast, gentlemen, pray to eat and feel yourself at home,' said good Uncle Jonas, with a slightly malicious emphasis on the last.

Jem and Joe looked first at their uncle and then at each other, in evident embarrassment. Their first impulse had been to seize their hats and rush out of the house, but second thought said, 'Put a good face on the matter, you may be heirs yet. Who knows? So they saluted their new aunt with all the politeness they could muster, and she received their attentions graciously.

As soon as they were by themselves, however, the pent up anger exploded in bitter excretions against themselves, for having been outwitted. Most bitter were they against their father, for, said they—if he hadn't nerved us up here, we should have gone round to the different churches and given Uncle Jonas no chance of being published.

'It's no use our staying here any longer,' grumbled Joe. 'We shall serve our ends best by my thinking, by taking ourselves off a while.'

'One thing I know,' said Jem, doggedly, 'I have got to have some money from somewhere, and if I can't get it out of Uncle Jonas, father will have to lighten his purse.'

'You won't get it now, you may depend upon that, he'll be so mad at our letting the old man get the start of us. We have got the laugh on us completely now. Bayley and Stephens, and Brown, will have us for a by-word; they'll never be done making fun of us. We shall get the nickname of 'The Heirs,' and Joe looked crest fallen enough as he thought of the ridicule of his dissipated companions.

'Oh, come, it's no use talking so, Joe, we must put a bold face on, and laugh with them, and keep good friends with Uncle Jonas, and get what we can out of him, ha! ha! We may be heirs yet,' and there was a cold glitter in Jem's light blue eyes as he spoke, which was the nearest approach to warmth they ever manifested.

When Mr. Joshua Staples found his brother had broken from his rule, he was at first violently angry, but feeling it to be useless, fell into the policy of his sons, and all went on quietly for a time.

One day, after the lapse of two or three summers, as Mr. Joshua and his hopeful sons were sitting smoking after dinner, the servant handed in a note, which Mr. Joshua opened and read as follows:

'My dear brother and nephews, I have the pleasure of announcing to you the joyful intelligence, that Mrs. Staples has this day presented me with a son and heir.'

Mr. Joshua dropped the note as if he burned his fingers with a red hot coal, and in the surprise of the moment a naughty word bolted out of his mouth.

Joe picked up the note and finished reading it.

'I have no doubt the intelligence will be very gratifying to my nephews, as they will need feel no further anxiety lest I should fall into the Willow Pond, or break my neck with Black Charley.'

'What in the name of common sense does he mean by that?' asked Mr. Joshua pettishly, looking at his sons.

Jem and Joe looked foolishly at each other. They saw they had lost all chance of being Uncle Jonas' heirs.

A PROCLAMATION, FOR A DAY OF PUBLIC THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE.

During the last winter, a cry for bread was heard throughout this fruitful land, from a distant and famishing people. It was a voice of agony, such as was never before heard by the living generations of this continent. The people of our great family of States with prompt and Christian philanthropy, answered that cry, by sending bread to the millions who uttered it.

Seed time and harvest have again succeeded each other, and the boundless fields of our extended country have produced an abundance without a parallel since the settlement of this new world.

In all the years of the history of Massachusetts, few have exhibited more evidences of internal and domestic prosperity than the past.

'The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof.' All our blessings come from Him. For the manifold mercies of the past year, we owe to Him a public manifestation of acknowledgement and gratitude.

I do therefore, by and with the advice and consent of the Council, appoint THURSDAY, THE TWENTY-FIFTH DAY OF NOVEMBER NEXT, to be observed by the people of this Commonwealth, as a day of public Thanksgiving and Praise.

On that day, let us remember His goodness, cease from the pursuit of business and of pleasure, go up to the temples of His worship, and offer to Him the sacrifice of thanksgiving.

Whilst we enter His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise, let us, as sinners, humble ourselves before Him, and implore His pardoning grace.

In the enjoyment of His rich temporal blessings, let us be sensible that He offers to us spiritual blessings far more precious, and remember that He so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

With sincere hearts, let us pray, that He will continue to regard our Commonwealth with favor.

That He will bless the industry of all classes of our citizens, and reward their varied and honest pursuits with success:

That He will smile upon our common schools, and higher seminaries of learning, and make them the approved and efficient instruments of intellectual and moral improvement:

That the widow, the fatherless, and the poor, may be the objects of His compassionate care:

That He will fill the hearts of the opulent with a spirit of noble liberality, and cause them to realize the truth of the Saviour's words, that 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'

That He will impart spiritual energy to the ministers of His word, and make them wise to win souls:

That He will imbue the minds of professing Christians, bearing different names, with the spirit of their divine master, and lead them to imitate Him in acts of kindness and good will towards their fellow men:

That He will look propitiously upon our common country, and, by diffusing among our citizens the principles of justice and impressing them with a sacred and abiding regard for the rights of man, strengthen the bonds of this great Union, and make it perpetual:

That He will vouchsafe to open the way by which three millions of the human race, in this land of liberty, now wearing the chains of slavery, shall without violence or convulsion, be raised to the condition of freemen:

That He will speedily arrest the calamities of war, and put an end to those hostilities which, at this time, are wasting the treasures and sacrificing the lives of our own countrymen, and carrying desolation and death throughout a neighboring republic:

And, to consummate the greatest good to the whole family of man, that He will cause the GOSPEL of HIS SON to be preached and received among the nations, and of His Glorious KINGDOM to be extended to the remotest bounds of the earth.

Given at the Council Chamber, in Boston, this second day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the seventy-second.

GEORGE N. BRIGGS.

FEMALE BEAUTY. Leigh Hunt says that the 'beauty of the female figure consists in being gently serpentine.' We have seen a great number of ladies, in our time, who must have held the same belief, for they wriggled, and twisted in their gait, and bent themselves into all sorts of unnatural curves and angles. The beauty of the female figure, to our notion, consists in being natural; and nature seldom organizes a human frame after a serpentine model. The proper carriage of one's figure is erect—bold—straight—without bend or irregular blemish. Artificial additions of any kind—acquired habits of stooping or walking—are all injurious. A homely face and form, arrayed in garments chosen with reference to taste, looks lovelier by far than any conception or suggestion by either poet or milliner.

WONDERS OF GEOLOGY. More than nine thousand different animals have been changed into stone. The races or genera of more than half of these are now extinct, not being at present known in a living state upon the earth. From the remains of some of these ancient animals they must have been larger than any living animals now known upon the earth. The Magatherium, (great beast,) says Buckland, from a skeleton, nearly perfect, now in the museum at Madrid, was perfectly colossal. With a head and neck like those of the Sixth, its legs and feet exhibit the character of an Armadillo and the Anteater. Its fore-feet were a yard in length, and more than twelve inches wide, terminated by gigantic claws. Its thigh bone was nearly three times as thick as that of the elephant, and its tail (nearest the body) six feet in circumference. Its tusks were admirable adapted for cutting vegetable substances, and its general structure and strength were intended to fit it for digging in the ground for roots, on which it principally fed.—Buckland's Bridgewater Treatise.

ACTION. Who ever became a man of influence by sitting under the harrow of despondency, says the Boston Chronotype. What slow poke ever benefited the world, his friends, or himself. There is nothing like action, coupled with cheerfulness. We see it every where.

Who is he sitting on that empty barrel on the wharf? A man with no energy, a prey to grief. He doesn't know what to do, and how to start. Who is that man with folded arms, standing in the market place? A lazy, do-little sort of vagabond, who hardly earns his bread and butter. Do you wish to become such a character? Then arouse yourself, away from the arm chair—up from the gutter—out of the downy bed. Move your arms, kick your feet, and stir about; give the blood a chance to circulate through your veins and the air of heaven to enter your lungs. Seize the first job presented and despatch it at once—up for the pay, and get another forthwith.

You'll soon earn enough to purchase a wheelbarrow or a handcart, and then you will begin to live. Who knows what you may become? Energy is half omnipotence. Small beginnings end in large gains; a penny well turned brings a fortune. Resolve then to do something and be something, and our word for it, you will be useful to your dying day for preaching thus faithfully to you.

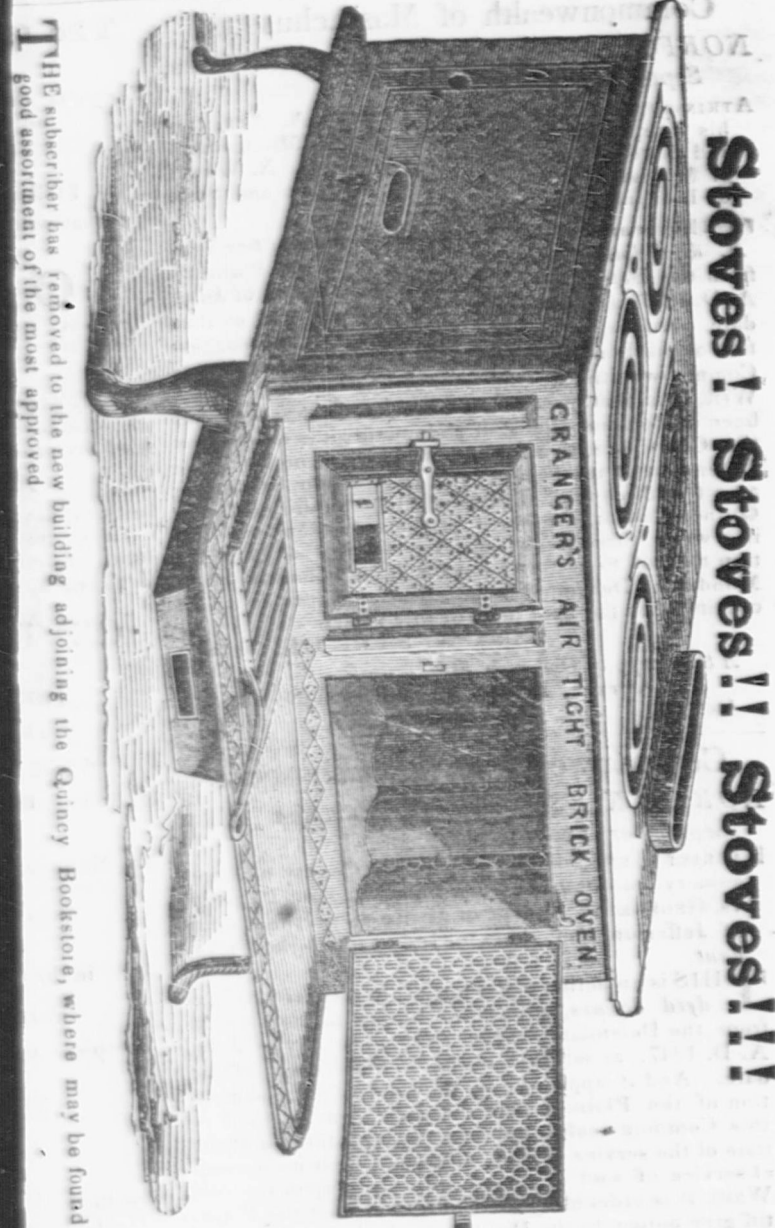

ARRIVAL EXTRAORDINARY. A number of young ladies who went to the West as teachers, under the auspices of Gov. Slade, Miss Beecher, and others, arrived in Cincinnati recently. The Gazette says:—The only serious objections to the feasibility of this plan which occurs to us, is that this army of instructors will need renewing as often as our army in Mexico. The Yankee girls make good teachers, beyond all doubt, but they also make excellent wives and mothers; and if Governor Slade don't find his young lady volunteers deploying to the right and left in these new lines of service, we shall lose our guess.

So be it. They will do more good to the forming communities of the west, as wives and mothers, than as teachers. We wish an army of them could invade the valley of the Mississippi, and reduce all the hardy young yeomanry in it under the matrimonial yoke. God bless New England. While her sons move the nation with their enterprise, her daughters sanctify its homes, and educate its rising generations for the noble destinies of the future. Where do you find in this nation an onward movement, of an intellectual or moral kind, in which a New Englander has not a hand?—Zion's Herald.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF TEA. In the memoirs of the London chemical society, there is an interesting paper by Mr. Warrington, on the analysis of tea, in which he states that he has not only removed the whole of the coloring matter, or glazing, from green tea, but he has been able to analyze the matter removed, and prove it by chemical evidence, to consist of Prussian blue and gypsum principally. So that, in fact, the drinkers of green tea as it comes to the English market, indulge in a beverage of Chinese paint, and might imitate the mixture by dissolving Prussian blue and plaster of Paris in hot water. The Chinese do not drink this painted tea; they only sell it.

THE HUMAN HEART. The velvet moss will grow upon the sterile rock; the mistletoe flourish on the withered branch; the ivy cling to the mouldering ruin; the pine and cedar remain fresh and fadeless amidst the mutations of the dying year; and, something green, something beautiful to see, and grateful to the soul, will, in the coldest and darkest hour of fate, still twine its tendrils around the crumbling altars and broken arches of the desolate temples of the human heart!

WHITE AND BROWN BREAD. 'Mistaken notions,' respecting the quality of different sorts of bread have given rise to much waste. The general belief is that the bread made with the finest flour is the best, and that whiteness is the proof of its quality; but both of these opinions are popular errors. It is well known by men of science, that the bread of unrefined flour will sustain life, while that of the finest will not. Keep a man on brown bread and water, and he will live and enjoy good health; give him white bread and water only and he will gradually sicken and die.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the Company's business in New England, and to appoint a Secretary and General Agent for the same. It is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, and that Mr. E. HAYDEN, is duly appointed Secretary and General Agent for the same. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

EDWARD HARTON, Secretary.

Local Depts. and to grant rights to send the Company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereon, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

EDWARD HARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a large and extensive branch in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains), and in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ultimately be but one depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 20,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Constipation, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sicknes, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box. The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 30 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND.

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the market. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eye this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eye, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the shattered system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Pleuritis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Family, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 20, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

Dr. A. S. DUDLEY. It will be seen by an advertisement in our paper that this gentleman has opened an office in this village, where he will practice Dentistry in all its various branches. He will come out on the first Monday of every month and remain a few days. We are assured that Dr. D. is a regularly educated Dentist, and a member of the Medical School connected with Harvard University. We have examined several specimens of his work, and so far as we are able to judge, deem them of a superior order, both as to beauty and durability. The following testimonials from Drs. Gay and Goodnow of this place, speak in the highest terms of Dr. D. and of his establishment in Boston.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with Dr. Dudley of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For restoring artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.
Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are inimitable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

LLOYD GOODNOW, M. D.
Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

His office in this city is at No. 232, Washington St. corner of Central Court.

CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE AND APPENDIX. We would direct the attention of those interested in Congressional proceedings, to the advertisement of Blair & Rives. A specimen number of their work may be seen at this office.

ORATORIO. The Oratorio of the Creation was performed under the direction of Mr. D. F. Felt, with a full choir and orchestral accompaniments, at the old South Church in South Weymouth, last Sunday evening. The performance will be repeated to-morrow evening, Nov. 21st. Encourage native talent.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. This popular weekly publication is issued by Munn & Co., 128 Fulton St., New York. Each number contains original engravings of important mechanical inventions and improvements, and a great variety of matter useful and instructive to the mechanic, the manufacturer, the farmer, and to every scientific man. As a family paper, it is almost invaluable. Terms, two dollars per year.

LATER FROM VERA CRUZ. Advice from Vera Cruz to the 5th inst., have been received at New Orleans.

Open hostilities had broken out between Santa Anna and Paredes. A manifesto had been issued by the latter, in which the Ex-President was denounced as an enemy to the Mexican people and Mexican nationality.

Two engagements with the enemy had occurred near Puebla, in which the Americans had fifteen killed; the Mexican loss was one hundred. Gen. Scott has commenced a permanent occupation of the national road, between Vera Cruz and the capital. A garrison of seven hundred and fifty men has been established at the National Bridge; another of twelve hundred, under Gen. Cushing, at Jalapa; a third, of two thousand, under Gen. Lane, at Puebla. Gen. Lane was quartered in the heart of the city. Santa Anna was at Tapacan as late as the 26th ult. A civil war has broken out among the guerrillas, which resulted in a severe battle.

LIBERIA. The Republic of Liberia now takes its place among the independent nations of the earth. The constitution has been received at Washington, as adopted by its Convention. The Legislature and Executive branches of the Government are made conformable to our own; except that the President and Vice President are to be elected every two years.

A destructive fire took place at Topsham (Me.) on Saturday, destroying, beside a large quantity of lumber, two saw mills, one clapboard and lathe machine, and part of Androscoggin bridge and toll house.

NEW YORK. Gill & Co. of the Quincy Book-store, have placed upon our table a neatly bound copy of "Advice to Young Ladies on their Duties and Conduct in life," by T. S. Arthur, an author well known in the literary world for numerous works of merit. A further notice of the work may be expected.

The schooner Splendid, arrived at Philadelphia, reports that, on the 8th inst. fell in with schooner Caroline, of Saco, (Me.) dismasted, and two hands washed overboard. Three were found on board, in a starving condition, and were taken off the wreck by the Splendid. They had killed and eaten a shipmate, named Charles Brown.

The Governor of Wisconsin estimates the population 200,000.

The leader of the "Perfectionists," at Putney, (Vt.) has been arrested on a charge of adultery, and is under $2,000 bonds to appear for trial.

Slips avoid the duty on copper by making their first voyage to Liverpool unsheltered. This also allows the planking to swell and get its fixed position before the metal is applied.

An invoice of superior stores, destined for Chung-choi, China, have been shipped from Philadelphia. This is a new channel for enterprise, and the Celestials, at a distance of eighteen thousand miles, can cook their rice and roast their rats and puppies on stoves made of the Keystone iron.

Gov. Bissel of Connecticut, has appointed Ex-Governor Roger S. Baldwin, as Senator of the United States, for the unexpired term of the Hon. Jabez D. Huntington, deceased.

Every female cannot be equally wealthy or equally accomplished, in every particular, but every one can be equally virtuous, equally discreet, equally amiable; and do much, very much towards making herself equally respectable and equally happy.

The Niagara Suspension Bridge was put under contract on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, at $180,000.

On the Ulica and Schenectady Railroad some wretch placed parcels of gunpowder on the track, with percussion caps; the explosion, instead of throwing off the train, as intended, only set fire to the wooden casing of the boiler, which was destroyed.

Mr. Mills, Mayor of Montreal, died in that city recently, from ship fever, contracted in the discharge of the official duties of his station.

Thanksgiving in Illinois, Nov. 25th. So far the observance of this festival has been fixed for the same day in eighteen States and one Territory.

The authorities of St. John, New Brunswick, are trying to induce the paupers there to go home again, by giving them free passage to Europe, provisions, water, etc.

The Mexican debt to English capitalists is about $50,000,000.

The rumor gains credence in circles of the highest authority, of the symptoms of insanity having been decidedly manifested by her Majesty Queen Victoria. The well known liability of her family to this cruel malady, strengthens the probability of the report.

A man was brought up at one of the London police officers, for assaulting and nearly killing a woman, he excused himself by saying he thought it was his wife!

This country will not lose much by the great failures in England, and shipments of breadstuffs having been mostly paid for before the crash.

Abby Kelly Foster, it is said, cannot attend any of the abolition meetings this fall, "being deterred by indispensable duties at home."

There are upwards of fifteen thousand families in Virginia without the Scriptures.

Mrs. Runkle, convicted at Utica, (N. Y.) some weeks since of the murder of her husband, was executed on the 9th inst.

Apples are said to be so plentiful in Philadelphia and along the shore, that shippers are glad to get clear of them for the charge of freightage. These large supplies are from New York and the Eastern States.

The law reducing the rates of postage has been singularly successful. The deficit of the first year after the act, was $800,000; the deficit of the last year was $640,000; while the deficit in this year is only $40,000.

Some one terms old maids "the pure gold of womankind."

The papers say that the hair of a lady in Hartford (Conn.) measures nine feet four inches in length, while she is only four feet one inch high.

The Chinese Junk Keying, has arrived in Boston harbor, and is to be refitted in her original fashion, previous to being taken up the river and anchored near Braman's bath house.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE & APPENDIX.

WE issue this sheet as a Specimen number of the Congressional Globe, to apprise the public of the nature and extent of our project, and to invite subscriptions. The two Houses have contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enables us now to make complete Reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still farther its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people. It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the Government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and personal exertions used to bring the work to the press, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the due fulfillment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, the origin and progress of the rebellion, the cabinet, the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the dispositions to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching Presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this Country as the councils of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the Capital of Mexico and the Provinces still dependent on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of if printed speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question. Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's Annual Message, the Reports of the principal Officers of the Government, the correspondence of the President with the Members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same number of pages during a session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of the session, there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers each week. The next session will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near three thousand large quarto pages printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete Indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be mislaid, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear that we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers. We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original subscription price—$1 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.
For one copy of the Congressional Globe, $2 00

Dentistry.

DR. A. S. DUDLEY,
 Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE,
 No. 228 Washington St., corner of Central Court,
 BOSTON.

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART,
 And would respectfully announce that he has estab- lished an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of Doct. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may de- sire his services, ONCE A MONTH.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence or- ders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

The Firm with which Dr. D. is connected enjoys an extensive practice, and is able to compete with any establishment in the City. The senior partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plate worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonials which he has received from distinguished men:

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fitch of Philadel- phia, author of a large work on Dental Surgery, to Dr. Dudley, dated June, 1843.

"Dr. Grandin operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has pluggers several for me to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's acquirements and personal good character meet, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon Dentist."
S. F. FITCH.

From Reuben D. Mussey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, (N. H.) and at present Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I am acquainted with Dr. Grandin, and regard him as a very skillful dentist, well qualified to operate in all the departments of the profession. Dr. G. man- ufactures and uses the porcelain teeth and those too of superior quality, as I should judge from the tests to which I have seen them subjected. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Grandin to those who may wish to employ a good dentist."
R. D. MUSSEY.

From Parker Cleveland, M. D., Professor of Chemis- try, Mineralogy and Natural Philosophy at Bow- doin College, Brunswick, (Me.)

"I have seen the porcelain teeth manufactured by David S. Grandin, M. D., and from their composition as stated by him to me, and from the tests to which I have seen them subjected by Dr. G., I am disposed to consider them of superior quality, and not liable to be affected by any agents to which they may be ex- posed in the mouth."
PARKER CLEVELAND.

Dr. Dudley extracts Teeth without pain when cir- cumstances require it. Fills with pure Gold so as to preserve decayed teeth and prevent them from ach- ing, and inserts Mineral Teeth on gold and silver pivots without using wood, and on gold plate upon the Sec- tion or Atmospheric Principle, from a single tooth to a whole set, both with and without Gums.

All Operations Warranted.

MISCELLANY.

KATE RUSSELL.

It was strange that Kate Russell and I should quarrel. Strange that, after weeks of fondness—after our daily wanderings in wood and meadow—after we had christened every green bank that the brooks baptised, and consecrated every shaded knoll with some memory of love—after all glad influences of earth and sky had bound our hearts together,—a little word of jealous anger should have had power to burst the bonds and free us from our sweet slavery.

But so it was. Long we sat together in the twilight, one October evening, whispering bright dreams of the future, promising never to be parted, and vowing that doubt, and change, and coldness should never enter our true hearts; and, some twelve short hours thereafter, a banished lover, with an empty stomach, and, as I fancied, an empty heart, was packed close in a corner of the Old Colony stage, and hastening towards the new Athens.

It was a dreary day, the dimmest since the deluge. One of winter's Texan Rangers, a New England north-easter, had got the better of 'brave old autumn,' and was fast banishing bird and flower—every thing that dared to wear a look of cheerfulness—from his master's new dominion. It was not a day for reflecting on deeds that need repentance. The rain trickled down the closed windows, and hid the world from my sight. The passengers were gloomy and silent as at a funeral. If one spoke, it was with a sigh and a shudder. The wind howled through the gaping crannies of the stage, like a disembodied spirit. The mud fell on the roof, with the dull sound of clouds upon a coffin; and long before we reached Quincy bridge, I had repented most bitterly of my hasty and foolish anger.

It was not for pride that I did not turn back. Men may be proud when the sun shines, but an east wind brings humility. On that day, Lucifer himself might have been dragged about like a whipped dog. No, pride was not in my thoughts, but I felt that we could never more renew our old sympathy. The bitter words we had spoken must always remain a barrier between our hearts. The ruggedest remnant of common sense would have taught me that we had quarrelled only because we were 'a little lower than the angels'; that Kate was under the same cloud that shrouded me, and that a quick return, one kiss, one word of love, would heal the wound forever.

But it is not permitted that love and common sense shall dwell together in men's brains, and so I held my course, gloomily thinking of all that had chanced since I travelled that road before; of the new wishes, and measures, and hopes, that, since then, had sprung up in my heart, and of the sudden storm that had blasted them all.

Turn back, dear reader, with those thoughts of mine, I pray thee. Just before the Indian Summer, my good friend, Frank Russell, had promised me a fortnight's shooting in the Old Colony—for thus fondly do the good people of Plymouth name their weather-worn county. We were to visit his uncle, the Colonel, and much he boasted to my willing ear of the old gentleman's hospitality. Something there was, too, in praise of his Cousin Kate's beauty, but that I minded less.

We were nearly ready for our journey, when suddenly Satan or Momus, or some other of the subterranean, crazed Frank's governor with a vain hope that his son might make something in the world, if cut loose from his old associations. Speedily to coin this into reality, he shipped poor Frank, unwarned, without one farewell call, or parting supper, to New York, there, from the bad eminence of a stool in Front street, to wing his flight to usefulness, distinction and a plum.

I was not to be balked of my sport, and, a day or two after Frank's disappearance, I mounted the Plymouth stage, beside Ben Siebbs, the driver, and started down the road at the decent rate of six miles an hour.

Speed is reckoned by miles and minutes on that route, now a days; but the 'way of life' was then a pleasant walk—not a steep chase that steam has made it since. Sensible people were laughing at the vagaries of a madcap fellow, named Fulton, who pretended to have made a boat move without oar or sail. Old sea dogs wagged their heads, and reckoned that she went down the stream.

We pay dearly for these new inventions that men find out, and, for steam, we have bartered away a race of great souled men, ye old stage drivers; universal philanthropists, different in mark and number from those of our bad days; men whose hearts had no opportunity to close; whose daily business it was to ride, chatting and laughing, stealing secret kisses, leaving kind messages, and dropping love-letters and presents of game and city finery, through miles of sunny woodland.

But, alas for the noble craft! The men of the long whip and the many coats, the oracles of the way-side inn, the rulers of the world—if 'all the world's a stage'—are fast passing away. Yet are they booked for a glorious immortality. 'Their lines have fallen in pleasant places.' Tony Weiler will keep the road till 'the last pike' is paid, and the last man sat down in paradise.

Of this race, so full of the milk of human kindness, Ben Siebbs was, like Sir John, the very butter. Still more like Sir John, he was 'five fingers thick upon the ribs,' and, in that goodly frame, there was not nerve or muscle that did not vibrate with good humor. Well was it for me, that I soon appropriated a niche in his heart to myself.

The Colonel's house was but a few miles from Plymouth. Ben pointed it out to me as we approached, and, peering through the rows of lofty elms that hid it from the road, my eyes fell on a lovely girl, who was hastening towards us; her dark brown curls blown back from her flushed cheeks, and her eyes sparkling, and of that deep dark brown that has no counterpart in nature, nor raven's wing, or summer sky, to help the poets to a simile, and so has passed unscathed by the passionate tribe.

'That are's the Colonel's darter,' said Ben—a fact which I guessed many a second before. It was the first time that ever woman's beauty had quickened my heart, and in a moment I had wished Frank's father a life-time of afflictions for having separated me from so bewitching a companion. She had a basket to be taken to Plymouth, and as I sat on the side of the coach nearest her, she reached it to me. My eyes were fixed on her beautiful face, and I groped about for the charge like a blind man; of course I missed it, and it fell, scattering the ground with needle books, thimbles, scissors, and all the infinite armor of a lady's work box. She looked half vexed, half amused, at my awkwardness, and abashed for the first time in my life, I leaped to the ground to repair the fault. The articles were gathered too quickly for me to summon enough of my scattered wits to say any thing pretty to her dark eyes, but one little spool was so considerate as to roll apart from the rest, and it being the last of the group, our hands met upon it. Thrilled by the touch, I looked up into her eyes, as, for a moment, they were turned towards mine. Kind thoughts travel quick between young hearts, and, though she turned hastily away, I saw a smile dimple her flushed cheek. The next instant she was gone. The victor had fled, and the vanquished held the field.

The next morning the wind was in the south, and, sportsmen like, I rose before the day. But clouded skies had lost their charm. There had been anarchy in my dreams and a revolution in my brain. King Nimrod had abdicated, and Cupid, the sans culotte, had assumed the directorate. I picked a flint and sent my teeth. I snooded a book and caught my thumb. I put on my hunting toggery, and put it off again, and went back to my bed, and lay, half dreaming, half thinking of cottages in the green wood, and Kate Russell in muslin, of palaces in the city and Kate Russell in satin, of altars and flames, arrows and rings; till, at the sound of a bell, I rose up, determined to leave birds to their boughs and fishes to their brooks, and to look on Kate Russell again with old speed.

Now there would have been nothing improper in my walking over to the Colonel's, and introducing myself like a gentleman. But a round about way I naturally took. I knew that Frank had warned the Colonel of our coming, and I trusted that his friendship had painted me in winning colors. I had brought with me, for evening reading, the first edition of the 'Lady of the Lake,' then fresh from the press; and, having inscribed on the blank page, 'Kate Russell, from her cousin Frank,' in Frank's own sprawling hand, I made a dash for the camp. Fortune was in love with me, and I met Kate where we had parted. I introduced myself, saying that I came with better auspices than before, for I brought with me a gift from her cousin, which he had charged me to deliver immediately.

'He could not have sent a letter of introduction more fairly writ,' said she, 'and I have been longing for this book for weeks. But how did Frank ever dream of doing so pretty a thing?'

I blushed at my poor trick. 'Perhaps Frank's friends are blessed with a better taste,' continued she. 'But pardon me for detaining you here. The minstrel makes me forget all courtesy. You must let me lead you to the house. My father will be most happy to welcome a friend of our dear cousin to the Old Colony.'

At the house I found Colonel Russell, who greeted me with that warm, yet stately courtesy which has so poor a substitute, either in the prim coldness, or the blunt familiarity of our parvenus—a courtesy in whose presence neither rudeness nor diffidence could exist—a courtesy which both conferred and commanded respect. The old lady was one of those who never lose the kindness or vivacity of youth; one of Coleridge's dear old souls; and, to all, that I was the friend of their relative, seemed sufficient reason for the warmest welcome.

The Colonel reproached me for not coming directly to his house, and nothing would atone for the fault but that my trunk should forthwith be brought, and I become one of the household.

Thus, kind reader, thou hast the beginning and end of my wooing. How it sped and how much the tale of Malcom and Ellen had to do with opening Kate's heart, and how, when, or where, the sweet confession was tempted from her ripe lips, are secrets not to be told, even to thee. Yet let me warn thee fair one, if thou would'st not easily be won, to beware how, at twilight, in the listening woods, thou hearest that tale from a young man's lips, or flee, ere 'with deep and low and pleading tone,' he reads—

"His chain of gold the king unstrung—
The links o'er Malcom's neck he flung;
Then gently drew the glittering band,
And laid the clasp on Ellen's hand."

If he be of mortal mould, he cannot but press thy hand somewhat meaningfully, and as he closes the book, and the same thoughts will be in both your hearts, and thou wilt find it hard to say to him, 'Nay.'

Two months had passed over me miserably, and I had heard no word of Kate. I had tried to write to her, but my heart had failed me, and, at length, I had taken philosophy to my bosom, and comforted myself with wise saws, and laid an embargo on all thoughts of love. It was the day before Christmas, and I sat drowning my sorrows in the bowl of my meerschaum, when Frank Russell burst into my room.

'What makest thou here from Gotham, Francisco?'

'Much good it does, Harry, to send you to a pretty girl—that yellow amber pleases you more than the reddest lips in the Bay State. I meant for you to marry Kate Russell, and here you sit, puffing at your confounded Turk's head; and because you are a laggard at wooing, Kate must be sacrificed to a noodle.'

'Not to be married!' said I, with a vigorous puff.

'Something very like it, or there's no meaning in white ribbons—and to-morrow night, too. But what are you blushing at, man? That's a new trick you've learned. Zounds, but you are in love with her. Why didn't you tell her so? A girl that would marry Bill Jones at a fortnight's notice, would jump like a trout at a comely fellow like you. Was your modesty your bane, or didn't the old gentleman take to you or did you shoot her chickens? Come confess.'

But confess I would not. Much as I needed counsel, I knew that Frank was to be trusted with nothing less secret than an advertisement. He urged me to go to Plymouth with him in the morning, and willing to give up any thing that I might be left alone, I consented.

Little pleasure was there in my lonely thoughts. I tried to find comfort in reflecting, how unworthy Kate must be of my love, if so soon, she could take another to her heart. But it was all in vain; that sweet face would still come back before me, laden with love as of old; those large eyes, dim with unshed tears, as at our cruel parting, haunted my memory; and then I thought how strangely anger moves a proud woman—how willingly she gives up all hopes of happiness, rather than seem to yield to one who has slighted her love. I could not but suspect that it was for my sorrow, not for her own joy, that Kate had sought these new bonds.

Perplexed and bewildered, I hastened into the street. Led by instinct rather than reason, my steps turned towards the stage office. The evening coach was about starting, and my old acquaintance, Ben, was on the box. With no purpose, except to be near her, I jumped up beside him. He saw that I was in trouble, and, with the tact of true kindness, said not a word. For an hour we rode in silence. At length Ben's patience began to totter on its throne, and he turned to me with the polite inquiry, 'Lost your grandmother, squire? The cold winter air, and the sensation of emotion somewhat aroused me, and I tried to talk as usual. Ben, doubtless, suspected the cause of my trouble, and in a moment he remarked:—

'We've got the chap inside 'ats going to hev the Colonel's darter—likely looking feller, he is, tu.'

He had led up to my trumps. A lawyer could not more cunningly have caught the train of a witness's thoughts. The confidence I had refused to my best friend, I gave, without reserve, to one whom I had seen but once before in my life. In a few words, I told him my whole story.

'Wall, that's bad,' said Ben, 'tu develish bad. The feller isn't much arter all. If you'd stuck to the road you'd a come in fast, but you're distanced now, any way. What d'ye mean to do? I'm too heavy for a capsze, you know. I'll try to leave the chap on the road, if that'll accommodate.'

'Do it, Ben,' said I, vainly endeavoring to grasp his immense hand, 'and I'll make your fortune.'

'Wall, I must do my dooty; but, if Jones does git out, my stage won't be kept waiting all day for him, that's sartin.'

The possibility of anticipating my rival, made me as delirious with hope, as before. I had been stupid with despair. A thousand wild plans rushed to my thoughts, and each seemed certain of success. A thousand moving phrases of love and repentance seemed written in light before my eyes. But they fled as suddenly as they came, when I reflected how little promise there was, that Kate, angered, slighted, and apparently forgotten, would take me back to her heart,—would abandon her new love for my angry jealousy. I had just enough reason within my control, to enable me to suspect that I was making a fool of myself.

But, even in my despondency, I could not resist being amused at the pertinacity with which Ben drove up to every tavern within miles of his route, and by his 'five minutes here, gentlemen,' and now and then a 'best o'liquor,' tried to bribe Mr. Jones to rest his foot once more on solid earth. But Mr. Jones was not to be moved. He was a fixture. An old traveler would sometimes put out his head to suggest that we were on a new road, but Ben's answer was ready: 'We always goes round here Wednesday,' checked the remonstrance.

Little impression as these endeavors made on Mr. Jones, Ben was, at last, evercome by them. Every descent added to our load at least one glass of brandy, not much affected by the few drops of water, which, 'for the looks of the thing,' as he said, he scornfully dashed at it. The frequency of his libations would have been a statistic to the Washingtonians, if Washingtonians there had been in those days.

He afterwards informed me that he meant to get drunk, and leave me to do as I pleased with the stage, as he knew that his 'bosses' would sooner pardon that than any apparently intentional neglect of duty. I somewhat suspect that Ben was at all times easy of conviction; as to the propriety of taking another glass; but, if it was really his purpose to get eminently fuddled, seldom have human plans met with so perfect a success. After fortune had saved us from many an imminent danger, sleep 'wrapped him about like a cloak,' and I assumed his office, with a determination to carry out his plans that might have been an example to Mr. Tyler.

Our delays had consumed some hours, and it was now quite dark. I knew that Mr. Jones could see nothing from his position, and I made up my mind that he should go to Plymouth. Once, only, he gave signs of vigilance by putting out his head and bidding the driver stop at Col. Russell's. 'Indeed will I, quo' Findlay.'

From my rides and walks with Kate, I knew every inch of the road for miles. In a Christian spirit, I drove slowly and steadily, in order that Mr. Jones might be able to indulge any inclination he might feel for repose. It was eight o'clock when we reached the house.

Through the bare branches of the elms, I could see the lighted windows, and especially I noticed one candle burning above the hall, where it had doubtless been placed at sunset, to marshal Mr. Jones the way that he was not going, with my permission. After some tugging I aroused Ben's hands to their accustomed office, and whispering 'Go ahead,' in his drowsy ear, I jumped to the ground.

The blood rushed to my heart with a thrill of delight, as I heard the horses' hoofs clatter over the frozen road. The prize was before me, and considering the situation of my rivals neck, the odds were scarcely against me. I hastened to the house and into the room where I saw the lights. I had thought to speak quickly and to the purpose, but Kate who had doubtless risen to welcome her other lover, met me at the door, and her look changed so suddenly to cold, surprised anger, that my heart fell and my hopes fled in an instant. I could not utter a word—not a stammer came to my relief.

Through piles of silks and laces, and garments known and unknown, I discerned Mrs. Russell. Her favor I had already won by a new recipe for jam, and she had the grace to offer me a seat and inquire about my health. On my replying that I was much fatigued by my stage ride, she asked:—

'Was not Mr. Jones with you, in the stage? We have been expecting him for hours.'

A martyr to truth, I answered that he was but had gone to Plymouth.

I glanced at Kate, who was busily striving to hide a crimson ribbon in white roses. I could see that her hands trembled, and her cheek was thin and pale. Gladly would I have argued that our separation had preyed upon her health, as it had upon mine, but that chilling look of hers forbade. At length I ventured to ask her if she was well.

'Yes, sir, thank you.'

Her pets all in good condition.

'All well, sir, thank you?'

Nothing but the requisite monosyllables.

After an awkward silence, I came nearer to my point, by asking—

'May I hope that Miss Russell has forgiven my petulance?'

For a moment she fixed upon me her brown eyes, as if to measure how much my words meant, then quietly looked down and held her peace.

My courage that had ebbed so quickly began to flow again.

'May I speak a word with you in private, Kate?' I said.

Her mother rose. The good old lady evidently meditated a sally through the outward adornments, behind which she was so closely beleaguered, as a garrison behind Gen. Pillow's entrenchments.

'Sit still, ma,' said Kate, and then with a demure voice, but a twinkle of exquisite womanly malice in her eye!

'I have so much to think of now, that you must excuse me. Perhaps tomorrow or the next day, I shall be more capable of holding council with you.'

This was too much—I was angry myself now, and I rose to go. As I opened the door the same voice saluted me that had bid me stop at the Colonel's, I felt the absurdity of going off so manifestly shorn, and looking again at Kate, I saw a tear nestling in her eyelid.

Clearing two dresses at a jump, I kissed her as of old, and whispered, 'I love you dearly, Kate—will you forgive me?'

For a moment she hid her face upon my breast, then turned it towards mine—and our spirits rushed together at the meeting of the lips.

Mr. Jones, who had entered the room in time to be a spectator of this pleasing scene, made a desperate attempt at a look of lofty scorn—an attempt which would, doubtless, have been more successful, had the ice been stronger, or the water shallower, of the brook into which Ben upset him, and then departed to his ledger and his money making.

Frank attired me in his Broadway garments. The wedding was not deferred, and Kate and I have not quarrelled since.

My tale has its moral: a man should go early to his own wedding.

VERA CRUZ IN FORMER DAYS. Vera Cruz is the great commercial port of Mexico. In former days, under the Spanish crown, its trade was immense. It appears that the exports from Vera Cruz in the year 1817, amounted to a total of $46,774,210, of which $21,774,540 were by individuals, and $25,000,000 by the government authorities, and the coinage for the same year amounted to the enormous sum of $29,000,000.

The same year there were on the road between Mexico and Vera Cruz, the vast number of fifty-four thousand mules engaged in the transport of different products of the country, of which specie formed the principle item. To Havana alone twenty-seven thousand barrels of Mexican ground flour found its way, and was there used in preference to that received from the mother country, and it appears that, had not the course of trade been changed by the troubles of the two nations, that Cuba, to within the last two years, would have drawn her main supply of breadstuffs from Vera Cruz.

The imports of 1810 amounted to the value of $20,420,506, and the exports to $25,277,533. This trade, exclusive of government vessels, was carried on in the arrivals of two hundred and one square rigged craft, and in the clearances of two hundred and twenty-nine of the same.

Such, then, was La Vera Cruz in 1810.

WITTY, IF NOT ALL TRUE. A friend at our elbow sucks to it that the recluses from Westmoreland are the same tally sticks that were sent in 1844, with only some verbal alterations. In Tioga they use a pine stick. On one side they put an owl for 'Democrat,' and on the other a coon for 'Whig,' and as every elector comes with a jackknife, he notches knowingly on the side he wants to vote. In most parts of Berks county they use beans. The small white are the whigs; the speckled, green, white, and yellow are for the Democrats; and black beans are allowed to the Abolitionists. After they are counted, the beans are put back and remain for the next election for Governor. Then as a Democrat or Whig dies, they take one out; or one comes of age they put one in. They have one good rule there, which might be adopted elsewhere to advantage; they never allow a man to vote until he is married. This is under the supposition that he has little discretion until he gets it from his wife. By the same process of reasoning, they allow him to vote as soon as he has a wife, the fact of his marrying being taken as evidence that he has come to the use, if not years, of discretion. A minor marrying there is called 'taking the beans.' But Berks, like Saxon England, has common law usages peculiar to only certain districts.—N. Y. paper.

THINK. Some people never think—fools that they are. Thought is the noblest exercise of the mind. Without thought man is a cypher. No man has an opinion of his own without thought. He merely repeats the words of others. When you hear a person contradicting another, and declaring his words false, you may generally set him down as one who never thinks.

DEACONESSES. The Protestants of France are trying to establish an order of female religious laborers, under the title of Deaconesses, to be, according to appearance, a kind of Protestant counterpart of those orders of nuns and sisters, and other female celibates, which the Church of Rome has found so convenient.

RESPECT FOR THE DEAD. It is customary, even at the present day, in some parts of Northumberland, England, to place a pewter plate, containing salt, upon the corpse of a deceased person. A candle, too, as in catholic countries is sometimes added. Salt is the emblem of eternity and immortality; it is not liable to decay nor putrefaction itself, and it moreover preserves things that are seasoned with it. The candle was an Egyptian symbol, or hieroglyphic of life, and its use upon the remains of the departed, was thus considered to be expressive of an ardent wish that his existence had been prolonged.

TOWNS MEETING. The following is the result of the balloting for Representative, in this town on Monday last:

Whole number of ballots,	550
Necessary for a choice,	276
Israel W. Munroe, (whig)	253
William S. Morton, (dem.)	250
George Clapp, (liberty.)	37

ALMOST A FIRE. Between last Saturday evening and Monday morning, the Town House in this place, took fire in the Selectmen's Room. The wooden spitoon had been foolishly filled with saw dust, into which it is presumed fire must have been accidentally placed. The box was nearly consumed, a large place burnt in the floor, and from some unaccountable cause the fire was extinguished before any other damage was done to the building.

ROBERT. The counting-room of Charles R. Mitchell, near the Depot, in this town, was entered by rogues last Saturday evening. The same evening, an attempt was made to enter the Depot but from some cause the design was frustrated.

SELECT SCHOOL. Rev. A. B. Wheeler proposes opening a Select School in this place. For terms, see advertisement.

CLOTHING. The attention of all in want of articles in the clothing line is invited to the advertisement of the Messrs. Savil. Their "Rough and Ready Hall" is quite celebrated. Call and see the place.

FROM EUROPE. The royal mail steamship Acadia arrived at Boston on Saturday afternoon last, bringing eleven days later news from Liverpool.

The commercial distress continues. Quite a number of failures have taken place among merchants, bankers and manufacturers in different parts of Europe. The state of the markets was dull and gloomy.

The Queen had issued a proclamation for calling Parliament together on the 18th inst.

NEW YORK MIRROR. The weekly Mirror and Literary Gazette is now published in folio form. It is a large and handsome sheet, well filled with miscellany, news, and other useful matter. Terms, two dollars per year; two copies for three dollars, four copies for five dollars, and ten copies for ten dollars. Published by Hiram Fuller.

FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS. We have received the great holiday sheet pictorial Brother Jonathan, published by Wilson & Co., New York. It is full of large and finely executed engravings, illustrating subjects and readings suitable for a Christmas festsive.

The stupendous sheet of paper on which it is printed is no less than five and a half feet long! Price 12 1-2 cents, or ten for one dollar.

UNITED STATES SENATORS. Messrs. John M. Berrien and William C. Dawson have been chosen by the Legislature of Georgia, Senators in Congress, the former from the conclusion of his present term and the latter in place of Mr. Colquitt, whose term expires in 1849.

THE NEW YORK "ISLAND CITY." This popular journal furnishes its usual quantity of spiritedly written editorials, romances, anecdotes, etc. As a family paper it has no superior, and the price at which it is furnished, three cents per copy, should give it an immense circulation.

BRIGHTON MARKET. A proposition has been put on foot to change the market day at Brighton from Monday to Wednesday; so as to do away with the interference with the Sabbath, which the present arrangement involves. It is proposed that the change take place at the beginning of the new year.

WHAT CONSTITUTES MARRIAGE. A gentleman of property on Long Island, persuaded a young girl to live with him after verbally marrying her, which was overheard by the mother of the girl. She lived with him and became a mother, but the child was not born until the decease of its father. The girl then brought an action for the property of her husband, as she considered him, and the jury gave a verdict in her favor, thus sustaining the validity of such a marriage. The property in dispute was about twelve thousand dollars.

THANKSGIVING. If eating, drinking, and other laborious exercises are any sign, this was a very thankful nation last Thursday. The good old custom of our fathers seems to be somewhat perverted from its original uses.

THREADED BANK NOTES. A firm of bank note paper manufacturers, in Dalton, (Mass.) have invented a very simple and efficient method of preserving the denomination of bank bills from alteration, by threads of silk arranged in parallel lines, lengthwise of the notes, embodied in the paper during its manufacture. A one dollar bill has one thread, and one is added for each denomination up to five dollars, a ten dollar bill has six threads, another is added for twenty, fifty, one hundred, five hundred, and one thousand; the last having eleven threads. It must be very difficult, if not impossible, to insert another thread without its being detected, and the threaded paper will probably come into general use.

AN IMPROVEMENT. An extensive machine shop at Ballard Vale, near Andover, in this State, is lighted with gas, manufactured on the spot from coarse grease, etc. The Bay State Mills, in Lawrence, are to be similarly lighted. It is said to be economical, besides being brilliant and beautiful.

REPRESENTATIVE ELECTIONS. On Monday last, elections were held in several towns in this county where no choice of representatives was effected on the 8th instant. There was no choice in this town. In Roxbury, Messrs. Edward Turner and Francis Hilliard, whigs, were chosen.

In Dorchester, William Pierce and Edward H. Ruggles, whigs, were elected.

In Dedham, Ezra Wilkinson, democrat, was chosen on the second ballot.

In Medway, Nathan Jones, dem., was elected.

In Medfield, Jonathan P. Bishop, dem.

The Aurora's bright smiling sun,
Bedeck'd and clothed the bower,
And gentle dews in brilliant hues,
That reared a lovely flower.

Then nurtured by the blithesome day
Its fragrance rich did yield;
In health it grew, with beauty too,
And sweetness for its shield.

But ah! alas! the chilly blast,
Propelled by deadly power,
The lovely shoot tore from its root,
And snatched it from the bower.

But still hope glimmers here below,
And dazles from above;
The plant still blooms beyond the tomb,
Cherished by Jesus' love.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk.

THE subscribers respectfully represent that common convenience and necessity require that a new highway be laid out, crossing highway be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, leading from the wharves and grist-mill of Calvin White & Co. to a point on Commercial Street, in the town of Braintree, in said County, near the store of Capt. Edward Pray, and that said proposed new highway or existing highway passes through land of said Calvin White & Co., George Pray, Timothy Bagley, and Mary Vinton.

Also—That common convenience and necessity require that the highway from a point near the store of Benjamin Newcomb, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike, called Howard Street, to a point in said street near the house of Nathaniel Hayward, in said town of Braintree, be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, and that said street passes through land of Jonathan Hayward and others.

Also—That a new highway in said town of Braintree, commencing at a point in a new highway on the north side of the mill pond of Calvin White & Co., and running across the same above the mill dam thereof, and south of the School house to a point near the house of Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold, is required by common convenience and necessity, and that the same will pass through land of Calvin White, Calvin White & Co., Caleb Stearns, Esq., Hon. Benjamin V. French, Elihu Hunt's heirs, Elihu White's heirs, the East School District, Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold.

They therefore pray that your Honorable Board would order a view of the premises, and proceed to locate such new highways and cause such alterations and specific repairs to be made in existing highways as in you shall seem meet and proper. As in duty bound will ever pray.

JUDAH LORING and 69 others.

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with Dr. Dudley of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRADIN, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are inseparable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

Clothing! Clothing!!

Particular Notice.

WE wish to have it distinctly understood, notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, (by those interested,) that

THE EXPERIMENT OF SELLING

AT
EXTREMELY LOW PRICES,
IS STILL IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION AT THE CELEBRATED

ROUGH AND READY HALL,

Where can be found the largest and best selected Stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

Suitable for the present and coming season, all of which will be sold at the usual low prices for which

ROUGH & READY HALL IS SO JUSTLY CELEBRATED.

N.B. We would also say that ALL ARTICLES which are sold at this establishment are what some of our neighbors would facetiously call

SLOP MADE,

having the impression, we suppose, from the IMMENSE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES between our establishment and their own, that our Clothing could not be well got up at the extremely low price we sell for.

We would merely say as regards STYLE, FIT and WORKMANSHIP, all Clothing that is sold at

ROUGH & READY HALL,

WILL COMPARE TO ADVANTAGE with any articles manufactured as custom work, so called, in Town. Quincy, Nov. 27. if

MOVE ON.

The march of life should never stay—
All things should onward tend;
Man should not clog progression's way,
But strive to move and mend.
The waters move in depths of ocean,
The streams along the dikes;
And rivulets, with onward motion,
Through sweet and verdant dikes.

Move on!

The clouds move gently through the sky,
The earth rolls ever on,
Time swiftly in his course runs by,
And years pass, one by one.
Men, too, should strive to follow them,
In this their onward way,
Permitting naught the tide to stem,
But ever, day by day,

Move on!

Men may be wiser, if they strive—
More virtuous, if they will;
And who, within this world, would thrive,
Must aim at higher still.
Let priests stand firm by doctrines old,
The wise will pass them by;
Weak minds may cling with subtle hold,
But strong ones valiantly

Move on!

Statesmen in vain, of days gone by,
May prate that they were best;
Our goal must ever forward lie,
Progression gives us zest.
Our destiny is centered here,
Deluded by no crowd;
We know not terror, heed not fear,
But still, with greater speed,

Move on!

Like waters rolling to the ocean,
Down mountains piled on high—
Like clouds forever in commotion,
That move across the sky—
Will we forever onward press,
Thus fearless and free;
And deeming virtue happiness,
Our watchword ever be,

Move on!

OH! GIVE ME BACK MY HEART.
Oh! give me back my heart again;
It is not prized by thee,
Too well I know I love in vain,
Oh give it back to me.

I gave it thee—each wish, and thought
Is thine, yes, all thy own.
And yet the gift to thee is naught
Another shares thy love alone.

Oh yes return it! back again,
As thoughtless, happy, free,
Ere it had throbbled with ceaseless pain
Of hidden agony.

Yet what I ask, can never be,
I kneel to thee in vain—
For it will cling unchanged to thee,
Amid reproach, and shame.

Yes; I can bear neglect and wrong,
Decent, and perjured vows;
Thy smile of irony and scorn
Would add unnumbered woes.

But still unchanged I'll live for thee
Then keep this heart of mine—
Nay never return it back to me
It must be ever thine.

ANECDOTES.

A year or two ago, when the Miller fanaticism was at its height, an eccentric old gentleman was listening to the prophesying of a disciple and in his short bitter way asked: "Do you really think now, that the world is soon coming to an end?—Certainly I do." "And on the twenty-fifth of April?" "As much as I believe in my own existence." "And you really pretend to believe that there's to be a regular smash of the whole world?" "Yes sir." "Well, sir, I'm glad of it! I consider this experiment of Man a miserable failure; and the sooner the whole thing is broken up, the better!"

Some years ago, a justice, of great integrity, was called to jail to liberate a prisoner who had been incarcerated for debt. The law "enjoined" that, as the condition of his enlargement, he should give his "bible oath" that he was not worth five pounds.

"Well, Johnny," exclaimed the justice, "can you swear that you are not worth five pounds, and never will be?"

"Well, replied he in dunder vile, 'I can swear I am not worth five pounds.'"

"Well, well," replied the justice—"I can swear I am not worth five pounds."

A country surgeon, who was bald, was on a visit to a friend's house, whose servant wore a wig. After bantering him a considerable time, the doctor said, "You see how bald I am, and yet I do not wear a wig." To which the servant, looking seriously at the doctor, replied, "True, sir, but an empty barn requires no thatch."

Old parson Peters of Hebron, who was a good deal of a wag, once married a Mr. Partridge to a Miss Brace, the parents of the bride requested he would wind up the ceremony by a short prayer, which he did in the following words: "God bless this brace of partridges!"

A man very much intoxicated was sent to "darkness vile." "Why didn't you bail him out?" asked a bystander. "Bail him out?" exclaimed the other, "you couldn't pump him out!"

A rustic, who had never before tasted ice cream, was helped by a lady at an evening party to a plate of "unsuccesful figid milk," under its usual simple designation of "cream." "Your cream is very sweet," said he, "but simt' it a little tetchted with frost?"

A man who had set up business with a wheel barrow, was met by one who said—"Is that you, Tom? I thought you were gone out of town."

"That's true," was the answer; "you see I have gone to Wheeling."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the far famed Bogle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern Building, Quincy.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,

50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the New England BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforementioned Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.

EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to the use of these pills: Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Constipation, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Headache, Hysteria, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all Chronic complaints, the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box. The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PAIN-EXPELLER.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND.

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

MISCELLANY.

From the Union Magazine.

COUSIN PHIL'S CONFESSIONS.

'You are always raving about beauty; always bewildered with some new specimen of female excellence; and yet, cousin Phil, I know of nobody so likely as yourself to realize Benedict's idea of a bachelor of threescore.'

'I am only more disinterested than most men. I am an amateur, who, from a pure love of the beautiful, cultivates the taste which he is always willing to use in behalf of his friends; not a selfish virtuoso, who is never content unless he can possess himself of the precious gem he admires.'

'You are fond of a metaphysical argument, but in this case the figure is not a true symbol of the fact.'

'Like a true woman, dear coz, you fancy that I bear a cherished grief within my bosom—that some spectre of the past glides through the desolate chambers of my heart; is it not so?'

'I must confess to some such idea, as the only means of accounting for your present celibacy.'

'Then you believe all men have their one intense, absorbing love-dream.'

'I believe every one has his own hour of romance.'

'But there are only very few who find that hour lending its coloring to their whole life. If the real history of hearts were known, we should quite as often find people rendered unhappy by a want of decision and concentration as by any malign combination of the fates. A woman is necessarily the victim, or at least the creature of circumstances; but a man can almost always determine his own fortunes. With energy, decision, a strong will, and ordinary mental capacities, he may shape out his destiny almost as he will, even in love matters.'

'You are condemning yourself, Phil; if you believe this, why are you still a bachelor?'

'I've been arguing from my own consciousness, coz; all my disappointments have grown out of my want of decision. Instead of one absorbing passion, I have had dozens of fancies; and a perfect gallery of portraits occupies the place in my memory, which you suppose appropriated to one sacred image.'

'Then you have been in reality the flirt you are sometimes styled.'

'Never in reality, but often in appearance. I used to fall in love most desperately, and after I was fairly entangled, I would begin to reflect upon the prudence of my choice. I was impulsive by nature, and calculating from education. My feelings generally, led me headlong into a scrape, and then caution would come, advising me to flounder out of it.'

'I should like to look into your gallery of portraits.'

'Which would you rather see, the oldest or the newest series?'

'Those that are the most elaborately painted by memory, for they will be portraits of the best beloved.'

'Then will we pass over the faded sketches of my youthful dreams; and without bestowing a look upon the glaring colors of my modern paintings, I will bring before you my choicest cabinet picture.'

'To prove the truth of my theory, cousin Phil, that all men have one peculiar star?'

'No; to attest the truth of mine, that if men will grasp at the moon, they may find themselves between the horns of a dilemma.'

'You know, I began life some twenty years earlier than yourself, and while you were a schoolgirl, I was making the tour of Europe. The sort of dreamlike existence I led in southern Europe, exactly suited my indolent temper. In America, where there is so much room for individuality of character, it is rather disgraceful to suffer one's self to be led; but in Italy, I had but to give myself up to the guidance of a pretty woman or a good natured friend, and my affairs were all arranged without costing me a thought. Of course, when I came home, I was constantly annoyed by the terrible activity of American life. There was no end to the advices of my friends, and the only way I could rid myself of the annoyance, was to follow the advice of none. So I took lodgings at a hotel; left my money safely invested as my careful father had directed, bought no equipage, and sought for no wife.'

'It was my custom to wander off alone every summer with my gun and fishing tackle. During one of these rambling excursions I found myself at the little village of Leighton. A day's unsuccessful trout-fishing had led me in that discontented mood, when a man like any society better than his own, and on my way to my temporary home, I fortunately encountered the clergyman. Visitors were so seldom seen in this little out of the way village, that the name of stranger had not ceased to be a claim to civility and hospitality. Mr. F. addressed me courteously, but unceremoniously, and in a few minutes we were the best friends in the world. He invited me to his house, and I gladly accepted his kindness, for I anticipated no small amusement from a study of the old man's eccentricities. But I was certainly not prepared for all I was destined to find in that humble abode.'

'His family consisted of one daughter, and an old woman, half domestic, half friend, who had been the nurse of Geraldine's infancy, as well as house-keeper for her widowed father. It was the dim twilight of a summer's evening when I first heard the sound of Geraldine's voice. She seemed to be reading, but was in fact reciting passages from Childe Harold. I never heard such a voice in my life. Deep, rich, yet perfectly flexible; at one moment sighing forth the words of tender regret in sounds of silvery sweetness, then uttering the language of stern denunciation in the thrilling accents of true eloquence; and again giving out the poet's graphic descriptions, in tones that seemed to paint his scenes upon the air like tints.'

'Of all the fascinations which it has been my lot to encounter, there never was one half as powerful as the spell that girl soon wrought upon me. The beauty of her language; her vivid pictures of natural beauty; her graphic sketches of character; the rich coloring of romance and poetry which she infused into every subject; the infinite versatility of her mind; and its rapid transition from the most profound philosophy to the most girlish playfulness; all combined to produce an impression upon me, such as nothing else has ever done. Entirely unconscious of her own peculiar powers, she gave herself up to the pleasure of conversation, without ever thinking of display, and the abandon of manner with which she threw herself into the humor of those around her, gave her the charm of perpetual freshness.'

'But pray, cousin Phil, where had this paragon obtained all these perfections? Surely not in a country parsonage?'

'Precisely there, and nowhere else. Her mother was one of those delicate, poetic creatures that seem like human flowers, and die early from being planted in ungenial soil. From her she inherited the temperament of genius; while from her father she had derived the gift of high talent. With the classics she was as familiar as with her sampler.'

'Perhaps more so, for if the poor girl could read Greek, she probably did not know how to darn her stockings.'

'Pardon me, she was taught all kinds of feminine work by old Betty the house-keeper. Think of me, cousin, the tenant of the sweetest, tiniest, neatest apartments in a stone cottage, and this wonderfully gifted girl to awaken all that was good and pure in my spirit.'

'Of course you fell in love forthwith.'

'I did no such thing.'

'How could you escape it?'

'Don't you observe in my description of her fascinations, I have not mentioned her person?'

'She must have been a perfect Gorgon, if she failed to win you; was she old and hideous?'

'Geraldine was just nineteen; she had grey eyes of that undeniable hue which is sometimes as blue as summer skies, sometimes as black as night. Her brows were beautifully arched and delicately pencilled, and her long curved lashes gave that peculiar depth of shadow to her eyes which resemble nothing so much as a lake bordered with pendant willows. An aquiline nose, a wide mouth, well shaped however, and jewelled with splendid teeth, high cheek bones and hollow temples; displayed to singular disadvantage by the unbecoming manner in which she dressed her luxuriant brown hair—such was poor Geraldine's claims to feminine attraction. Her form was even more repellant to me than her face. She was thin even to emaciation, and her tall, angular figure, her bony shoulders, flat chest and long arms were perfectly shocking to all my ideas of beauty. Perhaps had I been at home long enough to have become reconciled to the fragile proportions of American loveliness I might have been less fastidious; but I was fresh from a land where the luxuriant form of the contadina is scarcely less graceful than the stately figure of the highborn dame, and a woman without roundness of contour seemed to me as hideous as a skeleton.'

'You could have forgiven her ugly face, but not her awkward figure; it appears to me you make nice distinctions.'

'She was not ungraceful, coz; you who know my extravagant admiration for beauty, will readily conceive why I did not fall in love with Geraldine. Yet she excited in me emotions I had never before experienced.'

'Are you sure you did not mistake your feelings?'

'When I look back now to that period of my heart's history, I am certain that I did love Geraldine. We do not know how much of the sensuous and the earthly mingles with our purest feelings. I had fancied that my ideal of woman was of the highest, holiest order; yet, when I was suffered to approach that ideal divested only of its lowest attributes, I shrunk from it, and sought not its attainment. For two months I was Geraldine's daily companion and however I might be in doubt respecting my own feelings, I could not be blind to her growing attachment for me. Perfectly truthful and confiding, yet with all a woman's delicacy of perception, she seemed to understand intuitively that it was on her account I had prolonged my stay, and she was grateful for my preference.'

'Stop a moment, cousin Phil; if Geraldine was as refined as you describe her, would she have taken such preference for granted, only because you choose to loiter away the summer in the country? Did you give her no other cause for this 'intuitive' belief in your liking?'

'You mean to bring me to confession, I see; well then, I did not mean to make love to her, but twilight, and moonlight, and the solitude of country rambles, are rather dangerous to prudent resolutions. I suppose I talked sentiment and while I was generalizing she was probably individualizing.'

'I see it all; you had a delightful sentimental flirtation, and talked of Platonic love, and quoted Moore's beautiful lines, which have bewildered the brains and hearts of so many high-toned girls.'

'What lines do you mean?'

'Oh, call it by some other name, For friendship is too cold,' &c.

'How do you know I did?'

'You forget that you were once on the verge of a similar flirtation with me, when I came home from school, brimful of romance, and with a spice of liking for my handsome cousin.'

'No more of that, cara mia, 'an' thou lovest me.' Since you can guess so acutely, I will spare you any further confessions, and go on with my story. Geraldine's conduct was perfectly simple and natural. She was morally certain that I loved her, and she did not wait for words ere she responded to it. It was late in the autumn before I could resolve to quit Leighton. Indeed, I began to feel very like a scoundrel; for I knew Geraldine had a right to expect an explanation from me, and I began to shrink from her calm, truthful eye. To get rid of my difficulty, I pretended to receive letters urging my immediate return to the city. Adroitly avoiding all opportunities of seeing her alone, I yet parted from her with so much genuine regret that a degree of tenderness was imparted to my manner sufficient to satisfy the pride of a far more exacting woman. The truth is, I acted like a fool or a rascal—perhaps both. I will not dwell on the memories that haunted me after my return. Geraldine had spoiled me for the society of the tame, flat, insipid girls one meets in the gay world. The lively seemed to me pert; the sensible were dull; the educated pedantic. Nothing satisfied my new fastidiousness.'

'Have you any idea of the revulsion of feeling which so often carries men into the wildest extremes? If not, I despair of making you understand how completely I became infatuated with a creature who was the very antipodes of Geraldine. Imagine a Juno-like figure, perfectly symmetrical, but almost colossal, a complexion of snowy whiteness, the most delicate peach bloom of cheek, lips like a pomegranate blossom, hair dropping in blond curls upon the most magnificent shoulders, eyes as blue as heaven, and you may have some faint idea of the superb Marian L. There was an air of delicious languor in her whole manner, which suited admirably with her style of beauty. She was like the poet's Odalique,

'Fat and lazy,

'But of a beauty that would set you crazy.'

'She talked very little; yet, even that little you wished unsaid, for she was so splendid in repose, and there was nothing in her words to compensate for the discomposure of her exquisite intolerance. She had a mesmerizing effect on me. I could sit near her for hours, saying nothing, hearing nothing but a few common-places, yet feeling in a perfect elysium of quiet bliss. After my excitement of heart and brain in the society of Geraldine, it was positive relief to dwell in this calm light of beauty. But neither of my charmers possessed the requisites for a wife. You would laugh at me if I were to relate all my mental conflicts at that time, and yet I really deserved compassion. As if to make matters worse, Geraldine arrived in the city. Memory was beginning to work her spell, and I was half inclined to forget her person in the recollection of her noble character and brilliant talents, when I received a note informing me of her arrival. I immediately called upon her. She was surrounded by a bevy of pretty and lively cousins, among whom her tall figure, her unbecoming style of dress, and a certain consciousness of country breeding, made her painfully conspicuous. But her brilliancy made me discontented with my magnificent beauty. I became perfectly miserable, so at length in a fit of desperation, I cut the knot I could not untie, and joined a party of friends who were starting for Europe. I parted from Marian with a sort of longing regret, such as we feel in abandoning a luxurious pillow on a winter morning; but I bade adieu to Geraldine with a sensation of shame and anguish that haunted me for months. There was a look of earnest, half-scornful enquiry in her deep eyes, which would not leave my memory.'

'And is that the end of your love-tale? Has no retribution fallen on you for your recreancy?'

'Can you ask the question, gentle coz? Am I not a lone and unanchored being, verging fast into the sea and yellow leaf, with a consciousness that I have outlived all capacity for loving, all capability of being loved?'

'But have you lost all trace of Marian and Geraldine?'

'By no means; you shall hear the finale of the affair. With that indecision that has always characterized me, I dawdled away ten years in Europe, and was pretty deep into the 'forties' before I returned to my native land. One only of my former acquaintances was left, and from him I learned the births, deaths and marriages that had occurred during my absence. Of Geraldine, I supposed he knew nothing, as she was not in fashionable society when I left the country; but Marian, he told me, had become the wife of a millionaire, a widower with six children, who having built a palace could also afford to purchase the superb statue to adorn it. I obtained her address, curious to see the effect of time on a creature so beautiful, and remembering that she must now be nearing that fatal 'thirty,' which ladies so much dread!

'One fine winter morning, I found myself in Mrs. —'s drawing room. I had taken a seat opposite a large mirror, and as I cast my eyes towards it, I saw a door opened behind me; so that, without turning my head, I could witness the lady's entrance. It was fortunate that I obtained my first glimpse of her in the mirror, or I should never have been able to conceal my amazement. Picture to yourself an enormously fat woman, with a face broad and colourless, her hair concealed beneath a French cap, all ribbon and lace, and her bulky form enveloped in a thing which you ladies call a 'wrapper.' To crown all, she had a decided halt in her gait, and as she moved towards me and I watched the alternate rising and sinking of that mass of flesh, I felt as if I was laboring under a species of nightmare!'

'I suppose I must allow a little for the exaggeration of your sudden disenchantment?'

'Not a whit; Marian had wedded a man as old as her father, his children were all older than herself, and as they soon married, she was saluted with the title of 'grandmamma' before she had reached her twenty fifth year! Soon after her marriage she had been thrown from her carriage and lamed for life, while her habitual inactivity had increased her natural tendency to obesity. She was too much of an invalid to mingle with society, and after that one, most interesting interview, I never saw her again.'

'But, what of Geraldine?'

'Ah! I see you want poetical justice; well, you shall have it. At one of Dr. Anson's brilliant soirees, I was attracted by the rich contour and fine shoulders of a stately woman, who stood at a little distance. Her face was turned from me, but her dress of black velvet fitted so beautifully to her fine form, her hair was braided with so much classic elegance around her well shaped head, and as she put up her hand to adjust a pearl comb, I noticed so superb an arm, that I instantly decided she must be some new beauty, who had risen during my absence. She was evidently the centre of attraction to some of the most eminent men in the room, and I unconsciously drew nearer to catch some of the brilliant sayings which she was flinging carelessly around. As soon as I came within sound of her voice I paused. There was no mistaking those tones; yet how could I believe my eyes? 'Would you like an introduction to Mrs. —?' she is decidedly our star, not of the season, for she has ruled for several seasons.' It was Dr. Anson who spoke, and, mechanically taking his arm in another moment I stood face to face with Geraldine.'

'It seems to me, cousin Phil, that your transformations savor of fairy land; what could have wrought such a change in your blue bell?'

'Happiness and a change of position. Geraldine had been one of those women whose physical development is far slower than their intellectual. She was like an overgrown school girl, when I knew her, and it was an even chance whether she would expand into a superb woman, or wilt into a stiff angularity of old maidism. The mistake I made was in not perceiving that her want of beauty was in fact want of development. She had married a lawyer of eminence and fortune who idolized his brilliant wife. Her ready tact soon supplied her ignorance of conventionalisms, her good taste soon modified her toilet, and when I met her she was universally acknowledged to be one of the most attractive women in society.'

'Had she forgotten you?'

'No; but she had learned to despise me. I felt myself withering beneath her calm, clear eyes, and when I ventured upon a reminiscence of former days, she managed to make me feel unutterably small, without exposing me to others. She was conscious of her superiority, and while she was willing to make me aware of it, yet with womanly gentleness she forbore to repeat the stroke. 'She is still one of the most admired of her sex, and we occasionally meet in society, where I appear only an unquiet spectre, haunting the scenes of past enjoyment, while she is one of the most brilliant ornaments. Call me selfish, frivolous, or what you will, cousin, yet if all hearts were mapped out before you, there would be found many a ruined city of Hope, which owes its desolation less to the earthquake of the passions, than to the encroaching sands of worldliness.'

EMPLOYMENT OF EVENINGS. It is a question of great importance, especially to young men, how you spend your evenings. If you have no regular employment, no fixed pursuits to engross your attention, and operate as stimulus to the mind when unemployed, you must of necessity have many leisure and unoccupied hours; intervals when time will hang heavily on your hands, and suggest the necessity of some means to relieve it of its weight. The very time which is dissipated in idleness, would, if devoted to study, enable many a young man to obtain eminence and distinction in some useful art.

A sexton's son became an astronomer by devoting a few hours every evening to the study of the stars, after ringing the bell for nine o'clock. Gifford was, in early life, an apprentice to a shoemaker, and spent his leisure hours in study. His destitution was such, that he was compelled to work out his problems on a smooth piece of leather with a blunted awl. David Rittenhouse was a plough boy, and covered his plough beam and fences with his juvenile calculations. James Fergusson was a shepherd's boy, and learned to read and write, while watching his flocks in the field by night and with no other light than the moon and stars.

IMPORTANCE OF TRIFLES. Some persons frequently say, when requested to do a thing, that it is only a trifle, and therefore unimportant; but it should be remembered that the world is made up of trifles. We should not neglect little things, neither should we commit small sins; for they may lead to great crimes. There is a beneficial moral in the following anecdote: A friend called upon Michael Angelo, who was finishing a statue. Sometime afterwards he called again; the sculptor was still at his work. His friend, looking at the figure, exclaimed, 'You have been idle since I saw you last.' 'By no means,' replied the sculptor, 'I have retouched this part, and polished that; I have softened this feature, and brought out this muscle; I have given more expression to this lip, and more energy to that limb.' 'Well, well,' said his friend, 'but all these are trifles.' 'It may be so,' replied Angelo, 'but recollect that trifles make perfection, and that perfection is no trifle!'

We remember reading of a criminal who was about to be executed. When standing at the foot of the gallows he declared that the first crime which he committed was to steal an egg, and from that trifling beginning he had gone on until he had committed the crime for which he was then about to be executed. Do not think lightly of trifles.—Prisoner's Friend.

SCOLDING. A great deal of injury is done to children by their parents' scolding. Many children have been nearly or quite ruined by it, and often driven from home, to become vagabonds and wanderers, by scolding. It sours your temper, provided it is sweet, which is a question; if you scold, the more you will have to scold, and because you have become crosser, and your children likewise. Depend upon it, they cannot love you as well after you have berated them, as they did before. You may approach them with firmness and decision, you may punish them with severity adequate to the nature of their offences, and they will feel the justice of your conduct and love you notwithstanding all. But they hate scolding. It stirs up bad blood, while it discloses your weakness and lowers you in their estimation. Especially at night, when they are about to retire, their hearts should be melted and moulded with voices of kindness, that they may go to their slumbers with thoughts of love stealing around their souls and whispering peace.

REPUTATION. Those who have escaped crime may bless their stars, and not themselves that they are spotless. We often take that to be virtue which is only the effect of circumstances, and it is no merit to be good when there is no opportunity of being bad. Remember that virtue should be estimated not by its duration, but by the temptations it has resisted. Reputation is a bright, but bitter gem; while sparkling on the forehead, it dazzles all eyes with its glittering radiance; but if roughly handled, shows its fragile nature, and shivers almost at the first touch.

PATENTS. Inventors in the United States are on a much better footing in regard to the facilities for securing the patent rights of their discoveries than in Great Britain. For instance, the cost of taking out a patent here, exclusive of the expense of the model, is about forty dollars. On the other hand, the securing of a patent for England alone is about $525; if Scotland is included, there is an additional cost of nearly $400; and if Ireland, upwards of $600 more.

Old Fritz, of Prussia, used to express himself thus about duelling: I permit my subjects to fight duels, but on this express condition, that unless one be killed, I will invariably shoot both combatants.

PIGEON SHOOT.

MR. EDITOR—We take this opportunity to notice an affair which took place last week at Cambridge, and which reflected brilliant honor upon one of our sharpshooters.

Some time since, an assertion was publicly made by some sportsmen of Boston, that they could produce a man who would "beat any one else in the State, in shooting pigeons on the wing." One of the Quincy "boys," present at the time, who never allows himself to be "bluffed," accepted a bet of one hundred dollars, and called upon his friend, Mr. GEORGE CURTIS, to do the shooting. The far-famed sportsman, Col. Gerrey, was his antagonist. The one who dropt dead the greatest number of birds within the circle of fifty yards, was proclaimed the "best shot."

Mr. Curtis made the first shots, twenty five in number, each time bringing his gun from his side. With these shots he killed seventeen birds, twelve of which fell within the circle. The Colonel shot next, and killed, but twelve, seven of which dropt within the circle, and at each shot he had his piece at his shoulder, levelled at the box, as the birds were unengaged. Mr. Curtis, of course, came off champion of the day by five shots the best. We are happy to add, that the affair was conducted in the most gentlemanly manner by both parties, and all seemed delighted with the beautiful exhibition of skill by the victor. The Quincy boys can't easily be beaten, and they will endeavor to be prepared when they shall again be invited to take the "pigeon ring" with the Colonel.

The party here take the occasion to offer their sincere thanks to the noble hearted and hospitable proprietor of the Hancock House, by whom they were so cordially received, and beg leave to say, that all parties can there be accommodated in the true French style.

TEMPERANCE MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Washington Total Abstinence Society of Quincy, for the choice of Officers and other business, was held in the Lyceum Room, on Monday evening, 29th ult. The following gentlemen were chosen officers of the Society for the ensuing year: President—Urbanus Cudworth.

Vice Presidents—Seth Adams and George Follet.
Treasurer—Josiah Adams.
Corresponding Secretary—Seth Adams.
Recording Secretary—Theodore Kellogg.
Directors—Dea. George Baxter, Ebenezer N. Field, Thomas Brooks, Dea. Elijah Baxter, Ebenezer Ford, Nathan Ames, William R. Brown, George W. Barrett, James M. Wade, George Basley, John Page.

On motion of Mr. J. Baxter, voted that a list of the officers be published in the Quincy Patriot.

T. KELLOGG, Secretary.

DENTISTRY. The progress of the Dental Art for the last few years, in regard to the useful as well as the ornamental, has been greater than most any of the mechanical professions. People now-a-days not only have new teeth made and nicely fitted to their mouths, but in some instances have parts of jaws supplied—and also the roof of the mouth, palate, etc. whether the time will ever arrive when an artificial tongue can be made to supply the place of a worn out one by much usage, the future can only make known. We have lately seen a set of upper teeth manufactured for a lady of this town at the establishment of Drs. Grandin, Dudley & Blake, No. 238 Washington St., Boston, which for beauty of finish, neatness of soldering, and firm work, are equal to any specimens we have ever seen. The job, we are informed, was an exceedingly difficult one; for the natural teeth had so far decayed as to leave a passage through the jaw to the nose. This cavity has been covered up by the gold plate, nicely fitted, and the whole appearance and utility of the teeth are as good as is possible for art to compete with nature. We are always willing to bear testimony to the successful operation of any ingenious expedient for the comfort of those suffering from any of the "ills that flesh is heir to," and we therefore cheerfully make the above facts known for the benefit of our townsman, Dr. A. S. Dudley.—Norfolk Democrat.

Two peaked rocks, not laid down in any chart, have been discovered in latitude 21° 26' N., longitude 83° 35' W. They had no more than fifteen feet of water on them, without breakers.

D. R. Miller has been elected Governor of Texas. Some of the clergy in Maine read the Thanksgiving proclamation of Gov. Briggs instead of that of the Governor of their own State.

Pope Pius IX was born at Sinigaglia, May, 1792, of the family of Mastai.

The Farm House on Long Island, in Boston Harbor, was burnt on Monday last, about noon.

Deer are said to abound in Sandwich woods. Seven were seen in one drove, last week.

The engine, tender and baggage car, on the New Haven road, were thrown off the track by a bull on the 22d ult. The whole train, however, passed over the animal, cutting him up without regard to rules.

Three young ladies of Cincinnati have taken the veil at the convent of Notre Dame. One of the young ladies who went out West as a teacher, is about to commence her noviciate at that institution.

Mrs. Place, late Josephine Clifton, who had obtained considerable celebrity as an actress, died at New Orleans on the 22d ult.

An expedition charged with the scientific reconnaissance of the Dead Sea, has been fitted out by government. Lieut. Dale of Boston has the charge.

The discovery of a "North West Passage" has at last been effected by the Hudson Bay Company, although it is not probable that a vessel could ever sail through, the way being continually impeded by ice.

SATURDAY, DEC. 4, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE UNION MAGAZINE. This excellent monthly, edited by Mrs. C. M. Kirkland, for December, has been received. This number completes the first volume, and although the work has been in existence but six months, it has already taken a stand, unquestionably, among the first works of the kind in the country. The present number contains two superb mezzotint engravings and a plate of fashions besides several embellishments on wood. It contains articles by Mrs. L. M. Child, L. H. Sigourney, Catherine M. Sedgewick, Eliza T. Herbert, Park Benjamin, Mrs. Kirkland and other writers of known ability.

WITHOUT AN EQUAL. Gerrit Smith of Peterboro', (N. Y.) distinguished for his anti-slavery views, has addressed a letter to the Supervisors and Justices of the several towns of Madison County, requesting them to select seven unmarried, poor, landless women, (a part or all of them may be widows,) to whom he proposes to give fifty dollars for the purpose of aiding them to purchase a home for themselves.

ON THE SAFE SIDE. It is said that a young man in New Haven, (Conn.) of great economy, was accustomed, before his marriage, to ride out with his betrothed, but with the express stipulation that in case he did not marry her, she should pay half the expense of the team.

CONGRESS. The thirtieth Congress will meet at Washington on Monday next. The state of parties in the House of Representatives is thus stated:—whigs, one hundred and sixteen; democrats, one hundred and eight; independents, four; clear whig majority, four. The democratic majority in the last Congress was sixty three.

BOTTLE MAKING. The rapidity with which bottles are made is almost incredible. A workman with the assistance of a gatherer and blower, will begin and finish one hundred and twenty dozen quart bottles in ten hours, which averages nearly two and a quarter a minute, and this is ordinarily done; and in some works the men are restricted to two a minute, to prevent the work being slighted.

QUINCY GRANITE IN NEW ORLEANS. The Secretary of the Treasury has accepted, on behalf of the government, the gift of a whole square, made to it by the First Municipality of New Orleans, for the site of a Custom House. The whole square is to be occupied by it, the building to contain fire proof warehouses, besides rooms for the appraisers and other officers of the customs. It is to be built of Quincy granite, and of the most substantial, yet least expensive workmanship.

SNOW. By an arrival from St. John, (N. B.) it is reported that there was snow to the depth of a foot at Eastport, (Me.) on Monday last.

SECRETARY OF STATE. William Tufis, Esq., first clerk in the office, has been appointed Secretary of State pro tem to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. John G. Palfrey, till the meeting of the Legislature in January.

IOWA. The special election for a member of the Legislature in Lee county has resulted in the election of the regular democratic candidate by two hundred majority. This, as stated, secures the election of two democratic United States Senators.

HEAVY VERDICT. The jury in the case of the St. Augustine's Church vs. the County of Philadelphia, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and assessed the damage at $47,433 87. This church was burnt several years ago during the Native American riots.

MASSACHUSETTS. The House of Representatives now stands, one hundred and seventy eight whigs, sixty six democrats and four abolitionists. Last year there were two hundred and four whigs, forty nine democrats and one abolitionist.

RIGHTLY BESTOWED. A rich service of plate, which had been purchased by merchants and others of New York city, as a present to the Hon. Silas Wright, just previous to his death, has now been presented to his widow. It is worth $18,020, weighs near fifty pounds, and consists of one hundred and eight different pieces.

NO WAR. The difficulties between Brazil and the United States are in a progress of settlement.

WHIG NOMINATION. Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr. has been nominated for re-election, as Mayor of Boston, by the whig convention.

"ROUGH AND READY." According to the New York Mirror, Maj. Gen. Taylor has been nominated to the Presidency at two hundred public meetings.

THE PLAYMATE. The December number of this periodical for youth is out, and is, as usual, rich in reading and embellishments. Every little boy and girl should be furnished with the work.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. A change of hours took place on this road on the 1st inst., as will be seen on reference to the advertisement. For the benefit of our citizens who visit Boston, we give the hours of departure from that city of trains by which they can return home, viz:—7.45, 8.25, and 11.30, A. M., and 1.45, 3.45, 4.15, 6.15, and 9 P. M. Tuesday and Friday evenings at 11 instead of 9.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SOMETHING OF A SHOW. There are now at the Gosport Navy Yard, Virginia, seventeen national vessels, of all classes; three ships of the line, one of which is in the ship-house; one large steam frigate, building; four frigates, three sloops of war; two brigs; three steamers afloat, and a steam sloop.

LOSS OF STEAMBOAT AND LIFE. The total loss by fire, of propeller Phoenix, on Lake Michigan, a short time since, has been fully confirmed. The fire took under the deck, and there being a strong wind, the scene among over three hundred passengers was terrible. Only thirty were saved in small boats. The passengers were nearly all immigrant Hollanders.

GREAT FRESHET. By letters received from Cincinnati, Ohio, it appears that the Kenhawa river, on the 26th ult., rose forty feet, destroying thirty houses and upwards of one hundred thousand bushels of salt. Great damage has been done to the salt works all along the valley.

PENSIONS. Widows who obtained Navy pensions under the act of March 3, 1845, most of which ceased on the first day of September last, are entitled to a renewal of their pensions for five years, under an act passed at the last session of Congress.

FATAL EFFECT OF WRESTLING. Recently, two sons of a gentleman in Palmyra, (Pa.) as they were going to bed, got to wrestling; the elder threw the younger, who never rose again, but expired almost instantly.

MEXICO. There is no later news from the army since our last number.

The widow of Judge Chase, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, is said to be living, in the ninety eighth year of her age.

It has been remarked that a commercial misfortune has come regularly once in ten years. In 1807, '17, '27, and '37, there was a great pressure.

The emperor of Russia has issued an order to the Bank of St. Petersburg, to assist every merchant able to prove his solvency by his books.

It is not known where he who invented the plough was born, or where he died, yet he has effected more for the happiness of man, than the whole race of conquerors.

Some persons in times of danger lose what little sense nature has sparingly given them. A man recently, on an alarm of fire being given on board of a steamboat, threw his valise overboard containing some two hundred dollars.

A vein of anthracite has been discovered at Valley Falls, (R. I.) about six miles from the Worcester railroad, which is apparently inexhaustible.

Dr. Stremme, of Russia, has succeeded in drawing from the leaves of the pine a cotton-like substance which he names "forest wool." It is fitted for the fabrication of course stuffs, paste board and wrapping paper.

A mechanic of Boston has invented a "Boot Crimping Machine," which makes at every revolution eleven pairs of "uppers," crimped in the most perfect manner.

The people of Springfield are talking about having a city government.

It has been decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, that the will to which the "mark" is made is void and insufficient.

Miss Burdett Courts, the English heiress, has determined to prepare a Refuge for discharged female prisoners, where they will be instructed in morals and religion, and taught the means of industry.

NOTICES.

The Social Singing Society will meet for rehearsal, at the Lyceum Room, SUNDAY EVENING, Dec. 5th, at half past six o'clock.

E. W. MARSH, Secretary.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held at the house of Mr. T. Kellogg, next MONDAY EVENING, at six o'clock precisely.

A full and prompt attendance is important.

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with Dr. A. S. Dudley of Boston, who has examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptible, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:

THE subscribers respectfully represent that common convenience and necessity require that a new highway be laid out, or an existing highway be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, leading from the wharves and grist-mill of Calvin White & Co. to a point on Commercial Street, in the town of Braintree, in said County, near the store of Capt. Edward Pray, and that said proposed new highway or existing highway passes through land of said Calvin White & Co., George Pray, Timothy Bagley, and Mary Vinton.

Also—That common convenience and necessity require that the highway from a point near the store of Benjamin Newcomb, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike, called Howard Street, to a point in said street near the house of Nathaniel Hayward, in said town of Braintree, be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, and that said street passes through land of Jonathan Hayward and others.

Also—That a new highway in said town of Braintree, from a point near the house of John Hollis, on a new highway, to a point on Commercial Street in a line with Adams Street, is required by common convenience and necessity, and that said proposed highway passes through land of Chamberlain's heirs, Abraham Hobart, Ebenezer C. Bowditch, Jacob Allen, Esther Loring and Mary Loring.

Also—That a new highway in said town of Braintree, commencing at a point in a new highway on the north side of the mill pond of Calvin White & Co., and running across the same above mentioned dam thereof, and south of the School-house to a point near the house of Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold, is required by common convenience and necessity, and that the same will pass through land of Calvin White, Calvin White & Co., Caleb Stetson, Esq., Hon. Benjamin V. French, Eliza Hunt's heirs, Eliza White's heirs, the East School District, Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold.

They therefore pray that your Honorable Board would order a view of the premises, and proceed to locate such new highways and cause such alterations and specific repairs to be made in existing highways as to you shall seem meet and proper. As in duty bound will ever pray.

Clothing! Clothing!!

Particular Notice.

WE wish to have it distinctly understood, notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, (by those interested,) that

AT

EXTREMELY LOW PRICES,

IS STILL IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION AT THE CELEBRATED

ROUGH AND READY HALL,

Where can be found the largest and best selected Stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

In the town of Quincy or vicinity,

Suitable for the present and coming season, all of which will be sold at the usual low prices for which

ROUGH & READY HALL IS SO JUSTLY CELEBRATED.

N.B. We would also say that ALL ARTICLES which are sold at this establishment are what some of our neighbors would facetiously call

SLOP MADE,

having the impression, we suppose, from the IMMENSE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES between our establishment and their own, that our Clothing could not be well got up at the extremely low price we sell for.

We would merely say as regards STYLE, FIT and WORKMANSHIP, all Clothing that is sold at

ROUGH & READY HALL,

WILL COMPARE TO ADVANTAGE with any articles manufactured as custom work, so called, in Town.

Quincy, Nov. 27. 1f GEORGE SAVIL & Co.

Public Notice.

JOHN DINEGAN, Merchant Tailor, School St.,

WOULD respectfully solicit the attention of one and all who are in want of CLOTHING AT FAIR PRICES, to the New and Extensive Assortment

And of the Latest and Most Approved Styles.

VESTINGS,

We have received an almost endless variety of Plain and Figured

Silks, Satins and Valenciennes,—of the very Latest Styles.

J. D. would invite the attention of Parents to his New Styles of

TWEEDS AND SATTINETTES,

Suitable for Boys' Sacks or Business Coats, which he will make to order, CHEAPER THAN CAN BE BOUGHT IN THE CITY BY THE DOZEN.

J. Dinegan, having made extensive arrangements for the Fall Trade, would simply add, that his present Stock is on a more

COMPREHENSIVE AND EXTENSIVE SCALE

Than at any former period, and that, engaging none but the BEST OF WORKMEN, the inhabitants of Quincy and the surrounding Villages may rest assured that they can purchase their Clothing CHEAPER of him than at any other place in town.

Gentlemen's Furnishings.

Gentlemen's Furnishings.

Dr. A. S. DUDLEY,

Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE.

No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court, BOSTON.

DENTAL ART.

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of DOCT. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, once a month.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

The Firm with which Dr. D. is connected enjoys an extensive practice, and is able to compete with any establishment in the City. The senior partner, Dr. S. GRANDIN, M. D., is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plate worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonies which he has received from distinguished men:

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fitch of Philadelphia, author of a large work on Dental Surgery, to Dr. Dudley, dated June, 1843.

"Dr. Grandin operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has pluggers several for me to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's acquirements and personal good character must, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon-Dentist."

S. F. FITCH.

From Reuben D. Mussey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, (N. H.) and at present, Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

LINES TO SANTA ANNA.

Santa Anna, you are placed in a difficult state,
They call you a coward and traitor of late,
But wait, Santa Anna, for their 'second thoughts' wait.

A coward you are not, true history will show;
A coward would never have met such a foe,
Or meeting, had fled without striking a blow.

The battles you fought, although victory you lost,
Were bravely contested we know to our cost,
And you are no traitor tho' winces your host.

But want of success in the Mexican State
Subjects you to false accusation and hate,
Yet wait, Santa Anna, for their 'second thoughts' wait.

A foe to my country, my muse will not rise
To blazon your name in the Mexican's eyes,
And e'en to do justice but feebly she tries.

But were I of Mexico boldly I'd take
The harp that her mountains and valleys would shake,
And Santa Anna's name all their echo should wake.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

ANTI-BLUES.

I will not own, why should I?
All that my dreams reveal;
I will not tell, how can I?
All that I think and feel.

Mine is a memory freighted
With pleasures lightly past;
And if my hopes are fickle,
Yet are they brightly cast.
Bright joys leave bright impressions,
If virtue blessed their stay;
And Hope's fruit star is brightest,
Ere Reason dims its ray.

'Tis sometimes safe to fancy
What Reason never taught;
'Tis sometimes right to harbor
A bright though homeless thought.
Joy like the setting sunbeam,
May light us when 'tis past;
And grief, tho' drear as nightshade,
Ne'er cheers us till 'tis cast.

While yesterday's rejoicing
Is hardly sung to rest,
And tomorrow's dawning rapture
Already warms my breast,
Why should to day's disclosures—
Half sunshine and half rain—
Declend fond Memory's heaven,
And show Hope's visions vain.

GROG MEN AND WATER MEN

BY THE RAZOR SHAVE MAN.

The man that drinks grog, wine, brandy or beer,
And looks round the tap-room from year to year,
Will find in the end that he's lived in vain;
With some old bones and an addled brain,
He coughs and sneezes, and whistles and spits,
And he'll die at last in spasms and fits.

But the man that drinks water, old Adam's own ale,
Will always be healthy, stout, rugged, and hale;
Of dimes, dollars, and eagles he'll ne'er be bereft,
But always can boast of a few more left;
And he'll live till his hair is as white as a sheep,
Then he'll die like a baby going to sleep.

FOR A WINTER DAY.

Give me a wife whose sunny eye
Shall drive the cloud from yonder sky,
Whose honied words and looks will say
Love may bloom on a winter day!

Friendship may come, with plausive air,
To cheer the moments free from care;
But worldly friends soon shrink away
From the frost and storm of a winter day.

Wine bath a quick, but passing, power
To lay the fiend of a gloomy hour;
But it lacks the vigor to drive away
The lengthened gloom of a winter day.

A wife! a wife! whose sunny eye
Shall drive the gloom from a clouded sky!
Her will I seek to chase away
The dense, damp air of a winter day!

ANECDOTES.

A stout Irishman in New Orleans was seized with the yellow fever. His attack was a light one. The physician recommended leeches, as one of his remedies, to cure the fever, and after giving, as he supposed, distinct orders how to apply them, he, to save expense to his patient, sent them in a bottle that he might dispense with a leecher. The doctor 'called' in the course of the day, and to his surprise, found most of the leeches alive in the bottle. Expressing his astonishment, he asked his patient why he had not used them. 'Used them is it, said Paddy, eying them with disgust, 'Hav'n't I swallowed two of the serpents, and if I were ye'd have down to save me from yellow fever, then go for a praxe.'

Widow Smasheships read a paragraph in the newspapers, about a young man being 'blinded by love,' when she gave utterance to the following: 'Well, that's it again. When my good dead and gone husband kept company with me, he used to tell me that he loved me so deeply, that he couldn't see any other woman. Now I liked him just rate; but all the time we was a courting, indeed after we was married, as long as he lived, I could see to do the finest needle work by candle light; and I never was obliged to use spectacles until a few years back!'

Walter Scott was once, with great glee, relating an anecdote of Macnab, 'who, poor fellow, said he, 'is dead and gone—'
'Why, Mr. Scott, exclaimed his wife, 'Macnab's not dead, is he?'
'Faith my dear,' replied Scott with humorous gravity, 'if he's not dead they've done him great injustice—for they've buried him!'

'The only bit of mate I've tasted in this country,' said an Emuaid, just landed, 'is a raw, roasted potato, boiled yesterday, and if you don't believe me here it is.'

Champooing and Hair-Cutting.

WILLIAM E. AMBUSH,

WOULD respectfully inform the Ladies and Gentlemen of Quincy, that he has constantly on hand a new and unequalled

CHAMPOOING MIXTURE,

far superior to the far famed Bogle Hyperion, which when scientifically applied, renders the Hair soft and pliable and imparts to it a peculiar gloss, a flexibility which cannot be obtained from any other combination.

He would also recommend the application of his superior Hair Mixture to those afflicted with cutaneous diseases, to which may be attributed the loss of hair, especially by the young. It is a stimulant to and nourishes the growth of the hair; quickly restores the scalp to a healthy condition which must be accomplished before the hair will make its appearance. It is the great desideratum of the age.

Ladies wishing this application will be waited upon at their residences by W. E. Ambush, by leaving orders at his Emporium, Southern's Building, Quincy.

CENTRE DISTRICT GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The School Committee of this town, to whom was presented the petition of Mr. Daniel French and others requesting the removal of Mr. J. W. Greene, the present teacher of the Grammar School in the Centre District, have attended to the subject and respectfully report:

That having considered the reasons assigned by the petitioners for the removal of Mr. Greene, and having impartially examined the nature and grounds of their complaints, they have decided unanimously that the request of said petitioners should not be granted.

The Committee deeply regret the spirit of dissatisfaction which has manifested itself in the District, and which originated this petition; believing that the evil effects of it upon the interests of the school and upon the minds of the children, cannot be easily or soon removed.

The following facts which have appeared in the investigation of this subject, a majority of the Committee have felt it to be their duty to present.

1. These complaints (as is usual in such cases) come from those who are least acquainted with the interior regulations of the school. None of the petitioners have ever visited the school to see for themselves the practical working of the system which they condemn, or to observe the management with which they are dissatisfied.

2. The grounds of these complaints are derived from ex parte statements coming from children who have attended the school. The statements of these children are the basis of most, if not all of the objections which have been urged against Mr. Greene's management of the school, and also of those reports which have been circulated in the district respecting scholars being turned out of school because they were poorly clad. The Committee have obtained satisfactory evidence that these reports are incorrect.

3. The Committee find that those children, concerning whom complaint is made, that they do not learn anything, have attended school, some of them but a small part of the year; others have been irregular in their attendance; and, if others have attended constantly, there have been causes operating out of school to retard their progress while in school. But it is not true of this school, generally speaking, that there is no progress in learning. The Committee are happy to bear testimony, as the result of their visits and examinations, to the diligence and faithful exertions of the teacher, and to the general progress of the school in valuable learning, as well as in many other things that are excellent and praiseworthy.

The Committee therefore believe it to be their duty, a duty which they owe to the inhabitants of the District and to Mr. Greene, to sustain him in that station in which the District has placed him.

SATURDAY, DEC. 11, 1847.

John A. Green, Editor.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY. Benjamin Ryan of Braintree, was arraigned before Naaman L. White, Esq. for an assault and battery upon Rev. Aaron Haynes, a Baptist clergyman of said town. Mr. Ryan pleaded not guilty and witnesses were called who testified that Mr. Haynes came to a ledge where Mr. Ryan was quarrying stone. They engaged in conversation which very soon turned upon the Mexican war, and the dispute became warm. Mr. Ryan made a statement which Mr. Haynes declared to be false, whereupon Mr. Ryan requested Mr. Haynes to leave his place of work, which Mr. Haynes refused to do, alleging that he had as good right there as he had. Mr. Ryan repeated his request to Mr. Haynes several times and waited several minutes for him to do so, which he refused. Thereupon Mr. Ryan put his hand upon Mr. H. and gently pushed him from the work. Upon this evidence Mr. Ryan contended that no assault and battery had been committed upon Mr. Haynes; that he had a right to use force sufficient to eject him from the land of which he was legally in possession, and that in the present case it was not proved that greater force was used than what was necessary for that purpose. The Court, however, convicted the defendant and fined him five dollars and costs, from which sentence he appealed to the next Court of Common Pleas. The foregoing furnishes a most excellent lesson for both church and laity.

CONGRESS. The members of the thirtieth Congress assembled in the Capitol at twelve o'clock, on the 6th instant.

The House of Representatives proceeded to ballot for Speaker, and on the third balloting, Hon. Robert C. Winthrop of Massachusetts, was elected by one majority. He was conducted to the Chair by Mr. Vinton of Ohio and Mr. Maclay of New York. The oath of office was administered by Mr. Adams.

On the 7th, in the Senate, in answer to a committee, the President transmitted his annual Message. In the House, Thomas J. Campbell was elected Clerk, having just the requisite number of ballots.

The Secretary of the Treasury estimates the wants of the next fiscal year, including deficient appropriations, at $69,000,000.

On Wednesday, in the Senate, it was ordered that the usual committees be chosen on Monday. A bill for the relief of the heirs of John Paul Jones was introduced and passed immediately. In the House, members drew for seats and elected a door-keeper and a Sergeant-at-arms.

THE MESSAGE. The President's Message was received in Boston on Wednesday, by telegraph to the Bee and Times. Owing to its great length we are unable to publish it, and as our readers have probably seen the document it is not necessary to give a synopsis. We are indebted to the Bee and Times for Congressional proceedings.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS. The intelligence from the seat of war is not of particular importance.

FIRES. On Thursday evening last, a barn and shop belonging to Mr. George W. Barrett, of this place, valued at one hundred and fifty dollars, was set on fire and destroyed. This is the third time Mr. B. has suffered from incendiaries. These buildings stood near where the house was burnt a few weeks since, and were not insured.

A large barn in the centre of this village, owned by Capt. Lewis Bass, containing about seventeen tons of hay, was destroyed by fire on Friday evening. The origin of the fire is unknown. Probable loss, about eight hundred dollars; three hundred insured on the building. Engines were in attendance from Weymouth, Hingham, Dorchester and Milton.

ROGUERY. Last Thursday night, about eleven o'clock, a light was seen in the Vestry of the Episcopal Church, in this town. Soon after its discovery, and while efforts were being made to surround the building, the light was extinguished and the rogues escaped.

About two o'clock, Friday morning, some person entered the dwelling house of Mr. Joshua Jones of this place, through one of the windows, and commenced searching for plunder, when he became alarmed and fled.

FOREIGN NEWS. The steam ship Britannia, nineteen days from Liverpool, arrived at Boston on Wednesday. Parliament met on the 18th November. There had been more failures of mercantile houses in England and Scotland, but upon the whole, a marked improvement in public feeling has prevailed. Bullion is pouring in from all quarters of Europe.

Assassinations and violent breaches of the law in Ireland, continue to excite anxiety and alarm among all classes.

There was not much change in the markets. A pension has been conferred on Sir John Ross, the celebrated navigator.

ROGUES. A gang of rogues entered the counting room of the Essex Manufacturing Company at Lawrence, on Wednesday night, and attempted to break open the safe but were surprised by officers on the watch, and two of the gang captured. One of these was Morton, who was arrested in Boston on suspicion of having robbed the jewelry store of Courier & Trott. He fought desperately and was severely wounded. Two others escaped.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. TAYLOR. Gen. Taylor and suite arrived at New Orleans on the 30th ult. The citizens gave the veteran hero a grand reception on the 2d instant.

FOR THE ARMY. The United States Steamer Edith left New Orleans on the 27th ult. for the Brazos and Vera Cruz, having on board a number of officers, and $225,000 for Gen. Scott's army.

"FAT." Lieut. Thomas J. Myers, a printer, belonging to the Massachusetts Regiment, has resigned his commission, having "conquered a piece of Mexico," in the person of a young Spanish lady at Monterey, worth thirty thousand dollars. He designs to settle there, and publish a paper.

SPLENDID TIME-PIECE. A clock worth seven hundred dollars has been placed in the business room of the Boston Custom House. It consists of an Ionic iron column placed upon a stone pedestal. The column passes through the floor into the second story for about twelve feet, where are four faces looking to each side of the room.

THE EUREKA. The December number of this popular Journal has come to hand, filled, as usual, with valuable reading. It has now reached the fourth number of the second volume. Price one dollar a year, Kingsley & Pirsson, No. 5 Wall St., New York, Publishers.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS. We are indebted to the Honorable Secretary of the Commonwealth, for the Abstract of the Returns from Banks and Institutions for Savings in Massachusetts. Also, for the Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths.

A friend in Louisville, (Ky.) has sent us "The Western Farmer's Comprehensive Almanac," for 1848, for which he will accept our thanks.

TO "F. E. P. C." The "lines composed by a little girl when she expected her brother was dead in Mexico," are hardly suitable for publication. The perusal of them would no doubt be gratifying to her relatives, but we think she would not like to see them in print when she is older and her mind more cultivated.

Major Iribide, son of the late Emperor of that name, of Mexico, has arrived in the United States on his parole of honor, having been taken prisoner in the battle of Huamantla. He goes to Philadelphia, where the family of the late Emperor reside.

"Fanny Forrester," the third wife of Dr. Judson, has been engaged since her marriage in writing the memoirs of her immediate predecessor, and has it nearly completed.

A collision took place between two dirt trains on the Concord (N. H.) Railroad, last week, by which one person was killed and seventeen others injured—some of them severely.

Hon. John Bell has been elected to the United States Senate from Tennessee, by the Legislature.

MARRIED.

In this town, 5th inst., by Rev. S. A. Davis, Mr. Solomon Torrey to Mrs. Olive W. Vezie.

On the 26th ult., by Rev. Mr. Pike, Mr. Thomas P. Lucas to Miss Caroline P. Marisam, formerly of Richmond, (Me.)

The liberal token of remembrance to the editor is acknowledged and appreciated. Long life and happiness to those who in the consumption of their own bliss, do not forget their best friends.

A CARD.

The subscriber tenders his thanks to the fire department of Quincy, and to the citizens generally, for their prompt efforts to save his property from destruction by fire on Friday evening, 10th inst.

He also feels grateful to the engine Companies in attendance from Weymouth, Hingham, Dorchester and Milton, for the kind intentions manifested by their early arrival at the conflagration.

DIED.

In this town, 29th ult., George Williams, only son of Mrs. Mary Wells, aged 18 months.

To Nature's call I yield my breath,
Torn by the tyrant hand of death
From a fond mother's arms;
The world of sin and woe I've left
With all its native charms.
Eight dreary months have flown away,
The rose has bloomed, gone to decay,
Since father, in his bloom,
Was snatched by death's resistless sway,
And found an early tomb.
Mourn not for us, kind mother dear,
Nor shed another bitter tear—
A Paradise we gain;
Look heavenward and never fear,
For we shall meet again.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:

THE subscribers respectfully represent that common convenience and necessity require that a new highway be laid out, of an existing highway be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, leading from the wharves and grist-mill of Calvin White & Co. to a point on Commercial Street, in the town of Braintree, in said County, near the store of Capt. Edward Pray, and that said proposed new highway or existing highway passes through land of said Calvin White & Co., George Pray, Timothy Bagley, and Mary Vinton.

Also—That common convenience and necessity require that the highway from a point near the store of Benjamin Newcomb, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike, called Howard Street, to a point in said street near the house of Nathaniel Hayward, in said town of Braintree, be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, and that said street passes through land of Jonathan Hayward and others.

Also—That a new highway in said town of Braintree, from a point near the house of John Hollie, on a new highway, to a point on Commercial Street in a line with Adams Street, is required by common convenience and necessity, and that said proposed highway passes through land of Chamberlain's heirs, Abraham Hobart, Ebenezer C. Bowditch, Jacob Allen, Esther Loring and Mary Loring.

Also—That a new highway in said town of Braintree, commencing at a point in a new highway on the north side of the mill pond of Calvin White & Co., and running across the same above the mill dam thereof, and south of the School-house to a point near the house of Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold, is required by common convenience and necessity, and that the same will pass through land of Calvin White, Calvin White & Co., Caleb Stinson, Esq., Hon. Benjamin V. French, Elihu Hunt's heirs, Elihu White's heirs, the East School District, Mary Arnold and Rhoda Arnold.

To the Honorable the County Commissioners within and for the County of Norfolk:

THE subscribers respectfully represent that common convenience and necessity require that at new highways be laid out, or an existing highway be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon, leading from the wharves and grist-mill of Calvin White & Co. to a point on Commercial Street, in the town of Braintree, in said County, near the store of Capt. POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

EFFIE.

Young Effie was seated beside the fair brook,
On the other side sat her wild lover,
She tangled her line and thrice baited her hook,
And full often she cast a look over.

"What luck, lovely Effie," cried Owen, "this morn—
Have you caught any fish for your dinner?"
She gave him a look she intended for scorn,
As she glanced on the handsome young sinner.

"No fish have I caught," she exclaimed with a pish,
As she laid her rod down on a stone near,
"Your looks are so ugly you frighten the fish,
And I wish, sir, you'd leave me alone here."

"I cannot," he cried, "I am spell-bound, you see—
By your beauty enchain'd to this station;
But say, lovely girl, will you go home with me
And partake of my cot and my ration?"

She meant to say no, but she gave him a look
Which her lover construed an enlister;
He sprang to his feet and jump'd over the brook
And away to be married—he kiss'd her.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE HUNTSMAN.

"Sweet brother, go not to the chase,
Ah, rest with me at home!
There is a shadow on thy face,
Foretelling woe to come;
And I have dreamed a ghastly dream,
Oh, woful sight to me!
It was thy steed swam down the stream,
And riderless was he!"

"Look, gentle one, where at the gate
My generous courser stands,
And bends his arched neck elate,
Beneath his master's hands.
Fear not, fear not. My steed and I
Are trusty friends and tried,
And I'll be with thee faithfully,
An hour ere eventide."

"Yet think upon the day of tears
Thou leavest behind for me;
Have patience with a woman's fears,
They spring from love of thee.
Oh stay! and I for thee will sing
Songs thou hast loved erewhile,
And strive and seek for every thing,
The slow hours to beguile!"

"Full sweetly passeth, gentle one,
With thee each placid hour,
And we will rest, ere sets the sun,
In thine own myrtle bower.
But now—the breeze is on the hills,
The day is in the skies,
The free bird's song the forest fills,
With countless melodies!"

"I must away—adieu—adieu!"
He vaulted on his steed,
And blithely glanced his eye of blue,
O'er river, hill and mead.
But plaintively and pleadingly,
That gentle voice spoke on,
"Oh stay! for I have none but thee,
Oh stay!"—and he was gone!

At eventide, when darkly red
The sun sank from the shore,
They brought that youthful hunter dead,
Home to his sister's door.
No words they said, but she looked well
Upon each eye and cheek,
And knew the tale they came to tell—
Without a start or shriek.

She rose, and sought the lowly bier,
And kneeling by the place,
She laid her cheek without a tear,
Beside her brother's face.
Awhile they paused, but when they strove
To lift her drooping head,
They found that, in silent love,
The gentle one was dead.

A THOUGHT.

"The night is mother of the day,
The winter of the spring,
And ever upon old Decay
The greenest mosses cling.
Behind the cloud the starting lurks,
Through showers the sunbeams fall;
For God, who loveth all his works,
Has left his hopes with all."

ANECDOTES.

When Sir Nicholas Bacon, Judge in the reign of Elizabeth, was on the bench, he was strongly importuned by a criminal to save his life on the score of relationship.

"Why so?" inquired the Judge.

"Why," replied the culprit, "my name is Hog, and yours is Bacon, and hog and bacon are so near akin that they cannot be separated."

"Aye," said Nicholas, "but you and I cannot be related unless you are hanged, for hog is not bacon till it is well hanged."

"Will you give me them pennies now?" said a big newboy to a little one, after giving him a severe thumping.

"No, I won't."

"Then I will give you another pounding."

"Pound away, and be cursed!" Me and Doctor Franklin says, "Take care of the peace and the pounds will take care of themselves."

When Dr. H. and Lawyer A. were walking arm in arm, a wag said to a friend—

"Those two are just equal to one highwayman."

"How so?"

"Because," rejoined the wag, "it is a lawyer and a doctor—your money or your life!"

A town-clerk, down east, having one morning in church proclaimed the banns of matrimony between a "gal" and "feller," was followed by the clergyman reading a hymn of Watts, beginning thus:

"Mistaken souls, who dream of heaven," &c.

MISCELLANY.

FLIRTATIONS.

The following is an extract from a work by a distinguished Frenchman, a review of which we find in the Democratic Review. It shows how the freedom from restraint and the self-possession of American young ladies, strikes an intelligent foreigner.

Flirtation is an English word which can be explained, but not literally translated. Flirtation is the conduct of two young people of opposite sexes, who are pleased with each other; who seek each other's society; who exchange little attentions, little billets, little gallantries, without thinking of marriage, and yet without thinking of mischief. If the word flirtation is not French, it deserves to be. We, who in reference to horses, have borrowed so many words from the English language, why should we not borrow one or two in reference to women? We have the words handicapper, stepper,—let us make, then, the word fleurter. Our French term coquette seems somewhat harsh, while a woman who fleurs appears to exercise the most legitimate and charming of her rights. With us, cachemires and flirtations belong to the married women—in America, on the contrary, they are the privileges of young girls. How delightful is the life of a young girl in this classic land of fleurter! All that is required of her is to be sufficiently pretty. Whether poor or rich, she receives the same homage, and as often as she pleases, finds opportunities for flirtation, in all honor and honesty, indeed, for to flirt does not mean to love, still less to admit improper intimacies. To protect themselves against an excess of liberty, the young girls have only the instinct of danger; yet the paps and maninas of America never meddle with the loves of their daughters.

Let us inquire into the life of a young girl, a fashionable of Baltimore. It is eight o'clock in the morning. Lucy enters the dining room, throws her arms about her father's neck, kisses her mother, and takes her seat at the table amid the numerous companions whom heaven has given her, in the shape of brothers and sisters. Lucy is eighteen or twenty years of age; she is a pretty, blooming little creature; she has black hair, a slender hand, but a foot less distingue. Between her two cups of tea, a domestic hands her, respectfully, upon a silver salver, a little billet, too highly perfumed and too coquetish in its form, to come from a female friend. Lucy opens the billet, reads it and answers it; and neither the model of fathers, nor the phoenix of mothers, thinks of enquiring into the contents of the fragrant missive.

Breakfast over, Lucy ascends to her chamber; arranges her hair, changes her dress, and then, with a book in her hand, descends to the parlor. Soon the door opens, and a young man of smiling mien advances to press the pretty hand which Lucy familiarly holds out to him. They take their seats upon the same sofa; they enter into conversation. The young man and the young girl are engaged in a regular fleurter, as they say, when they would express an intimacy which has lasted for a month, a week, or a day. In the very height of this interesting conversation, the father's face suddenly appears at the door; but scarcely has he cast his eyes upon the young couple, when he retires hastily, greatly abashed at his indiscretion. Although disturbed in her conversation, Lucy, always amiable, runs after the author of her days, brings him back, and introduces him to her friend. "Slight as is the restraint imposed by the presence of a Baltimorean father, the conversation soon languishes, and Lucy puts an end to the sitting, and with a graceful gesture of adieu to her father, disappears with her beau. During the day Lucy may or may not return beneath the paternal roof.

But it is on ball days that Lucy's triumph shines out in all its glory. From early morning bouquets are brought in succession to the house. Among them all Lucy must choose. For one happy man she will make ten unhappy ones. What matters that? Lucy need not hesitate. The indifferent bouquets will form a garland for her robe; as for the bouquet of the preferred—of the beau, who reigns for the moment upon the surface of her heart, it will flutter all the evening from her hand to her lips. A young girl who is engaged in a flirtation, has no time to amuse herself at a ball; she owes her entire self to her fleurter. Lucy dances only with Robert, she talks only with Robert, she smiles only with Robert. After Lucy's example, each young girl has her Robert, an arrangement which renders a ball in America an assemblage of pairs, where they prattle, two and two, behind the curtains, where they sup almost from the same plate, after having for the whole evening, clasped the same waist, and pressed the same hand. Of course, the paps and maninas are rigidly excluded from these balls; they take care of the house, retire early, thinking of the triumphs of their dear child. The married women bow to the same sentence; they watch over the cradle of their latest born. What should they do at a ball? They are no longer allowed to flirt.

But it is three o'clock in the morning; all these young heads need repose. Their departments are arranged gaily. They enter the same barouche, always three of the one sex and three of the other. But which tender couple shall be disunited the first? Which young girl shall be left at her house before her companions? that is the question. Each one wishes to be the last; they have many things yet to say to each other! And it is so pleasant to ride through the streets in a ball dress, in an open carriage, in the dead of winter, in the middle of the night, in a temperature of Siberia.

Such is Lucy's life; she dances and flirts away the winter at Baltimore; she dances and flirts away the summer at Newport or Saratoga. But the years glide on, and Lucy is so happy in her state of maidenhood, that she has forgotten to marry; she does not perceive that she has been flirting for a lustre, perhaps for two. Lucy is still charming; her eyes shine with the same brilliancy; her complexion has lost nothing of its freshness; she still wears the same dress. Still, one morning, she wakes up in an ill humor; she has slept badly; she has been dreaming of marriage, of a husband, of children. Her dream affords her matter for reflection; she looks back upon her life, she numbers the numerous flirtations which have crowned her career, and, at last, she shudders as she thinks upon the past. Lucy does not wish to die an old maid; her resolution is taken, she will marry. Fortunately her heart is caught; that heart which she only intended to lend, she has given away, and the husband will not be long in making his appearance. These grave reflections ripen for some days in Lucy's head, and one evening she designs to hold the following conversation with her respected parents.

Lucy.—By the by, my father and mother, I am going to be married.

Father and Mother.—My daughter, I approve of your choice. May we know whom you are to espouse?

Lucy.—Mr. A.—

Father and Mother.—I am not acquainted with him.

Lucy.—I will introduce him to you; he is a charming man. He has taken lessons in the Polka in Paris from Cellarius, and then he does a large business with China.

Father and Mother.—Mr. A.— appears to be an excellent match.

Lucy.—I love him, and he loves me; we love each other, and he has a hundred thousand dollars.

Father and Mother.—My daughter you are an angel!

And Lucy marries; and of Lucy the flirt, of Lucy the giddy, the frivolous, of Lucy the coquette, nothing now remains. Lucy is now a wife, devoted to her husband, devoted to her children. In this second life which bears so little resemblance to the first, she is not less happy than before. She does not seek her happiness, she does not find it in the hundred thousand dollars, which she jingled somewhat loudly in the ears of paternal vanity. Lucy claims so have espoused a man, and not a strong box; she loves her husband for himself and not for his dollars; and, if poor, she would still have chosen him. Lucy has not married to have diamonds or equipage; she has married from love; so much the better if riches come with it.

The same contempt for money is met with in almost every American girl. They have not yet profited by the lessons given them by the fortune hunters who follow their steps. Their only embarrassment is to choose. A genuine court crowds around them, applauds their slightest words, lavishes flowers upon them, and plays the guitar beneath their windows. But this crowd of suitors have taken the precaution to obtain information concerning the dollars of the father or mother-in-law. In America, very few women can boast of a husband, who before marriage has not asked the question: "How much is she worth?" precisely as if he were purchasing a horse or a house.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD.

This road, which extends from the South Cove, Boston, to Plymouth, a distance of thirty-seven and a half miles, cost, embracing road and equipment, $1,397,055. The act incorporating the Old Colony Railroad Company passed the Legislature March 16, 1844, and the road was opened for travel on the 19th of November, 1845. The corporation was not fully organized until the 25th of June, 1844, when the following gentlemen were chosen directors: namely, John Sever, Addison Gilmore, Uriel Crocker, Isaac L. Hedge, Nathan Carruth, Jacob H. Loud, and William Thomas. The earnings of the road for the transportation of passengers, for the few days prior to the 1st of December, 1845, amounted to $3,827. The number of miles run by the passenger trains, from its partial opening on the 10th of November, to December 1st of the same year, was 2,550. The H rail, weighing fifty six pounds per yard, is used. Maximum grade, with its length in main road, is thirty nine and six tenths feet; length six thousand feet. The total rise and fall in main road is 5,072 feet; the total length of straight line is a few feet more than thirty miles. The total number of miles run by passenger, freight, and other trains in 1846, was 105,465. The average rate of speed adopted for passenger trains, including stops, is twenty nine miles per hour.

We recently passed over this road, and it affords us great pleasure to speak of its excellent management. In passing between Boston and Plymouth we made fifteen stops, to put down and take up passengers, and reached Plymouth in an hour and three-quarters. Mr. Sampson, the Conductor of the train we had the good fortune to take on that occasion, is admirably well qualified for his station;—indeed it is seldom that we meet with one in that capacity so intelligent, and withal so gentlemanly in deportment. The importance of securing such men as conductors cannot be too highly estimated by the directors of our railroads. The following table exhibits the different towns through which the railroad passes, the distances, and the rates of fares:—

Towns.	Miles.	Fares.
Boston
Dorchester,	4	$0 12 1/2
Neponset,	5 1/2	0 15
Quincy,	8	0 25
Braintree,	10 1/2	0 30
South Braintree,	11 1/2	0 33
North Abington,	15	0 45
Abington,	10 1/2	0 50
South Abington,	21	0 55
North Hanson,	23 1/4	0 60
South Hanson,	24 3/4	0 65
Hatfield,	28	0 75
Plymouth,	30	0 80
Kingston,	34 1/4	0 90
Plymouth,	37 1/2	1 00

The length of the Bridgewater Branch, which connects with the "Old Colony Road" at South Abington, and belongs to the same Company, is six and a half miles in length. It passes through Northville, Joppa, and East Bridgewater, to Bridgewater, twenty seven and a half miles from Boston; fare, sixty five cents. The rates of freight on the Old Colony Road are quite moderate. Coal, iron, manure, lumber, corn, grain, sugar, salt, butter, groceries, and dry goods, are transported over it at four and a half cents per ton per mile; light and bulky merchandise at the same rate; a ton measuring one hundred and forty cubic feet. The charge for transporting horses is six and three quarter cents; two wheeled carriages, four and a half cents; stage coaches, omnibuses, etc, nine cents per mile. The total income of the road from all sources in 1846, was $125,711; and the net earnings, after deducting expenses, $68,451. This road intersects with the Fall River Railroad at South Braintree, eleven and a half miles from Boston. Should, however, the Fall River Company succeed in procuring a charter, which is in contemplation, they will extend their road to Boston, varying the route but little from that of the "Old Colony."

No road in New England, so far as we are acquainted, has been more judiciously or carefully managed; which is saying a great deal, in a section of the country where the railroad system has been carried to so high a point of perfection. The president, Mr. Nathan Carruth, a retired merchant, is a thorough-going business man, and devotes much of his time in promoting the interests of the company. The directors were exceedingly fortunate in securing the services of Mr. J. H. Moore, a gentleman of large experience in the management of railroads, and one of the most accomplished superintendents in the country.

We have no recent data at hand to exhibit the earnings of this road for the past year, and must therefore await the publication of the annual report, which is made up some time during the present month.—Hunt's Merchant's Magazine.

EVERY DAY PIETY.

There is generally more of true piety exhibited in the faithful observance of the minor duties of religion, than those that excite the notice and applause of men. Improper motives may prompt the public duties while those duties that escape men's eyes, are not likely to be practised by an unrenowned person.

There was more piety in the devotion of Nathaniel when he bowed alone beneath the fig-tree, than in all the ostentatious prayers of the phylactery adorned Pharisee at the corner of the streets.

The poor widow who modestly cast into the treasury her hard earned mite, gave greater evidence of piety than did the wealthy Jew, whose golden coin rattled their own praise as they fell into the chest. Desire of applause, pride of consistency, dread of censure, prompts to external devotedness, but only piety towards God can lead perseveringly and joyfully to the closet—to the chamber of affliction and poverty—to the alleys and lanes—in search of opportunity to do good. This child is dutiful who obeys his father's requirements, but that child is more dutiful who obeys his father's requests in little matters—who seeks opportunities to please, and who watches for occasion to show his love. So general obedience may warrant the belief that the man is a christian, but he furnishes greater evidence of love to God whose full heart overlooks no little thing that may please him or glorify his name. There was no piety in Peter's burst of zeal, when he heaved off the ear of the high priest's servant but there was in Mary's quiet approach, when her raiment tears washed the Saviour's feet. The unostentatious duties of Christianity, those that never win public applause—that only find place in the pure tenor of ordinary life are more satisfactory proofs of the power of godliness upon the heart, than any ebullitions of piety or spasmodic starts of devotion.

A MAID'S DIARY.

- At 12 years, anxious for coming out, and the attentions of men.
- Begins to have some idea of the tender passion.
- Talks of love in a cottage, and disinterested affection.
- Fancies herself in love with some handsome man who has flattered her.
- Is a little more difficult on account of being noticed.
- Commences fashionable dashes.
- Still more confidence in her attractions, and expects a brilliant establishment.
- Refuses a good offer because he is not a man of fashion.
- Flirts with every man she meets.
- Wonders she is not married.
- Rather more circumspect in her conduct.
- Begins to think a large fortune not quite superfluous.
- Refuses the company of rational men to flirting.
- Wishes to be married in a quiet way, with a comfortable income.
- Almost despairs entering the married state.
- Kafer fearful of being called an old maid.
- An additional love of dress.
- Professing to dislike balls, finding it difficult to get good partners.
- Wonders how men can leave the society of sensible women to flirt with chits.
- Affects good humor in her conversation with men.
- Jealous of the praise of women.
- Quarrels with her friend who is lately married.
- Thinks herself slighted in society.
- Likes talking of her acquaintance who are married unfortunately, and finds consolation in their misfortunes.
- Ill-nature increases.
- Very meddling and officious.
- If rich, as a dancier resort, makes love to a young man without fortune.
- Not succeeding, rails against the sex.
- Partiality for cards, and scandal commences.

- Strong predilection for the parson of the parish.
- Enraged at his desertion.
- Becomes desponding, and takes snuff.
- Turns all her sensibility to cats and dogs.
- Becomes disgusted with the whole world.

LUCKY ESCAPE OF AN EDITOR. An editor out west, lately made a most lucky escape from the entanglements of the knot matrimonial. The story goes that a very beautiful girl had captivated his fancy, and he was rapidly sinking into the hopeless state of far-gone-activeness. She was the daughter of a stranger who lately rented a house right opposite our friend's den. He had watched her very frequently seated near the window, and conceived the most extravagant notion of her personal beauty, adding, as a matter of course, all other possible accomplishments. He put off, from day to day his intentions of calling and being introduced, but at length, one evening, being completely carried away by the force of the tender sentiment, he ventured to knock at her father's door. No one appearing, he repeated his blows with some vehemence, when a coarse and not very musical voice thus addressed him: "Look ye here, man, if you don't quit making that rumpus down thar and clar yourself, I'll send a fellow as will wallop you in short order." Raising his eyes he beheld his fair one leaning out of the window, shaking her fist at him as she spoke, and with a pretty considerable flush on her pretty face. He was struck dumb with astonishment, and stood for an instant riveted to the spot; but he soon recovered his senses, in a double sense, and made his escape (also in a double sense) upon which event he congratulated himself and the public in his next number.

THE LOST PIE.

It was many years ago, that a middle aged matron and her maiden sister, on the approach of Thanksgiving, were in the midst of preparations for that annual festival. It was late in the evening; the spacious kitchen seemed all too small for the vast quantities of delicacies it contained. Often had the various kinds of pies been drawn from the ample oven, and deposited on dresser, table and chairs, in admirable confusion. From early morning to this late hour, had the mistress of all this good cheer been laboring hard, and she now threw her portly and wearied form into the great arm chair to view her treasures. She carefully counted over the pies, and lo! one was gone! She knew the capacity of the oven, and how many times it had been filled, and her arithmetic told her by figures that will not lie, that a pie was missing. She counted again, and the wanderer could not be found. She was troubled, perplexed, and nervous. She had made the discovery that the missing pie was a pumpkin pie—of extra size—a particular pie—all ornamented with scalloped rim and various indentations with spoon and tumbler; in a word it was the pie which was to grace the centre of the table at the Thanksgiving feast. No wonder then that our good lady grew warm with agitation and it seemed to her that an unwanted warthog came from the seat of the arm chair. She arose to cool her body and calm her troubled spirit when a scream from Becky, the maiden sister, opened a full way to the catastrophe. It seems that the good lady had placed the unlucky pie in the great arm chair, and unfortunately threw herself into her accustomed seat. When she arose, the horror-struck Becky saw the yellow treasure sticking to the ample rear of the good matron like a "Poor man's Plaster"; and her hysteric screams made known the discovery to her astonished sister.

ADVANTAGE OF HAVING A GOOD WIFE. It is astonishing to see how well a man may live on a small income, who has a handy and industrious wife. Some men live and make a far better appearance on six or eight dollars a week, than others do on fifteen or eighteen dollars. The man does his part well but the wife is good for nothing. She will even upbraid her husband for not living in as good style as her neighbor while the fault is entirely her own. His neighbor has a good wife. His wife, on the other hand, is a whirlpool into which a great many silver cups might be thrown and the appearance of the waters would remain unchanged. No Nicholas, the diver, is there to restore the wasted treasure. It is only an insult for such a woman to talk to her husband about her love and devotion.

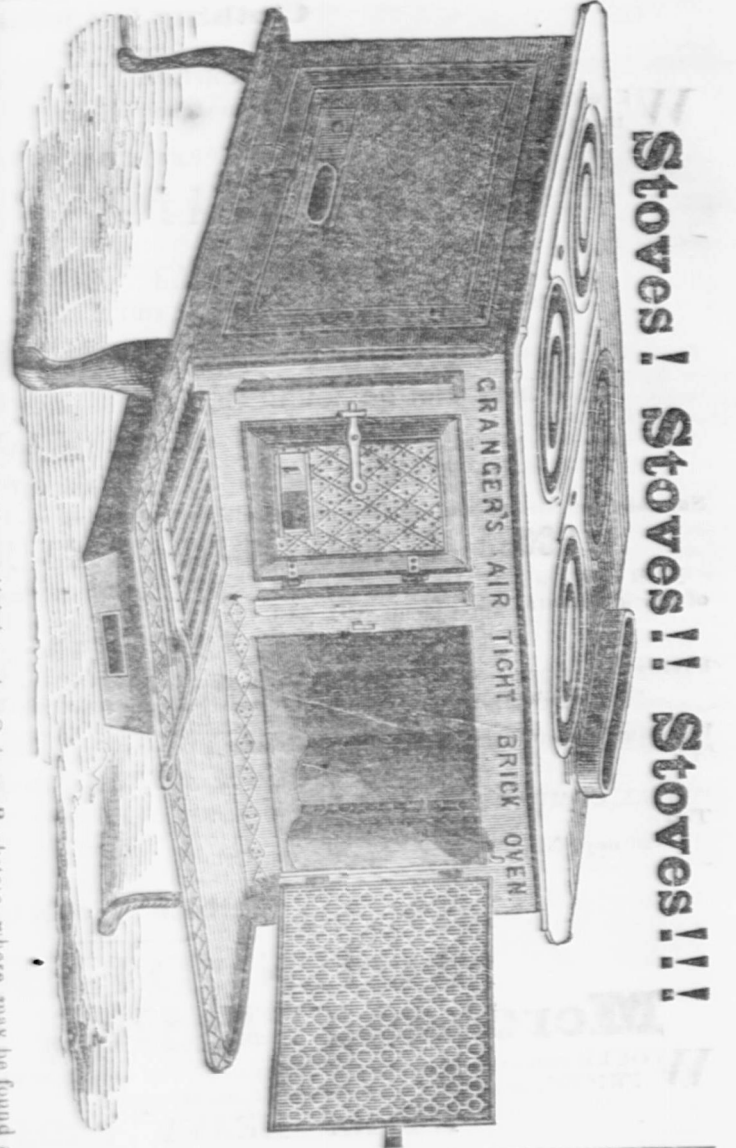

THE CONTRAST. Every body would laugh to see the dames of seventy-six walking our streets. What a spectacle! Women old enough to be married, with homespun gowns, calico calashes, cowhide shoes, and fourpenny handkerchiefs. They would walk by us full of animation—with rosy cheeks and bright eyes; not dull and insipid, as if on eggs, or with dry goods sufficient to melt them down; fairs! how we should like to see one of our great-grandmothers of 75 by the side of a lady of 47! One in her native simplicity—the other the devotee of fashion. No wonder we had excellent mothers, and that so many of them lived to be aged. Now at thirty years of age, women are about done to, for all the practical purposes of life; but then they had rarely left their mother's fireside. You can rarely find a woman of forty years of age. They are either seventy or about twenty. If thus the stock of females depreciate, what will our nation become in fifty years? Verily there must be a new leaf turned over, and a new state of things brought about.

SHUT THE DOOR. When you enter a neighbor's house, shop, or store, the first of all shut the door behind you; and also when leaving it, don't stand to parley at an open door, with a northwester blowing into the house, but for decency's sake, for comfort's sake, pass out speedily and shut the door.

For the Quincy Patriot.

Moderate Drinkers.

Is it not singular, that amid all the light that has been pouring in upon the community on the subject of temperance, there should be any so reckless as to persist in raising the intoxicating cup to their lips? Strange as it is, such is the fact. There are those, both old and young, male and female, who still maintain the position as tenable, that a "little" spirit does no harm, but sometimes a great deal of good, and that they are the best judges when that little is needed. They say they do not wish to be under the necessity of calling in a physician to inform them whether they need a little or not; it is inconvenient; and I understand that there is a temperance society in this town which will accommodate all who are of the same opinion and will live up to it. Alas, how many, notwithstanding all the warning they have had, rush upon assured destruction; who, though they know it not, nine out of ten, are weaving their own winding sheets and driving the nails into their own coffins. THE CHAIR EDITORIAL. On entering our office, a few days since, we were agreeably surprised to find a new and very acceptable "chair editorial" all prepared for our occupancy with the following note:—

DEAR SIR—We present you this Chair, as an humble expression of our friendship and regard. In soliciting your acceptance of this gift, we trust it may prove a fundamental support to your comfort, and within its arms you may long enjoy that Optimum cum dignitate, which past services so richly merit. It is just the article we needed, and with its cushioned seat, round back and substantial arms an effort will be made to add additional interest to our columns which our friends have been pleased to deem worthy of such a gift. We presume the chair is itself imbued with the benevolence of the gentlemanly donors, and possesses power to impart the same qualities to others. Without further remarks, we gratefully return our thanks for this gift, and shall endeavor in the line of our duty to do the twelfth which may be considered equivalent in part to their generous intentions.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD—Hunt's Merchant's Magazine. The December number of this extensively popular Magazine has been received, which completes its seventeenth volume. Under the head of "Railroad, Canal and Steamboat Statistics," an article is published concerning the Old Colony Railroad, which we have transferred to our columns in the present number of the paper. The editor of the Merchant's Magazine speaks in favorable terms of the President of the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, Nathan Carruth, Esq., and no man is more deserving of praise for his efforts to promote the well interest of the Corporation, and as a gentleman, all who know how to appreciate that title will award to him the character of a courteous, discerning and an assiduous agent of the best regulated railroad corporation in Massachusetts. The Merchant's Magazine editor also remarks of the Superintendent of this road, and we gladly endorse his language, that "the Directors were fortunate in securing the services of J. H. Moore, a gentleman of large experience in the management of railroads, and one of the most accomplished Superintendents in the country." Reference is also made and with truth, to the Conductor, Mr. John A. Sampson, who is praised for his gentlemanly deportment, general intelligence, and admirable qualifications for his station. Other officers on this route, are deserving of praise, but they probably escaped notice. Among these we would mention Mr. A. H. Moore, who, in his sphere of ticket gathering, is a man of much management, and speaks in any other terms than the most favorable. He is always gentlemanly, ready at all times to give information, and possesses the qualifications so essential to one in his situation.

The leading articles in the present issue of the Merchant's Magazine are not inferior to any that have been published; and the editor in the statistical and other departments of the work, shows that assiduity and attention which has placed his Magazine the first certainly in this country, if not in the civilized world.

THE UNION MAGAZINE, Israel Post, 140 Nassau St., (N. Y.) In the January number of the Union we find an unusual variety of the best literary matter—among which we designate especially, a criticism on Borne's Letter by W. C. Bryant—a story called "Love and Murder" by John Broughman—"The Thirving Family" a national song in Berninger style by Mrs. Sigourney—No. 7 of the editor's "Western Sketches"—"Letters from a Southerner in N. Y." by Mrs. Dana—a long and fine poem by Edith May—and "The Bewildered Savage" a deeply interesting story of the Caffers by Mrs. Child. We must not omit "De Warrenne before King Edward" by Mrs. Osmond—it is a forcible, spirited poem. The illustrations are even unusually numerous, costly, and excellent. There are twelve in all—two mezzotints (one by Doney and one by Saddy), a line engraving in the best style by Osborne, a richly colored fashion-plate and eight wood cut illustrations of the various contributed and editorial papers. There are, moreover, two pages of original music by Mrs. Hull. Altogether the January number of the Union is without equal.

FALL RIVER RAILROAD. The receipts on this road for passengers and merchandise, for six months ending Nov. 30, were $82,547.52. The Directors have declared a dividend of three dollars per share, payable the first Monday in January next to persons holding stock on the 20th of December.

TAKEN UP. A Horse and Buggy, taken up near the North School House, in this town, on Friday morning, can be found at the house of Mr. J. W. Sanborn, corner of Hancock and Squantum streets.

"THE JOHN DONKEY." The first number of a satirical paper, to be issued weekly at Philadelphia, under the above title has been received. It has for its motto—"Stand up to the rack, fodder or no fodder." Redding & Co., Boston, agents. Price three dollars.

"THE CONVICT, OR THE HYPOCRITE UNMASKED," a tale by J. P. R. James, Esq. We have received from the publishers, Messrs. Wilson & Co. 15 Spruce street, New York, a copy of the above tale, being No. 107 of the Library of Select Novels.

THE LADIES' EXCHANGE. Success in business, especially where that business is managed with acknowledged skill and judgment, is very likely to excite the envy of the evil-minded and malicious in the community. It is only in view of this fact, says the Boston Journal, that we can account for the unfounded reports which now for the third time have been put in circulation, in relation to the Ladies' Exchange, No. 192 Washington St., Boston. These reports are not likely to do injury in the city, where they can be readily contradicted, but being extensively circulated in other places, they are calculated to do mischief. The rumor to which we refer is the failure of George W. Warren & Co. Now we understand from best authority, that there is not one word of truth in this rumor, and more that there is not the remotest cause for its circulation. The Ladies' Exchange is now in the full tide of success, and never was there a greater demand for the goods on sale, and never a greater call for them. It is now near the close of a five years' business, and the managers of the concern, in order to bring matters to a point, are selling off their entire stock at greatly reduced prices. The success of this firm, has fully established the fact that the one price system is the only truly profitable one for both buyer and seller. As proof of success we may mention that the business of this concern the present year more than doubles that of its first year. We refer our readers to an advertisement of Messrs. Warren & Co., in another column.

A ROGUE ARRESTED. THOMAS KERRIN, as he gave his name, was arrested last Saturday night, in the act of entering the Depot of the Old Colony Railroad in this town. On searching his trunks, property stolen from George H. French, Albert J. Mosher and Whitcomb Porter was found in his possession—he pleaded guilty at the examination to these offences. To entering the Depot, he pleaded guilty, but the Justice decided against him, requiring two thousand dollar bonds, and committed him for default.

STORE BREAKING. The store of Mr. John Dinegan, Merchant Tailor, of this town, was entered on Friday night of last week, and robbed of cloths, velvets, etc., amounting to about four hundred dollars.

SABBATH SCHOOL EXHIBITION. There will be an Exhibition at Rev. Mr. Wheeler's church next Wednesday evening, for the benefit of the Sabbath School. Admission 12 1-2 cents.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. Receipts for the six months ending November 30: from passenger fare, $76,241; freight $22,789; total $99,030. Receipts of the corresponding period of last year, $58,146; increase $30,880.

FROM MEXICO. There has been an arrival at New Orleans of a steamer, carrying a rumor that the Mexican Congress had resolved to disband the army.

MAYOR OF BOSTON. The Election of Municipal Officers was held in Boston on Monday last and resulted in the choice of the whig candidates, Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr., was re-elected Mayor by a majority of 637.

THE HARBINGER. This interesting and able periodical, recently published at "Brook Farm," West Roxbury, has been removed to New York, and now appears in an enlarged form, neatly printed, and a new spirit seems to be infused in it. A host of vigorous writers is engaged to contribute to its columns. The price is two dollars a year.

CONGRESS. Both branches have been principally engaged in forming Committees, discussing the President's Message and other business, preparatory to the labors of the session. Mr. King of this State is Chairman of the Committee on Revolutionary Claims. The death of Mr. Speight of Mississippi has been announced in both Houses. In the Senate on the 15th, Mr. Calhoun offered Resolutions against Occupying or Annexing any Mexican Territory, such an act being in his view contrary to the declared objects of War, and subversive to American liberties.

HOWARD ATHENEUM. We can call with perfect security, the attention of all our readers to the beautiful Temple of the Drama, in Howard street, Boston. Mr. Ford's efforts are ever efficient in the production of pieces that awaken and enliven the public mind. He is decidedly the Napoleon of the Stage. Time will tell in his glorious operations, the results which will entitle him to the appellation we have bestowed.

JOHN BRITON, Esq., the celebrated English antiquarian, has announced for publication, a work, in which he promises to clear up the mystery of the letters of "Junius."

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with Dr. Dudley of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRAYSON, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptible, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

Dentistry.
Dr. A. S. DUDLEY,
Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE.
No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court,
BOSTON.

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART.
And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of

Dr. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, ONCE A MONTH.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

The Firm with which Dr. D. is connected enjoys an extensive practice, and is able to compete with any establishment in the City. The senior partner, Dr. S. GRANDIN, M. D. is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plate worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonies which he has received from distinguished men:

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fitch of Philadelphia, author of a large Dental Surgery, to Dr. Dudley, dated June, 1843.

"Dr. Grandin operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has plugged several for me to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's acquirements and personal good character must, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon-Dentist."

S. F. FITCH.
From Reuben D. Mussey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, (N. H.) and at present Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"I am acquainted with Dr. Grandin, and regard him as a very skillful dentist, well qualified to operate in all the departments of the profession. Dr. G. manufactures and uses the porcelain teeth and those of superior quality, as I should judge from the tests to which I have seen them subjected. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Grandin to those who may wish to employ a good dentist."

R. D. MUSSEY.
From Parker Cleveland, M. D., Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Natural Philosophy at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, (Me.)

"I have seen the porcelain teeth manufactured by David S. Grandin, M. D., and from their composition as stated by him to me, and from the tests to which I have seen them subjected by Dr. G., I am disposed to consider them of superior quality, and not liable to be affected by any agents to which they may be exposed in the mouth. PARKER CLEVELAND.

Dr. Dudley extracts Teeth without pain when circumstances require it. Fills with pure Gold so as to preserve decayed teeth and prevent them from aching, and Inserts Mineral Teeth on gold and silver pivots without using wood, and on gold plate upon the Section or Atmospheric Principle, from a single tooth to a whole set, both with and without Gums.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
OWEN.

How charming looks the setting sun
When lovely Effie smiles on me,
And pleasant sounds the evening gun
With Effie seated on my knee.

But when my love is far away,
No pleasure brings the setting sun,
And as he dips his latest ray,
How mournful sounds the evening gun.

I lie me to my lonely bed,
And vainly seek oblivious rest,
But there's no rest for Owen's head,
Whose pillow was his Effie's breast.

My country calls me far away,
To guard the banner of the free;
My rebel heart will not obey,
It clings dear Effie still to thee.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

SEXTON! SPARE THAT GRAVE.

Sexton! spare that grave,
Touch not a single clod!
There lie the wild grass wave,
Forever o'er that sod.

Sexton! my mother sleeps
In that neglected spot;
The willow woe'er it weeps;
I pray thee touch it not.

'Twas my lord's father's hand
That placed it near her grave;
Then, sexton, let it stand,
And long in sadness wave.

Long years have pass'd away,
By gloom and care oppress'd,
Since that dark cheerless day
When she was laid to rest.

For she who sooth'd my woes,
And hush'd my cares to sleep,
Shall still in peace repose,
Tho' I am left to weep.

And there my beautiful boy
Whose pale and noble brow
Once glow'd with love and joy,
There, too, repose now.

His dust has mingled long
With her's he loved so well,
Whose evening prayer and song
Could each young care dispel.

Sexton, I love the spot,
And that old willow tree;
Your spade shall harm it not,
No, harm'd it shall not be.

THE PRINTER'S EPITAPH.
Here lies his form in pi
Beneath this bank with briars overgrown;
How many cases, far unworthier, lie
Neath some imposing stone!

No column points our loss—
No sculptured caps his history declare;
Although he lived a follower of the cross,
And member of the bar.

The golden rule he prized,
And left it as a token of his love;
And all his deeds, corrected, and revised,

The copy of his wrongs—
The proofs of all his piety—are there;
And the fair tale which to truth belongs,
Will prove his title fair.

Though now in death's embrace,
A mouldering heap our luckless brother lies;
He'll re-appear on Gabriel's royal chase,
And frisket to the skies.

ANECDOTES.

A French child said to the parish priest—"Why did I, my father, that we ask every day for our daily bread, instead of asking our bread for every week, or every month, or the whole year?" "Why, you little goose, so as always to have it fresh."

"This fellow," said a witness in one of the courts the other day, "broke our window with a later, and hit Isabella on the elbow, as she was playing on the pianer." The magistrate said—"The conduct of primish, and his general character, render it propah that he should no longer be a membah of societah."

A lady recently called at a store and inquired of a young clerk for "cruel." Not willing to appear ignorant, nor exactly comprehending her, he handed down a regular twisted cowskin. "Why," said the lady, "that is not what I want." "Well," replied the boy, "that is the cruellest thing I know of."

In the New York Legislature, a member paused in the midst of a remarkably windy speech, to take a drink of water. Another member named Bloss, rose to a point of order. Every body stared, wondering what the point of order was.

"What is it?" said the speaker.
"I think, sir," said Bloss, "it is out of order for a wind mill to go by water."

"There is no truth in man," said a lady. "They are like musical instruments, which sound a variety of tones." "In other words, madam," said a wit, who chanced to be present, "you believe that all men are liars."

"Bill Tompkins, what is a widow?"
"A widder, sir, is a married woman, that haint got no husband, cause he's dead."

"Very well. What is a widower?"
"A widener is a man what runs after the widders."

"Well, Bill, that is not exactly according to Johnson; but it will do."

An aged bald-headed teacher, told an impudent boy the story of Elijah and the bears. When he had done the boy said—"Go up, bald head, now bring on your bears?"

Araminta managed, with the help of her mother, to dress herself, and thereby was enabled to make appearance in the dining room, with her heavy blue eyes and dress to match, about the time of her father's entrance; her appetite being unusually good, she contrived to swallow a bit of roast beef, and succeeded in eating three lima beans, after gracefully taking the skin off of each one.—'Pa,' said she very languidly, 'I heard some one at the party last night speaking of a delightful ghost story—Hamlet, I believe, is the name of the man that saw the spectre, and I do wish you would get it for me; if it is in two volumes you needn't mind about it though, as I should never get time to read it—who knows but what it is as interesting as Dombey?'

'It would not be to you,' he replied very gravely.

'Then don't trouble yourself about it, Pa. You know my taste, and can easily judge, but I do wish another number would come—I'm so anxious to know if sweet Florence has heard from her beau, Walter Gay, and if he ever intends to come back again; where was it he went, Pa, to Mexico?'

'Mexico, fiddlesticks, child! no he went to the Indies, and I know where I have a notion to send you?'

'O where, Pa? this is delightful weather for travelling.'

'To school,' replied her impatient father, 'for you mortify me to death with your stupidity. However, your mother tells me tomorrow will be your eighteenth birthday, and I suppose you will expect a handsome present. Now, as you have an idea of being married before a great while, 'tis quite time you understood the practical part of house-keeping, and my gift to you shall be a good sized broom or a scrubbing brush, which I shall insist on your using.'

But Araminta had fainted before the conclusion of his sentence.

'Only see what you have done,' exclaimed his wife as she ran in haste to her daughter's assistance.

'Don't disturb yourself,' said her husband, 'she has only fainted, and I'll warrant she comes to in time for this evening's concert. If she would take more healthful exercise she could hardly stop the circulation at so short a notice, and with this consoling speech, Mr. Makedo went to his counting house. Kitty was called again to bring the cologne-bottle and fan from Araminta's room, beside the other odd jobs which left little time for the kitchen department; but by dint of hard labor and perseverance, she found time to take the children a walking, and then hurried home to get supper.

At the tea table, Mr. Makedo said the bread was sour. The blame, as usual, rested on Kitty, who was immediately summoned to account for it. When she made her appearance she gave a piteous detail of the events of the morning—how she had to do so many errands after the bread was all ready for baking, that she could not help it.

Her mistress said that was no excuse whatever, as she might have hurried even more than she did and then the bread would have been sweet and good.

Mr. Makedo looked frowningly at his wife and daughter.

'Susan,' said he to the former, 'if Araminta had at least been taught to wait on herself a little, and give some assistance in the house, Kitty would not be thus imposed on; as it is, you have absolutely ruined your child; yet if you would dress her less foolishly and expensively, you would then find yourself able to keep more help on your own account.'

His wife put her laced pocket handkerchief to her eyes, and his daughter was looking for a convenient place to swoon; and for fear of another scene the unhappy husband and father left the apartment.

Mrs. Makedo went below to give that lazy Kitty, as she termed her, a complete blowing up.

'It seems to me, Kitty, you complain a great deal about nothing—pray where did you live before you came here?'

The poor girl, being fairly roused, replied that she lived with Mrs. Harris, who was something like a lady, and never expected too much from her.

'I used to know her very well; pray why did you leave her?'

'Because her oldest daughter had left school, and she said she wished her to learn to work; but while there was so much help in the house, she hadn't half a chance; so as Nancy, the other girl, had been there longer than I had, she sent me away with kind words and useful presents.'

'I can't think,' answered Mrs. Makedo, 'that Mrs. Harris would do so ungentle a thing as to oblige her daughter to do housework; but I'll call there soon, and find out for myself.'

True to her word Mrs. Makedo called to see Mrs. Harris, on the following Tuesday, and Lucy Harris, the oldest daughter, answered the bell, which somewhat shocked her ideas of propriety. 'Why, dear Lucy,' she said, how flushed you look—have you a fever, or what is the matter?'

Lucy, radiant with health and good humor, said she was entirely well, but had been ironing all the morning, and as Nancy was sweeping the third story, she told her she would tend to the bell in her absence.

Mrs. Harris now entered the parlor, and Lucy, after excusing herself, returned to her work.

'How do you do, my dear Susan,' said Mrs. Harris, cordially extending her hand to welcome her guest.

'I'm very well I thank you, Mary.'

'And how is Araminta and the children?'

'O! dear, the children are well, but troublesome, as usual, though I don't know much about them. Araminta is often dull, and has no appetite at all. Poor thing, as Mrs. Chick said of old Dombey's first wife I fear she'll never be able to make an effort. 'Tis hardly worth while to ask after Lucy she looks so very rosy, almost too much so to suit my taste; by the way I heard from our Kitty, that you had put her to work, and one reason for my calling was to know the truth of it—have you really done such an out of the way thing?'

'I am very happy to answer in the affirmative, Susan; when she left school, her occupation seemed gone; she became listless and languid; her appetite left her, and in our anxiety we consulted a physician in regard to her health. He told us the best thing for her was daily and regular exercise, though moderate at first until her strength could bear more. So, after Mr. Harris and myself had talked the matter over, I dismissed one of the girls, and went hand in hand for a while with Lucy to encourage her. She now makes all the beds in the house before breakfast, sweeps the chambers occasionally, always helps to iron the clothes, and frequently assists in cooking; you must drink tea with us soon, and taste some of her bread, it is so delicious.'

'But don't she dress herself in her best, and walk out every day?—my Araminta could not exist without that.'

'She is always neat in her dress, but seldom walks out merely for a promenade. She is interested in every household department, and has sufficient exercise in doors for her health. Her appetite and spirits are both good, and we are glad that we had the firmness to make her useful and thereby happy; her needle too, is not idle, as I am frequently indebted to her for much assistance with the children's garments.'

'What will Araminta think of all this?' said Mrs. Makedo; 'why, Mary, we only keep one girl, though I often think there's enough work in the house for two; but it never entered my head to call on my daughter for help. Dear me, she is the most waited on in the family.'

'I hope you will be encouraged Susan, to do as I have done, and bestow a little of the care on her, that your mother bestowed on you; for fashionable as you have become, you cannot disguise the truth that you were taught to work as well as myself. Do you not remember when we lived neighbors in the country, the many useful lessons our mothers gave us; and when our husbands courted our favor, do you suppose they thought the less of us for being industrious?'

'It is different in a city, Mary.'

'The difference, Susan, is only in our own minds, and arises from false pride. I have chosen to stick to first principles, believing it will save my mind from unhappiness in the future. The fate of nations depends in a great measure, on a mother's training; and parents cannot be too much alive to their great responsibilities, I beg you will consider this subject deeply, and pray for right wisdom to direct you.'

Mrs. Makedo had listened in silence. Then her thoughts went back to her childhood's home, beautiful and refreshing to her memory, as to herself, when innocent thoughts and childish sports made an Eden of that secluded spot; when the gay song of the early birds awakened her from health breathing slumbers, and she arose with the dawn light-hearted and happy, to perform her daily duties; trifling they were, perhaps, in reality, but rendered important and regularly exacted by a mother, anxious for her daughter's welfare, and ever watchful to direct her youthful footsteps in the way that brings peace here and happiness in the world to come; alas! where stood she now? It seemed as though all those early lessons and sweet counsels had been buried in the grave of her departed mother. The rank weeds had come up and smothered the young buds of promise; how thought she have fulfilled the trust toward the immortal soul committed to my care. The ways of high life in a fashionable city have blinded my judgment and better knowledge; my child has grown up beneath my eye ignorant of all that truly ennobles and exalts our natures—vanity and love of dress the only aim of her existence.

'Tis too late now, Mary?' said Mrs. Makedo, as she arose in haste to take her departure; 'tis too late to undo the deep injury I have done my daughter; if she still lives she will have plenty of trouble, like the rest of us; and in her hours of trial she will, perhaps, and justly too, blame her mother for not teaching her better how to meet and bear it. I will go home and talk to my husband; I know his heart will gladden at the prospect of a reform in this matter; he will encourage me to do what is yet in my power for Araminta—and I promise you, my dear Mary, to try and take the rest of my children in good season for their improvement.'

Mothers, who read this, go ye and do likewise.

STEAM. 'Steam,' said Mr. Webster, in a recent speech, 'is on the rivers, and the boatsmen may repose on their oars, it is in the highways, and begins to exert itself along the courses of land conveyances; it is at the bottom of mines a thousand feet below the earth's surface; it is in the mill, and in the workshops of the traders. It rows, it pumps, it excavates it carries, it draws, it lifts, it hammers, it weaves, it spins, it prints.'

PAY AS YOU GO. The editor of the Boston Investigator says one hundred dollars in a community acting upon the pay as you go principle, will go farther and do more than five hundred in a community where every body is debtor and creditor—where every sixpence has to be chased till it costs more than it is worth, and the labor of getting exceeds the labor of earning.

SAD CHANGES OF FORTUNE.

'Do you give out work here?' said a voice so soft, so low, so lady-like, that I involuntarily started and looked up.

'Do you give out work here?'

'Not to strangers,' was the rude reply; the stranger turned and walked away.

I left the shop and followed the strange lady. Passing Thompson's she paused—went in—hesitated—then turned and came out. I now saw her face—it was very pale—her hair, dark as night, was parted on her forehead—her eyes, too, were very black, and there was a wildness in them that made me shudder. She passed on up Broadway to Grand street, where she entered a miserable looking dwelling. I paused—should I follow further? She was evidently suffering much. I was blessed in husband, children, friends! I knocked—the door was opened by a cross looking woman.

'Is there a person living here who does plain sewing?' I inquired.

'I guess not,' was the reply. 'There is a woman up stairs, who used to work, but she can't get any more to do—and I shall turn her out to-morrow.'

'Let me go up,' said I, passing the woman with a shudder, I ascended the stairs.

'You can keep on to the garret,' she screamed after me, and so I did—and there I saw a sight, of which I, the child of affluence, had never dreamed! The lady had thrown off her hat, and was kneeling by the side of a poor low bed. Her hair had fallen over her shoulders, she sobbed not, breathed not—but seemed motionless—her face buried in the covering of the wretched, miserable bed, on which lay her husband. He was sleeping. I looked upon his high, pale forehead, around which clung masses of damp brown hair, it was knit, and the pale hand clenched the bedclothes—words broke from his lips—I cannot pay you now, I heard him say. Poor fellow! Even in his dreams, his poverty haunted him. I could bear it no longer, and knocked gently at the door. The lady raised her hand, threw back her long black hair, and gazed wildly on me. It was no time for ceremony; sickness, sorrow, want, perhaps starvation, were before me. I came to look for a person to do plain work, was all I could say.

'Oh, give it to me,' she sobbed. 'Two days we have not tasted food! and to-morrow —'

She gasped and tried to finish the sentence, but could not. She knew that to-morrow they would be both homeless and starving.

'Be comforted, you shall want no more.'

I kept my word. In a few days she told me all; of days of happiness in a sunny West Indian Isle, her childhood's home. Of the death of her father and mother, of a cruel sister and brother-in-law; how she left that home hoping to find a brother in America; how she sought in vain, but found instead, a husband; he, too, an Englishman, a gentleman, a scholar, had been thrown upon the world. Sympathy deepened into love; alone in a crowd, all the world to each other, they married. He procured employment in a school; she, plain needle work. Too close attention to the duties of his school, long walks, and scanty fare, brought ill health, and confined him at length to his bed.

The shop from which this poor wife obtained work failed, and their resources were cut off. She had looked long weary days for employment, many had none to give, others gave no work to strangers. Thus I found them, to comfort them for a little time; then, I trust, they found a comforter in Heaven!

The husband died first; died, placing the hand of the poor wife in mine. It needed not the mute appealing look he gave me. I took her to my own happy home—but it was too late.

It is a very little time ago, I went one morning to her room. She had passed a restless night; had dreamed, she said, of her dear George; she called me her kind and only friend; begged me to sit a little while beside her, and looked up so sadly in my face, that my own heart seemed well nigh breaking. I left her not again.

In the still dead night, I heard her murmur, 'Sister Anne, do not speak so harshly to me! Oh, mamma, why do you leave me?' Then again she said, 'Give me an orange, my sister; I am very faint.' Her soul was again in her own sunny home.

'Lay me by my George, and God will bless you,' were her last words to me. I led my bused children to look upon her sweet pale face, as she lay in her coffin. They had never seen sorrow or death and then I gave them the first knowledge of both; then I told them of the sin, the cruelty of those who wound the 'stranger's' heart.

CHOPPING FEED. As grain when chopped goes farther than when fed whole, by at least twenty-five per cent. all grain fed to horses and cattle should be thus prepared and mixed with cut straw or hay. This saving in the consumption of grain is worthy of being attended to as it will enable the farmer to sell so much more than he otherwise could, thereby putting so much more money into his pocket. But independent of the saving, by chopping the grain you present it in a form to the stomach of the animal which is easier digested, and which, consequently, tends more to encourage the elaboration of flesh and fat.

A man that knows how to speak, knows when to be silent.

WHAT A MERCHANT SHOULD BE.

A merchant should be an honorable man. Although a man cannot be an honorable man without being an honest man, yet a man may be strictly honest without being honorable. Honesty refers to pecuniary affairs; honor refers to the principles and feelings. You may pay your debts punctually, you may defraud no man, and yet you may act dishonorably. You act dishonorably, when you give your correspondents a worse opinion of your rivals in trade than you know they deserve. You act dishonorably when you sell your commodities at less than their real value, in order to get away your neighbor's customers. You act dishonorably when you purchase at more than market price, in order that you may raise the market upon another buyer. You act dishonorably when you draw accommodation bills, and pass them to your banker for discount, as if they arose out of real transactions. You act dishonorably in every case wherein your external conduct is at variance with your real opinions. You act dishonorably, if, when carrying on a prosperous trade, you do not allow your servants and assistants, through whose exertions you obtain your success, to participate in your property. You act dishonorably, if, after you have become rich, you are unmindful of the favors you received when poor. In all these cases there may be no intentional fraud. It may not be dishonest; but it is dishonorable conduct.—Gilbert's Lecture on Ancient Commerce.

NEVER GIVE UP. Who are our rich men? Our distinguished men?—our most useful men? Those who have been cast down, but not destroyed—who when the breeze of adversity swept away their props, sought new standards—pushed on, looked up and became what you behold them now. A glorious sentence and worthy to be inspired—Never give up! Men are not made—they make themselves. A steady perseverance—a determination never to sink, though millstones were heaped about their neck—is the true doctrine. It is this that has made the wilderness to blossom—that has given wings to the ocean—filled valleys—levelled mountains, and built up the great cities of the world. Who then is a fool, and yields smirking before the blast? Who is a sucking, and cowers before a cloud? Is it you, young man, stout, strong and healthy as you are? Shame—shame on you. You are big enough to possess an iron heart, and to break down mountains at a blow. Up, and let this be a day of your redemption. Resolve to be a fool no longer—even if you are obliged to stand with a red hot iron upon your brow—never give up!

LAUGHING IN THE PULPIT. Said a Presbyterian minister of some authority, I never laughed in the pulpit only on one occasion, and that came near procuring my discharge from the ministry. About one of the first discourses I was called upon to deliver, subsequent to my ordination, after reading my text and opening my subject, my attention was directed to a man with a very foolish dress, and a head of exceeding red hair. In a slip immediately behind this young gentleman sat an archbishop, who must have been urged on in his vicinity by the evil one himself, for I do not conceive the younger thought of the jest he was playing off on the spruce dandy in front of him. The boy held his forefinger in the red hair of the dandy, about as long as a blacksmith would a nailrod in the fire to heat, and then on his knee, commenced pounding his finger, in imitation of a smith making a nail. The thing was so ludicrous that I laughed, the only time I ever disgraced the pulpit with anything like mirth.

THE DIFFERENCE. Folks don't go to bed now-a-days—they retire. Nobody eats dinner—people take some refreshments. Nobody goes to church—but people attend divine service. There is no Sunday—it is Sabbath. No one gets a tooth pulled—it is extracted. Instead of drinking tea or coffee—the fashionable only sip a little. No one tears a hole in his pantalons—but it is no rare thing he lacerates them. The ladies don't go a visiting—they only make calls. Young men don't go a courting—they only step in to spend the evening. Our grandmas used hard back chairs, but our belles, have stuffed backs to their seats.

VIRTUE. Bad as the world is, respect is always paid to virtue. Whether science, business, or public life be your aim, virtue still enters for a principal ingredient into all these departments of society. It is connected with eminence in every liberal art; reputation in every branch of fair and useful business; and with distinction in every public station. The vigor which it imparts to the mind, the weight which it adds to the character, the general sentiment which it breathes, the fortitude which it inspires, the diligence which quickens, are the sure foundation of all that is great and valuable in life.

IS IT SO? Macnish, in one of his essays says, 'I have remarked, and Gil Blas's mother did the same thing, that women generally bear a great dislike to their son's wives.' This is the more remarkable, as they are almost always fond of their sons-in-law. Can any person explain the why and the wherefore of these singular facts?

Stoves! Stoves!! Stoves!!!

John A. Green, Editor.

MEXICAN NEWS. Advice from Vera Cruz to the 7th inst. have been received. Gen. Anaya had been elected President of Mexico by the Mexican Congress. Santa Anna was engaged in collecting an army. It was generally thought in Mexico that the war would not end for some time.

It is rumored that Generals Worth and Pillow had been arrested by order of Gen. Scott, on the ground that they had reflected on the commander-in-chief in certain correspondence.

CONGRESSIONAL. In the Senate, on the 20th, Mr. Webster took his seat. A number of petitions were presented, and Jan. 4th was assigned for the consideration of Mr. Calhoun's resolutions on the war. The death of Mr. Dromgoole was announced. The House was mostly occupied with the presenting of petitions and memorials.

A bill to repeal the pilot law was read twice in the Senate on the 21st. In the House, the resolution of Mr. Adams, calling for information concerning the claims of Mexico under the convention of 1839, was adopted. A variety of other business of no general importance came before the body.

On the 22d, in the Senate, a petition was presented from the widow of Alexander Hamilton, praying that Congress purchase a thousand copies of the Hamilton papers. Several anti-slavery petitions were presented by Mr. Hale of New Hampshire. In the House, a bill was passed appropriating one million dollars to supply the deficiency in the subsistence department.

In the Senate on the 23d, the appropriation bill from the House was read twice. A great variety of petitions, resolutions, bills etc. were presented, and the death of the late Gen. Hamer was announced from the House. There was not much business done in the House, except passing the usual resolutions on the death of Gen. Hamer. Both branches adjourned to Monday.

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD. At a meeting of the stockholders of the South Shore Railroad, held recently at Walcott's Hotel, Weymouth Landing, the following gentlemen were chosen Directors, viz: Caleb Stetson and Elliot N. White of Braintree, John W. Loud of Weymouth, Alfred Hersey of Hingham, James C. Doane of Cohasset, and George T. Bigelow of Boston; Caleb Stetson was chosen President. The whole of this road is under contract, and workmen have commenced on the grading and masonry from Braintree to Hingham.

SHIPWRECK. The brig Falconer, Capt. Rollerson, of Belfast, sailed from Sidney C. B. on the 8th inst. for Boston, was wrecked on Long Beach in the gale of the 17th. The captain, his wife and one child, fifteen passengers and some of the crew perished before help arrived. The brig was dismantled and driven upon the beach. The first and second mates, with most of the crew, and most of the cabin passengers, escaped.

FREE WILL BAPTISTS. This denomination, is rapidly augmenting its numbers and its influence. The thirtieth General Conference of the sect was held recently at Sutton, (Vt.) The ten thousand dollars subscription for the Educational Fund was filled up; twelve or fifteen hundred dollars were paid or pledged to be paid within a year to the Foreign Mission cause, five or six hundred dollars to Home Missions, and some three hundred to the Education cause.

NORFOLK COUNTY JAIL. There have been 115 persons, including debtors, imprisoned in the Dedham Jail during the year ending Nov. 1st. Committed for assault, 18; for intoxication, 26; for larceny, 40. Of the whole number, 77 had been added to intoxication; 71 were natives of other countries, and 31 were confined for debt. Total amount of expense of the Jail, during the year, including board of prisoners, salary of officers, etc. one thousand dollars. Number of prisoners remaining on the 1st of November 11.

Number of prisoners in the House of Correction during the year, 60. Males, 47; females, 13. Committed for intoxication, 33; for larceny, 11. Forty had been added to intoxication; 35 were foreigners, and 9 minors.

EXTRAORDINARY FECUNDITY. Several remarkable cases have been reported recently. One in Indiana, of a German family composed of a man, his wife, and thirty-two children. The children are all girls, and were produced at sixteen births. A physician of London reports a case still more remarkable—that of a lady of thirty five, who had thirty-two children at thirteen births—four twice, three three times, and the others twins. A Brooklyn paper mentions the case of a couple who were married when the wife was fourteen and the man sixteen years of age. When she was fifteen she had her first child; at seventeen she had two additional children; at eighteen three more, at twenty she had four, at twenty one three, and twenty two she had two—making fifteen children in eight years.

GEN. TAYLOR ON TEMPERANCE. A letter is published from General Taylor, addressed to Jacob Carter of Boston, in which the hero of Buena Vista says:—"I am myself virtually an observer of the rule of total abstinence, and find my health and ability to endure hardships greatly increased thereby; but though in my own person I observe this habit, yet when used in moderation I am not an opponent to the use of ardent spirits."

STATE SENATORS. It appears by the official statement, that there are no Senators elected from Norfolk County.

CATHOLIC ALMANAC FOR 1848. We have received a copy of this Catholic Annual, a work which contains a great body of statistical matter relating to the Catholic Church, and should be in the hands of every one of that faith. It contains a very interesting biography of the Right Rev. Edward Fenwick, first Bishop of Cincinnati. The work may be had of P. Donahoe, No. 1, Spring Lane, Boston.

BOSTON ALMANAC. This little work has again made its appearance, being the twelfth annual issue. Its enterprising editor, S. N. Dickinson, Esq., is uniting in his efforts to gratify the taste of a fastidious public, and this year furnishes a highly interesting and valuable feature to the work—a list of the inscriptions of Mount Auburn—a directory of the city of the dead. Of course every body will buy the work, which is for sale at Gill's Bookstore.

DEATH OF DR. COLEMAN. The Rev. Dr. Coleman died at his residence in Dorchester on Thursday morning, in the sixty-fifth year of his age and the fortieth of his ministry. His death will be lamented not only by his parishioners, but by an extensive circle of friends both in this country and in Europe. The funeral will take place on Monday, at one o'clock, from the church; and it is expected that the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Storrs of Braintree.

FROM SANTA FE. A telegraph dispatch to the Boston papers states that fourteen companies of Mexican troops are quartered at Chihuahua, who are engaged in erecting fortifications and casting cannon. Two battalions left Santa Fe for the south, intending to winter at El Paso. The troops who have gone southward are committing depredations and violence upon the people of the whole country. War parties of the Apache Indians have attacked Rio, drove off two hundred cattle, and killed three men, also destroying all the wagons.

THE BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. A little work for children, which is to be published monthly at one dollar per year, has been issued by Bradbury & Guild, No. 12 School street, Boston. If the first number is a fair specimen of what it will be, it is worthy of liberal patronage.

Hon. Dixon H. Lewis has been elected United States Senator from Alabama on the fourth ballot.

A Liverpool packet which sailed from Boston last week took out, among other Yankee nicknacks, thirteen barrels of apple sauce!

Next year will be leap year. Ladies look out.

Senator Davis of Massachusetts, it is said, is, having been more or less indisposed since his arrival at Washington. No serious result is entertained.

The number of emigrant passengers arrived at New York last week was 1,580.

In the Court of Common Pleas recently held at Plymouth, Betsey Bradford recovered a verdict of $22.50 against John B. S. Hadaway, for breach of promise marriage. The evidence is said to have shown gross unfaithfulness and insult.

A paragraph from a New Orleans paper says, that Gen. Taylor was to stop at the plantation of his old friend Manuel White on his way up the river. Some two hundred steamboats usually in harbor had determined to fire up and descend to Mr. White's plantation and escort the old Hero to the city.

The days are now of equal length, nine hours and four minutes, and the shortest in the year.

An Irish laborer was killed on the Cape Cod Branch Railroad at Middleboro', on Saturday last.

Peter York, the colored man in State Prison, for murder, came near killing another prisoner last week, by driving a file into his head.

The Indiana Legislature has adjourned in consequence of the prevalence of small pox among the members.

The South Carolina House of Delegates has passed a bill giving to the people the choice of Electors of President.

Salem is now in communication with Boston, by magnetic telegraph. The Mayors of the two cities exchanged compliments on Thursday.

Seven thousand three hundred and seventeen Mexican bounty land warrants, for 150 acres each, have been issued, and 1120 for 40 acres—in all 1,315,840 acres, of which only 3520 acres have been located. A land warrant is worth $125 at Washington, but as good as $800 in specie to the Western buyer.

The Cherokees are fast placing themselves side by side with the foremost in the ranks of civilization—they have gotten to themselves a national debt, which now amounts to about $100,000.

Horse radish is an excellent remedy for hoarseness, cough, soar throat, and all diseases of the lungs.

The Cathedral of Mexico, in addition to over $200,000 previously contributed, was compelled to give up one of its images, in order to enable Santa Anna to fortify the city. This was taken and disposed of to English bankers, for $300,000.

Upwards of five millions of acres of public lands in Wisconsin, Florida, &c., embracing every variety of soil, climate, &c. are advertised to be sold by the government in January and February.

An apprentice boy has been detected at Mount Holly, (N. J.) in the seduction of no less than four girls. The young Turk expressed his willingness to marry the whole of his victims.

The state of Maine will hereafter elect her Governor, Senators and Representatives, by a plurality vote. The amendments for the purpose of making this change in the constitution, prevailed by a majority of two hundred to four hundred in a vote of twenty-eight thousand.

A splendid monument has been erected in Mount Auburn Cemetery to the memory of Charles T. Torrey. It is of Marble, on a granite base, and stands altogether more than ten feet high.

On the 2d of August, 900,000 acres of land were ceded to the United States by the assembled tribes of the Chippewas and the Mississippis.

The revenue of China is about sixty millions sterling annually, and is paid partly in money and partly in kind.

A swarm of bees contains from ten thousand to twenty thousand in a natural state, and twenty thousand to forty thousand in a hive.

The total number of lamps in the light-house establishments of the United States is 2,976.

Secretary Walker has addressed a letter to the Committee of Ways and Means urgently asking an immediate report of the bill authorizing a new loan of seventeen millions of dollars, and it is said the committee will report this week.

Our intercourse with foreign nations costs $313,000.

Rev. J. N. Maffit has been lecturing in Cincinnati, upon the Mexican war. He justifies "not only a defensive war, but a war of conquest."

The cost of bringing to the seat of Government the votes for President and Vice President, is the round sum of eighteen thousand dollars. It might be done for five hundred dollars.

The whole number of persons in all the Jails and Houses of Correction in the State, during the year ending Nov. 1st, was 7,009. Able to read and write, 2,173; addicted to intemperance, 2,168; confined for debt, 1,000. Remaining in confinement, Nov. 1st, 730.

A Spanish American paper is about to be established in New York. It will be partly in the Spanish, and partly in the English language.

There is a Colony of twenty thousand Blacks in Canada, settled in the fertile country between Lakes Huron and Erie. They have a manual labor school, with a tract of three hundred acres attached, and seven buildings. Among the new cellular enterprises in progress is a large steam mill.

The New York and Boston Railroad Company, known as the "Air Line," was organized on the 10th inst. They intend to make a complete survey of the route the present winter.

A negro under the influence of liquor, crawled into one of the "cattle guards," on the Housatonic railroad, and while there undertook to look out to see if the cars were coming. The train happened to be close upon him, and before he could lower himself, the "cow-catcher" on the engine caught him directly in the neck and in an instant severed his head from his body.

The workmen employed in widening the street which takes in part of the Copp's Hill Burying Ground, Boston, dug up, on the 18th inst, a plain gold ring, containing the following inscription:—"A. Perkins, died March 8, 1845, aged 32 years."

The Hingham Patriot publishes a list of the vessels engaged in the mackerel fishery from that place, by which it appears that last year thirty-eight vessels were employed, and the number of barrels of Mackerel packed was 17,728 3/4. This year thirty-four vessels have been employed, and the number of barrels of Mackerel packed is 19,231 1/4—making 2,202 1/2 more than last year.

Ex-Chancellor Kent died at New York, last week, at the age of eighty-five years.

DIED.

In West Cambridge, 19th inst, Mrs. Sarah, wife of Mr. Ephraim Frost, and mother of Mr. James and Mr. John Green of this town, aged 55 years.

In this town, 16th inst, Mrs. Sarah E., wife of Mr. William H. Green, aged 18.

When friends are called to bid a last adieu to those most dear, to suffer that chain which binds two willing hearts in less than one short year after its consummation; to bid adieu to constant parental care; to sisters sustained by the same maternal hand; to bid farewell to earth with all its enchanting beauties, its flattering hopes and bright anticipations; when these can be exchanged for the pale wand of sickness, the habiliments of death, and that too with composure and resignation, then it is we can see the triumph a firm hope and confident trust in the Gospel may impart.

In a short obituary of a friend, words are incompetent to enforce upon the mind of the unacquainted, the influence of those virtues which characterized her of whom we speak. As a wife, true and confiding—exactly ready to appreciate the sympathy, attention, and many deeds of kindness which devoted friendship could bestow in conformity with every known or supposed wish;—as a daughter, gentle, dutiful and obedient to parental requirements, and as a sister, kind and affectionate.

Hearts there are who will respond to these words; hearts that indeed mourn; those who have enjoyed her society feel that one has gone whose presence made their home more happy!

That elder matron and sire in whose hearts hope had dwelt so bright, and around whom their affections clung with almost parental fondness and anxiety for her prosperity, now feel that another in whom they confided has gone.

Memories I see her even now as on her bridal Sabbath morn, with a light heart and cheerful countenance, confidently leaning upon the arm of him to whom she had pledged her preference to journey through chequered pathway of life. She was indeed young and joyous—scarcely 18 summers had tinted her brow, but sickness placed its signet there and gently drew from her those bright hopes and pleasing anticipations, and she could even bid friends be reconciled to her situation as she was happy!

Yes, Consumption done its perfect work. Nature yielded to the summons and she has passed away, beloved and lamented.

THE asperities of Disease are often enhanced by the rigorous measures undertaken by designing or ignorant persons in attempting Cures. THE DISCRIMINATING KNOWLEDGE, whereby we may know these remedies which shall perfect a cure, is of difficult acquisition. It is in fact only obtained after LABORIOUS RESEARCH by the Student of Nature, the only true scholar of medicine, and the experience of the Sages of the Native Tribes are the true guides in directing those researches. If it were not for the invaluable gifts of the

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847. 1f

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity.

The teeth are incurruptable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth with my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE MOURNING WIFE.

TUNE—From a Rain then art Singing,
On the hearthstone she sits weeping,
Poor helpless mourning wife;
O'er her pale cheeks are creeping,
Tears that drain the fount of life.
Why sits she lonely in her tears,
With dread forebodings rife?
Why looks she struggling with her tears?
Poor hapless mourning wife—
Poor hapless mourning wife.

Her fair hopes have all departed,
Since he who was her pride,
Has made her broken hearted—
She is now the drunkard's bride.
To her the future drear and dim
Admits no hope in life;
Her joys were centred all in him,
Poor hapless mourning wife—
Poor hapless mourning wife.

Stay, oh man, to rain winging,
Hear Mercy's voice in time;
Another's to thee clinging,
Must she perish by thy crime?
Repent the wretched thing thou art
For her once dear as life;
Bring back her husband to her heart,
Poor hapless mourning wife—
Poor hapless mourning wife.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

WINTER.

"You're welcome, Old Winter!" the rich man cries,
With a bosom of proud content,
As round his carpeted halls his eyes
With a meaning glance are sent;
For the fires burn bright, and the casements tall
Are curtained with drapery rare—
The winds may howl and the snow may fall,
But what doth the rich man care?

"You're welcome, Old Winter!" the gay lad cries,
As he plunges into the snow,
Or o'er the ice bound streamlet flies,
Like a shaft from the twanging bow;
For garments warm are about his form,
And his sport is rich and rare!
Old Winter may bluster, and rave, and storm,
But what doth the urchin care?

"Oh! Winter is dreary!" the poor man cries,
As he wends along the street,
While the snow in his frost-nipp'd visage flies
And benumbs his unshod feet.
"Oh Winter is dreary!" But there's none to hear
The plea of the poor and old;
Straight on goes the crowd with unlistening ear—
Who cares if the beggar is cold?

"Alas, it is Winter! And wo is me!"
The widow exclaims, and clasps
The shivering orphans around her knee,
In a wild and phrenzied grasp;
Through the frosty pane on the life-thronged way
A laughing crowd she sees,
And merrily jingle the sleigh bells gay,
While the widow and orphans freeze!

Ay! Winter is dreary! O, ye rich, ne'er smile
At my simple and homely Muse,
Nor the tale of the poor man's woes revile,
Nor a helping hand refuse;
For Heaven has blest you with stores of gold,
And how should you thank appear,
But by shielding the poor from hunger and cold,
And making their lives less drear!

BE KIND TO EACH OTHER.

Be kind to each other, through weal and through woe,
For there's many a sorrow for hearts here below;
The storms of this life beat around us in vain,
If we're kind to each other in pleasure and pain.

Be kind to each other when life is all light,
When music and mirth please the ear of the night;
When pleasure spreads roses in grandeur's gay ball,
Be kind to each other and fear not at all.

Be kind to each other in sorrow and grief,
Tissymathy only can give thee relief;
Dividing our sorrow but lessens our pain,
Be kind to each other—affliction is vain.

Be kind to each other when sickness has come,
Let nothing but smiles ever visit your home;
Encourage and succor, and soothe the distress'd,
Be kind to each other, and still thou art bless'd.

Be kind to each other through life to its close,
And when thou art freed from its wishes and woes,
When freed from life's tears, from its sorrow and sighs,
Be kind to each other, and meet in the skies.

ANECDOTES.

An Irishman said that he thought it was very mean of Mr. Trist to be so long trying to treat with the rascally Mexicans, when he could get a decent Irishman to take or stand threat just for axing.

A maiden lady, not remarkable for either youth, beauty or good temper, asked the advice of a neighbor as how she should get rid of a troublesome suitor. "Oh marry him," was the advice. "No, I had rather see him hanged first." "No, madam, marry him, as I said to you, and I'll assure you it will not be long before he hangs himself."

A newly arrived Hibernian was asked at dinner, whether he would take some of the apple pie. "Is it houlsum?" "To be sure it is," was the reply. "What makes you ask such a question?" "Because," said the new comer, "I once had an uncle that was killed with the apple-pie, and sure I thought it might be something of that sort."

A musician had his name painted on his door thus—G. Sharp. A wag of a painter, early one morning, added the following significant words—"Is A flat."

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,

50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG Depot in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable. The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 20,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Flatulency, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all Chronic complaints the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box. The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA

COMPOUND. Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE

GENTLEMAN. Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVES' BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at 50 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes. The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.
